Again we see some of our preachers sit around in, must I say their laziness, and never know their members, and some of the young men will get up on all their studies in the M. P. denomination and let the work suffer while they are preparing themselves for some other church, and just so soon as they get on their feet and everything don't measure up to them as they want it to they jump out into a place, I understand, for more money, not souls. What would they do were it not they could join some other denomination? I answer they would say, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? not my will but thine be done. Many of us are like the story about the man that sold his beautiful home and went away into a far country to find diamonds and when all of his means had been spent and his good wife and family died for want he then decided to go back to his old home place and just see how he would feel and how things looked and to his great surprise he there found the same beautiful home and on the mantel was a most beautiful diamond. He asked where it came from; he was told it was found near his house at the brook where his own cattle once had their drinking place. Oh, he said, I have spent all for diamonds when they were at my own home. So it is we lose the most precious things by not seeking wisdom from above. She is more precious than rubies and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared to her. I am not a preacher that has and can fill the pulpit, but we, as I see it, are preachers and we must all preach as it were, the gospel of Christ. Every one that names the name of Jesus Christ, should. And I, feeling as small and little and insignificant as I am, must visit the parents of my S. S. class as much as I can. And I would, I know, if I were called out to preach the gospel as the preacher is, visit the people. It will help any preacher in his sermons; he sees and finds out things that surely will help him, and again, I say, the preacher must go into the homes. I once heard a great preacher say that for the preacher to know his people they must visit him; he said, How else could he know them? Some one answered this—he could know them by going to their homes. I hear some say, what are you that you can feel like telling any preachers how to do? O, I can only answer, I am only just one little tiny speck of humanity and can say the more I visit the people and the more I do for the cause of Christ the smaller I feel, and could I hold the wealth of the world in my hand it would only make me feel much smaller, for what is man that thou art mindful of him? He is when saved greatly humbled when he is even trusted with a little of this world's goods because his affections are set on things above. He is looking up, not down, does not see, as it were, how many things are in his possession. Now is this not wonderful? But just look on the other hand and see how selfish and worldly trusting in this world's goods makes one. But we are all one in Christ Jesus since we are saved, rich or poor; we do not know we have anything save Jesus. Then I say this is a wonderful salvation, and who would not go and preach this gospel, deny all and go up and down telling it to all and in all places—in the pulpit, homes and by the wayside. It should be all our thought. We should all of us cry aloud and spare not.

Then again, I hear some preacher say, I cannot do much visiting because I am and have always been rather reserved. That may be true, but when we are naturally that way should we not cultivate a different spirit and will we not, when truly saved by his Spirit, overcome our ways? I think we should and if we cultivate a spirit of mingling with humanity we will be surprised how soon we are no longer reserved.

Then we say, how can the church be saved? By all going to work, first begin with the preacher, then the members will catch the spirit of work.

I wonder how a preacher expects all his salary when he goes away in debt to his flock, failed so many times to visit the sick, and widows in their afflictions. Other people are docked if they do not come up to the work as hired. So will God suffer the people to dock the preacher's work or rather will he do it himself because of his not doing the work he could and should have done. The man that enters the ministry and preaches the word and makes full proof of his ministry is one of the busiest men in the world and he is not looking to the people to minister unto him in the way some may be looking, but can say—"A tent or a cottage,why should I care? They are building a mansion for me over there!" Christ said he came not to be ministered unto, but to minister; not to call the righteous but sinners; but some preachers have so acted that they are not calling sinners but are actually causing good people to wonder whether to stay in the church or come out of it. How can a preacher expect to help keep his flock saved when he seems to want to be carried to heaven on flowery beds of ease? I want to say unless we change and get down off the high perch we are on and stop serving God in a form, we can never save the church. We have lost the power and can never get it again until we come down and sit at the feet of Jesus, low down at His feet is the power. But will we do this? We are not doing it and we will never have the forward movement in any other way; and it seems to me of all disgusting things to our blessed Master the most disgusting is to see a church claiming Christ with their lips while their hearts are far from Him. Our God is a jealous God and says, Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Then let us all give our lives to our Master in an acceptable way that this will be the most forward movement year of any in the Master's Vineyard.

I know I am getting rather lengthy, but will say in conclusion that to my mind the best thing for every preacher of every denomination would be to save his church or churches. What good is it to get a dead church to pay all of the assessments and yet be lost? What counts is live people in a church. Please pardon me for this, but I want to say never have I had to be exhorted on giving since being born into the royal family. I have been able to say, "Take my silver and my gold," if I had any and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee.

Once in Dwight L. Moody's life in the early part of his ministry, he thought he was getting along all right and had the power sufficient for his work; but there were two good women that attended his meetings and were so divinely led on one occasion that after service they went to that great man and told him he needed more power for his work; but he didn't think so, but had an excellent spirit and was willing to be helped in any way so that he might be all that God intended he should be, and never became offended at these good saints, but said, "Lord, give me more power if I need it." And so the great Spirit of God was poured out upon that great man until he said, Lord, stay thy hand. From that time on, what a mighty power for good was that man, Dwight L. Moody. How many preachers need this experience, for what we need is power with God; then it is that we can and will have it with man. So I think the forward movement means much; and first, let the preachers get it and then call on the churches for the members that are not saved to come to the mourners' bench and get right with God and then we can show to the world without telling it that we belong to the forward movement society. Let's get the church saved and we will be able to go forward. Souls are what we want for our hire. The great need as I see it at present is to get the church saved. We as a church are not saved but lost, lost, and just so long as we let people pay and know they are dead in trespasses and sins just so long will we be found taking up two much time on the subject of giving; but get them saved and you preachers will be among the busiest men in all the world. You will not even feel, if you have been doing it, that you can stop praying long enough to smoke your cigar or chew your tobacco while the souls of men are dying. Let us all get right with God and go forward. Yes, let's go forward, for the real business of the church is to lead the way to the divine Healer who alone knows the secret of giving men power to see the kingdom of God. Some time ago a meeting of the great French and British leaders was held in Paris; a long and weighty discussion occurred as to the number of men and billions of money still necessary for the cause of the allies. M. Clemenceau, a French statesman, said in answer to the question as to what was most needed, Gentlemen, what France needs most is forty million Christians. And what does this sorrowing, discordant, overstrained world need more than it needs more Christians? It was Henry Drummond who carried the thought to this point when he said, What this world needs is not so much more Christians but a better brand of them. The light of the world, One who came not in regal splendor drest, the haughty diadem, the Tyrian rest, not armed in flame, all glorious from afar, of hosts the Captain, and the Lord of war, but as the the meek and lowly One whose cry has echoed down the ages, Come unto me and you shall not walk in darkness. More Christians, a better brand of them is the demand of the day. "Ye are the light of the world." Martha Parsons.

THE PRIZE PUZZLE.

My explanation is that the two grandmothers had each been married and had a son each. These sons each then married the other's mother, and by her had a daughter each. T. T. Stafford.

Bro. Stafford was the first to send us a solution of this puzzle. Correct solutions have been received from W. W. Hunter, Rev. B. M. Williams, and Katie Davenport; also Miss Ruby Hughes and a brother who withholds his name.

The Spiritual Cost.

The pangs of conscience are a heavy price to pay for sin. The inward bias to evil is the unhappy cause of many a step in the wrong way. The association and disquiet of sin-provoking thoughts are burdensome to the last degree. A distaste for those associations, influences, and aids that make for the highest well-being is another affliction that clings to the wrong-doer. And the insidious, convincing, and fatal appeal of corrupt associates is constantly making large additions to the load of sin.

The Eternal Cost.

The initial cost of sin in this world is in many instances extended, enlarged, and made permanent in the life to come. This is a cost of deprivation,—a loss of friends, pleasure, and opportunity. It is a cost in pangs of remorse,—an everlasting regret over a misspent life. It is a cost in terrible suffering: "I am tormented in this flame." It is a cost in the constant dread of an ever-increasing harvest of the former life's sowing in sin. It is a cost in utter despair,—not one star of hope to brighten the night of eternity.—The Word of Life.

IMPORTANCE OF TRAINING THE CHILDREN IN MISSION WORK.

By Miss Esther Ross.

(Read at North Carolina Branch Meeting)

After Christ's resurrection he still had many things to say to His disciples, words of comfort, of counsel, and of cheer. One message he brought to Peter who greatly needed both comfort and counsel. Peter had sinned, but he had repented, and in his sorrow he longed to do something to show his love for His Master. The loving Saviour, who saw what was in Peter's heart, came to him with a question and a message: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" "Feed my lambs." He does not ask him now to express in words his penitence, his sorrow, his purpose for the future; only this one question is necessary, "Lovest thou me?" If Peter's heart is really full of love to Christ, then he may work for Christ.

If we can answer with Peter, "Thou knowest that I love thee," then to us also will come a message from the Master. If we love Him we may work for Him, for love is the only condition of service. He will tell us what we may do, and He will give us strength and wisdom to do it. To some of us today, and perhaps to some who are not expecting comes the message that came to Peter: "Feed my lambs." Why shall we feed the children with the bread of life? And why shall we lead them into the love of Christ, and train them for active service for Christ and the Church? First, I say, for the Master's sake; second, for the child's sake; third, for the sake of the church; and, fourth, for the sake of the world.

For the Master's sake. At twelve years of age Jesus was found in the temple among teachers, asking and answering questions. Early in life he was busied with the work of His Father in heaven. His mind was fixed on the things of the Kingdom. In Him we have the ideal life, what He did surely we want the children of today to do. And again the precious Book contains so many passages showing that His heart yearns for the fresh joyous love and confiding trust of the child heart.

For the child's sake. Shall not the child have the joy of Christian life? And certainy this should be the first object of our missioinary societies—to get the children converted. And when their little hearts are filled to overflowing with true love for Christ they only need a guiding hand to direct their energies. No other period is more hopeful for the life of faith and purity. It is the age of decision, the seedtime of life, the background of manhood, the foundation of character. How true the sayings: "God begins His work in children," "A child won for Christ means an adult won."

For the sake of the church. A church that neglects the care of its youth loses much of its vital force. We have only to look around us to realize that the best workers in all churches today are, as a rule, those who were led to Christ in early life. Are they not the ones whose training in Christian usefulness began in early childhood? Then I say the church needs its children trained along missionary lines that we may be a missionary church in the future.

For the sake of the world. The world needs the child Christian. It needs to be shown the child's simple faith, its artless testimony, its care-free love.

We need to cultivate in the boys and girls a lively interest in missions, to teach them the relation of each individual to the word-wide interests of the kingdom. Nine times out of ten if a boy or girl reaches maturity without becoming interested in missions, you cannot create such an interest in him or her.

It's very simple in childhood. To the child the African is not a "heathen," he is just a man; and stories of childlife in Africa, stories of the animals, the birds, the flowers, and the customs of that far-away land are eagerly received. There are many ways of bringing these things to the children. In the first place they need their own missionary organization, and should hold regular monthly meetings as the older people do. As has been said the first object should be to get the children to be Christians and the second object should be to get them to be working Christians. To reach this point the superintendent needs to outline some definite tasks. Help the children to do the things they are interested in and suggest new interest. Don't turn any sort of energy down. Direct it. Control it. Guide it. The children will gain confidence in you and come to you for advice. Your love will tell on them and "ye shall bear much fruit and your fruit shall remain."

THE FOLLY OF COMPROMISE.

During the war of the American revolution, a man who wished to curry favor with both sides was approached by a party of Whigs and asked whom he was for. Thinking they were a company of Tories he replied: "I am for the king; God save the king." Whereupon they swung him to a limb of a nearby tree, and, after letting him down, told him that this was a warning for him to get on the right side. Afterwards he was overtaken by a troop of Tories, to whom he called out lustily: "I am for liberty, hurrah for General Washington." Immediately he was swung up to the nearest limb and left to die. But a neighbor passing by released him before life was extinct. The next time a party of troopers met him and inquired which side he was on, he answered, "I am on the devil's side." Of course he was let alone; for the devil's crowd get along with the least friction from the people of the world.

This story points a moral that should conscientiously be borne in mind. To achieve any thing worth while one must face more or less opposition and difficulty. The strength, and beauty and worth of character are not attained along the lines of least resistance. Avoidance of effort in behalf of a good cause develops that flabbiness of moral muscle that makes one an easy victim when the hour of testing comes. To substitute compromising policies for principles that demand self-sacrifice is to invite a large harvest of confusion, disappointment and shame. To take and maintain a fearless stand for the right, even at a great cost, will yield large dividends in character, influence, the respect of mankind, and th homage of posterity. The great Leader, Who endured the cross in defense of the right, has said: "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."

DIED.

On April 26, 1917, at his home three miles east of Summerveld, at early dawn while the little birds all about him were warbling forth their sweet spring songs, the soul of our dear father, John Floyd Highfill, was borne away upon the gentle zephyrs, as it were, away from the melodious songs of the birds, away from things terrestrial to a city celestial where angels sing praises to God He was a kind father, gentle as a mother, always ready to give a hearty hand-shake. He was a member of Center M. E. Church, South. He was converted at Flat Rock M. P. Church in his boyhood days years ago. He was about 70 years of age He served as a private soldier in the Confederate army. He was a Mason and his burial was conducted by the Masonic fraternity. He was twice married. He was first married to Miss Delana F. Wilson; to this union were born four daughters and one son: Mrs. R. L. Cooper, of Staley, N C., Mrs. G. F. Snider, of Rock Hill, S. C, Mr. J. F. Highfill, of Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. A. Q. Jones, of Greensboro, N. C. One daughter died in infancy. His second marriage was to Miss Sarah McMichael; to this union were born two sons and one daughter; Jesse Highfill. of Summerfield, N. C., Arthur L. Highfill. also of Summerfield; the daughter died in infancy. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss.

Dear Father,
A shining star you have been to us,
A shining star to seven;
And according to first chapter, book of James
You are a shining star in heaven.

Dear father,
We know you did visit the fatherless
And the widows in their affliction:
You kept yourself unspotted from the world,
You had the pure and undefiled religion.

Dear father,
We know from the life you lived so long,
By the way you instructed your seven,
Your hopes were so bright, your courage so strong,
That you have gained a home in heaven.

Dear father,
We know one day we all must go,
One by one of the seven,
We shall follow your instructions the best we can,
Then we'll all meet again in heaven.

A CLOGGED CHANNEL.

Out in Colorado they tell of a little town nestled down at the foot of some hills—a sleepy-hollow village. You remember the rainfall is very slight out there and they depend much upon irrigation, but some enterprising citizens ran a pipe up the hill to a lake of sweet water. As a result the town enjoys a bountiful supply of water the year around without being dependent upon the doubtful rain. And the population increased and the place had quite a western boom.

One morning the housewives turned the water spigots and no water came. There was some sputtering. There is apt to be noise when there is nothing else. The men climbed the hill. There was the lake full as ever. They examined around the pipe as well as possible, but could find no break. Try as they might they could find no cause for the stoppage. And as the days grew into weeks, people commenced moving away again. The grass grew in the street, and the prosperous town was going back to its old sleepy condition when one day one of the town officials received a note. It was poorly written with bad spelling and grammar, but he never cared less about writing and grammar than then. It said, in effect: "If you'll jes pull the plug out of the pipe eight inches from the top you'll get all the water you want." Up they started for the top of the hill and, examining the pipe, found the plug that some vicious tramp had inserted. Not a very big plug—just big enough to fill the pipe. It is surprising how large a reservoir can be held back by how small a plug. Out came the plug; down came the water freely; by and by, back came prosperity again.

Why is there such a lack of power in our lives? The reservoir up yonder is full to overflowing, with clear, sweet, life-giving water. And here all around us the earth is so dry, so thirsty, cracked open—huge cracks, like dumb mouths, asking mutely for what we should give. And the connecting pipes between the reservoir above and the parched plain below are there. Why, then, do not the refreshing waters come rushing down? The answer is very plain. You know why. There is a plug in the pipe. Something in us is clogging up the channel and nothing can get through. How shall we have power, abundant, life-giving, sweetening our own lives, and changing those we touch? The answer is easy for me to give—it will be much harder for all of us to do—pull out the plug. Get out the thing you know is hindering.—S. D. Gordon's "Quiet Talks on Power."

THE BILLY SUNDAY OF JAPAN.

They call him the Billy Sunday of Japan, but his name is Leimatsu Kimura. Just now his big tent, fronted and flanked by various banners and streamers, is pitched near the Japanese Houses of Parliament in Tokio. He is conducting meetings there which are a part of an evangelistic campaign under way in various parts of Japan. At sixteen, turned out of the house of his father, a wine-seller, he earned his living as a newsboy. Converted at that time, he made his way to America and found Dwight L. Moody preaching in Southern California. Finding the building crowded, he told the big policeman at the door, "I've come 5,000 miles to hear Mr. Moody, and you must let me in." The bluecoat did. Mr. Moody let him into the school at Chicago, though he had only thirty-five cents in his pocket when he applied. After two years of study at Mr. Moody's school, he went back to Japan and took a broken-down church with thirty-five members and he ministered so effectually that he left it with 300. He resigned to take up general evangelistic work. In April, 1914, he came to America to meet Billy Sunday and study his work. He spent some time at the latter's meetings in Denver and Des Moines. At Honolulu he held an evangelistic campaign among the Japanese and it is estimated that 1,000 converts were made.

Kimura is about forty years old, stockily built, with clear-cut, rather handsome features. He has an impassioned voice and crouches, jumps and gesticulates almost as frantically as his American prototype. He uses a blackboard, and when his voice fails from overwork, picks up a megaphone. He is talking to immense crowds, and has engagements ahead for a year and a half. One brother, Seishiro Iwamura, is studying for the ministry; another brother, and his father and mother have been converted to Christianity.—Congregationalist.

In his boyhood Chauncey M. Depew, like most other boys, was fond of dogs. One of his favorite stories has to do with a spotted one which he once bought of a local dog dealer. "The next morning," as he tells the story, "it was raining and I took the dog out in the woods but the rain was too much for him. It washed the spots off. I trotted the dog back to the dealer. 'Look at the animal,' I said. 'The spots have all washed off.'

"'Great guns, boy!' the man replied. 'there was an umbrella went with that dog. Didn't you get the umbrella?"

OUR REIDSVILLE CHURCH'S GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

The editor spent last Sunday in Reidsville, Bro. Gerringer being away helping in institute work. He met with our people in Sunday school and in the morning and night preaching services. The attendance was a little off, he was told, partly due to measles, perhaps partly due to the rain, and very likely partly due to the pastor's being away. But those present were evidently interested, the Sunday school especially giving evidence of life.

We wondered whether our people in Reidsville have yet come to realize fully their great opportunity and responsibility. It usually takes people of a new church some time to do this, and it is no exception to the rule if our Reidsville people have not yet come to see what they can do and feel under obligation to do it.

They have begun well in choosing a good location for their church. It is on a pleasant and prominent street, near the leading churches of the town, and cannot be discounted because of its position. Then, thanks especially to the interest of the late Bro. Geo. S. Kernodle, they have a splendid building, and have room in the rear or in the basement to add Sunday-school rooms, whch they will probably need ere long.

Then they have the advantage of having in the as yet small membership some of the most influential people in town.

With these assets, they are in a position to do something, if the situation offers anything to do. Does it?

That is where the great opportunity lies. There are six thousand people in town and we were told that not one in ten is a church attendant. What a field! And what a force Bro. Gerringer may find in his people if they will all unite determinedly with him and present a solid front. We hope they will see what can be done to increase attendance at every service, and to make the church a great force for righteousness.

—While in Reidsville, Sunday we enjoyed entertainment in the home of Bro. J. A. Dixon, a brother of Rev. A. G. Dixon, who is engaged in the clothing business. He took me to the parsonage ground and showed me Bro. Gerringer's flourishing garden. It showed evidence of thorough work which was to us symbolical of Bro. Gerringer's work in and for the church. Bro. Dixon's father, Bro. J. F. Dixon, lives with him. We wonder whether he ought not to have been a preacher. But he is lending his influence to the new church in Reidsville and is helping greatly. He is a veteran of the Civil War, and had just returned from the reunion at Washington. It is entertaining to hear one talk who has had so long and varied an experience in war and in peace. He spent six months in a federal prison, was in 23 battles, and bears in his body marks of a bullet wound and suffers daily from the effects of it in the form of rheumatism. Still he is cultivating twelve acres in corn notwithstanding he is considerably beyond his three-score and ten years. A weak man might have succumbed years ago to all he has passed through. May his last days be his best and brightest!

—Our new church at Reidsville is beautifully lighted with a great number of electric bulbs nicely distributed and softly shaded. It is a pleasant auditorium for night service. It ought to be filled and we trust will be sometime through the efforts of the congregation. Some congregations make the great mistake of expecting the pastor to fill the pews. It is his place to fill the pulpit. It is the people's place to fill the seats by bringing others in and showing the spirit of cordial fellowship to those who come.

—Our Reidsville people are fortunate in having the help of Prof. A. H. Allen, of the city schools, a member of our church in Alamance county.

—A man of advanced age recently told us of his relation to Sunday school. In his early boyhood days he dreaded going to Sunday school and shrank from going. But his father insisted that he should go, and out of respect for his father's authority he went, and soon learned to love to go so well that he has kept it up ever since. There is a lesson in that for other parents. Dr. Vincent used to say that parents never do wrong by requiring their children to do right.

CALL AGAIN! CALL AGAIN!

I have a friend who calls on me every now and then, and always gives me a new lease on life. He makes me think more of myself; makes me more ambitious, more determined to see my opportunities and to make the most of them. His calls are like the coming of spring after a long, cold winter, which awakens the sleeping buds and calls out the flowers. The sunshine of his cheerful mind, the alchemy of his optimism, awakens me to renewed effort and encourages me to outdo myself. I am never too busy to see him, and I always urge him to stay, because his presence makes me a larger man, makes life seem more worth while than ever. He helps me to get a new grip upon myself. He arouses me, so that I feel equal to any task when he leaves.—The Christian Herald.

THE CHURCH IN WAR TIME.

(Extracts from sermon preached by President H. L. Elderdice at the dedication of the Thomasville Methodist Protestant Church, June 3, 1917.)

Text: 1 Cor. 14: 8: "For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound who shall prepare himself unto the battle?"

The Corinthian Church was in confusion over the Gift of Tongues. Certain members in religious rhapsody gave utterance to words incoherent. This spiritual ecstacy was intelligible to God but bewildering to the audience. Paul took these would-be teachers to task, telling them that though he could excel them all in this kind of vocal exercise, yet he preferred to talk in the language of the people. He likened their mutterings to the sound of a trumpet so indistinct that the waiting soldiers did not recognize it as their call to arms, and therefore when the hour came to fight were unprepared. This figure of speech suggests my theme: Trumpets, or the Church in War Time.

In Biblical times the trumpet was a religious instrument used in the celebration of feasts, the coronation of kings, the laying of the foundations of the temple, and the calling of the armies of Israel to their fields of battle. "Emblematic of the voice of God", it was first blown by the priest —His official spokesman; later, by his successor, the prophet, who issued declarations of war against home rebels and foreign foes. The successor of the prophet is the Christian minister, and he speaks through the Christian Church. She is the final mouthpiece of the God of battles, commissioned to call the soldiers of the Cross to fight all the hosts of hell; and therefore when she calls it should be with no "uncertain sound." In the interpretation of the Bible—her Manual of War—she dare not raise an interrogation point nor change a single syllable in her marching orders, and in meeting the issues of the day she should have a message with a ring as clear as an evening bell. If her voice be "uncertain" her soldiers will not know whether she is calling a halt, beating a retreat, or commanding a charge. Therefore she should give clear calls to the three great battles of our day.

First: The Battle of Right against Might.

The senior class of a certain theological seminary informed me that "American theological students were now finding it necessary to reaffirm or reinterpret Christianity in terms of international relationship," and that therefore they would have me answer this question:—"Are War and Christianity Inconsistent?" My reply is: it depends upon the kind of war. If for selfish conquest, the spoils of battle, or the acquisition of territory, it is; but if in defense of life and liberty, peace and justice, and the God-given rights of helpless humanity, it is not. When a nation teaches that "weak nations have no right to existence and must be absorbed by powerful nations," that "there never have been and never will be universal rights of men," and "that might is the source of right," it repudiates both the spirit and the letter of Christianity. And when that nation proceeds to practice what it preaches by ruthless ruin of unoffending nations—plundering their homes, devastating their fields, demolishing their churches, butchering their boys, enslaving their girls, violating the treaties of men and the commands of Christ, it is high time for all Christian civilization to unite to check the insane criminal. Of course the statesman must first play his part with every role of diplomacy and every possible treaty of peace, and then the church must do her part with prayer and plea; but if both fail, then the soldier must draw his sword. A young officer of the State Guard recently said to me: "You are a preacher: why do you not preach against the war?" I replied that I not only preached and prayed against it but when all peaceful methods had failed I was now willing to war against war, for war must be made impossible.

The present war has raised many questions of Biblical interpretation and the saints are at sea. Right or wrong, I have reversed some views and adopted some new views and present them here with the hope that they may at least inspire some bewildered souls to fight through the darkness to the light.

Does not the Bible Demand Peace?

Yes, but it comes after, not before, battle. During the military period of The Old Testament the policy of God's Chosen People was not "Peace at any price," but it was "Righteousness at any cost." Praying and fighting was the order of the campaign. Gideon reared an altar in Ophrah and inscribed thereon: "God send peace" and then he saw to it that peace came "by the sword of the Lord and of Gideon."

How about the New Testament?

Does the gospel of love sanction war? If it is a just war, yes. If it failed to sanction such it could not be a gospel of love; for, in defense of its own, love always fights to the end. Witness the sacrificial death of many a father and mother in saving their helpless children. Love always bids us save at any cost that which is worth saving. It has been well said that "Michael and his angels fought the devil and his host and saved heaven, and surely heaven is worth fighting for, and worth saving."

Did not Jesus Teach: Resist not Evil?

Yes, but he was dealing with private revenge for personal injury, not with lawful government protecting its peaceful citizens. He himself used physical force. He himself used the scourge as a symbol of Divine Wrath on the money changers in the temple.

Did not Jesus say: "Whosoever smiteth thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also?" Yes, but this kind of submission does not mean abject surrender to "a human brute."

Dr. Gordon tells us of a pious Scotchman who was approached by a bully with these words: "When a person smites you on one cheek, as I do now, your religion tells you to turn to him the other also." The other cheek was turned and smitten. "How do you like your religion now?" asked the bully.

The Scot answered: "You have got, so far, only one half of my religion; here is the other half. "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you again," and with that he struck his antagonist a solar plexus blow that put him into a religious ecstasy."

The teaching of Jesus to feudists living in anarchy is not to be interpreted as law for civilized government. Time, place, and occasion determined many of his utterances. At one time He declares:—"Peace I give unto you" and at another time He declares: "I came not to send peace, but a sword": in one place He bids His poor disciples "take no thought for the morrow" and in another place He bids them be so business-like in need that they sell a cloak and buy a sword.

These and other apparent contradictions are reconciled when we discover that he "is giving counsel, not in universal propositions, but with reference to the occasion."

uBt how abut the sword? One of the most popular quotations of the Pacifist is: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." This implies that there must be a sword to punish those who use the sword, therefore the sword in its proper use is commended. Luther gives a clear interpretation when he says: "They take the sword who take it without due authority."

And now you ask: "Was not Jesus a pacifist?" If by pacifist you mean one who believes in a coming day when men "shall beat their swords into plowshares," yes; if you mean one who holds that "the kingdom of God cometh without observation," yes; but war may be means to this end. If, however, by pacifist you mean one who folds his hands and seals his lips when his civilized Christian state is the innocent victim of rape, robbery, murder and anarchy, then Jesus was not a pacifist.

When he bade His followers "render unto Cesar the things that are Cesar's, He recognized the duties of citizenship. One such duty is loyalty to the flag. When it is in danger every citizen must play his part to defend it, else no longer claim its protection when he is in danger. If a true patriot he will sing with Whittier:

"I know the word and countersign;
Wherever Freedom's vanguard goes,
I know the place that should be mine."

But when those theological students asked: "Are War and Christianity inconsistent?" they had in mind, no doubt, not only this abstract question, but also this concrete question: Ought the United States to be at war? Long ago Jefferson expressed the American creed: "We are alarmed with the apprehensions of war, and sincerely anxious that it may be avoided; but not at the expense of our honor." "It is an eternal truth that acquiescence under insult is not the way to escape war." The Daughters of the American Revolution, a few days ago, in Congress assembled, re-echoed that ancient creed of our fathers: "Non-resistance to wrong spells moral and mental decadence." Nine patriotic and cultured women—presidents of leading American colleges—have just proclaimed: "Although we believe that the settlement of international difficulties by war is fundamentally wrong, we recognize that in a world crisis such as this, it may become our highest duty to defend by force the principles upon which Christian civilization is founded." One of the sanest religious editors of our day has voiced the sentiments of even the most peaceful Christians: "The duty of the hour is for the Christian people of America to put their persons, their property, and all that is in them of physical, intellectual, moral, and spiritual power behind their government. If we are going to have any government at all—we must accord to it due respect at such a time as this. We cannot, so long as strength of hand and brain remains, allow this country of ours to be put at the mercy of a desperate and cruel government for unnumbered years to come. The United States has meant too much to the whole world these one hundred and forty years. It has stood too conspicuously for freedom, democracy, and opportunity, purchased at a high price by freemen of earlier generations, to permit us now to see its ideals and institutions trampled in the dust." And the Bishop of Liverpool, England, proclaimed in his sermon in celebration of "America Day:" "We thank God America has taken her place in the great battle line for self-government and for international independence, which is man's rightful inheritance. The significance of this alliance of the whole English-speaking race is that it means the triumph of freedom over tyranny and of the spiritual over the material."

Whether all diplomatic resources were exhausted before President Wilson declared that a state of war existed between the United States and Germany, is no longer a question for debate. We are in this war and we must be loyal to our government or else traitors. Therefore we would do well to sing the Battle Hymn of the Republic:

"He has sounded forth the trumpet
That shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men
Before His Judgment Seat. ..
Oh! be swift, my soul, to answer Him!
Be jubilant, my feet!"
"In the beauty of the lilies
Christ was born across the sea
With a glory in His bosom
That transfigures you and me.
As He died to make men holy,
Let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on."

Second: The Battle of Faith against Doubt

The second battle to which the church must call with no "uncertain sound" is the battle of faith against doubt. This world-war has shaken the religious creeds of the devout of every clime and color. The startled eyes of humanity have been riveted for nearly three years upon the falling pillars of ancient thrones and the collapse of civilization in the most cultured parts of the globe; and the pathetic voices of humanity in Mohammedan Mosque, Jewish Synagogue, and Christian Church turn from their Glorias to their Litanies. The British soldier went to the front singing "Tipperary," but he now seeks a song of religious solace, or in doubt is dumb. The question of every statesman in every land is: What next? and the cry of every worshiper is: "How long, O Lord, how long?"

It is not strange that faith is failing. When all belligerents go into battle invoking the same God to bless their butchery of their fellows; when Protestant England and Catholic France ally themselves with Pagan Japan; when Protestant Germany and Catholic Austria join hands with Mohammedan Turkey; and when at last peace-loving America leads her brave boys to the altar of Moloch, no wonder that devout believers are tempted to lose faith in the boasted brotherhood of man. And when brave little Belgium bleeds to death under the iron heel of a military monster; when fair France is no longer fair but her beautiful cathedrals battered into ruins, her fertile fields laid waste, her men falling in the trenches like autumn leaves, and her women despoiled and dishonored; when Germany, the cradle of scholars, the home of the scientific expert, and the throne of the musician, is driving her beardless boys like cattle to the slaughter; and when the United States turns from her altar of prayer to her sword, it is no wonder that even the saints are tempted to lose faith in the Fatherhood of God and continually cry: "Where is the Lord God of Elijah?"

Uncertainty as to what a day may bring forth has poisoned every channel of thought, broken down the floodgates of every emotion, and revolutionized every form of activity. In the architectural world vast building enterprises are being abandoned or indefinitely postponed; in the business world schedules for buying and selling defy standardization and the motto of the market is: "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost;" in the educational world military training has become the most popular part of the curriculum and some colleges do not know that they can muster enough students for re-opening next September; and in the religious world there is unrest, doubt and fear; some see the Battle of Armageddon about to end earthly existence, others identify patriotism with piety, and others like Mr. Britling see God struggling on the battle fields—"The Captain of the World Republic fighting His way to empire." Never before was there so great a need of the Church for a clarion call to every doubting Thomas to "fight the good fight of faith."

When men doubt the goodness of God because He does not stop this colossal crime of all the ages, the Church must sing with Tennyson:

"Oh, yet we trust that somehow good will be the final goal of ill," and she must continue to preach with Paul: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God." When they doubt that a higher civilization will rise out of the political chaos of Europe, she must echo the truth of her Master: "No man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles. But new wine must be put into new bottles." The crack of rifles, the whistle of bullets, the roar of cannon, and the din of battle are the new wine of democracy bursting the old bottles of autocracy, and soon the United States of Europe will join the United States of America to form the Universal Republic—"The Federation of the World, the Parliament of Man." If men doubt the permanency of such a world-wide government, she must point to the formation of a League to Enforce Peace, and proclaim the coming day when nations will not "learn war any more." And if men fear the fate of our flag the Church must calm their fears with the words: "What time I am afraid I will trust," and with the historical fact that our flag has never been lowered before a foe, for it has never been waved in any but a just war.

"To what new fates, my country, far
And unforeseen of foe and friend,
Beneath what unexpected star,
Compelled to what unchosen end!
Across the sea that knows no beach
The Admiral of nations guides
Thy blind, obedient keels to reach
The harbor where thy Future rides.
The guns that spoke at Lexington
Knew not that God was planning then
The trumpet word of Jefferson
To bugle forth the Rights of Men.
I do not know beneath what sky
Nor on what seas shall be thy fate;
I only know it shall be high,
I only know it shall be great."

Third: The Battle of Love against Hate.

The last battle of our day to which the Church must call with no "uncertain sound" is the battle of love against hate. The recently written "Hymn of Hate" proclaims that while Germany has many foes she hates but one—England. This hymn expresses the fires of hate that burn upon the altars of the hearts of all belligerents. The Teuton hates those whom he believes to be plotting to possess his Fatherland: the Turk hates the Allies because they have vowed to drive him out of Europe: the British hate the Houses of Hapsburg and Hohenzollern because they have set the world on fire; and we Americans are learning to hate more every day. Our hate was first kindled when Germany rode rough-shod over Belgium, fanned into a flame at the sinking of the Lusitania, rose higher when Japan and Mexico were advised to stab us in the back, and leaps higher still with the loss of every American ship and life by means of the satanic submarine. But we must curb this rising fire far more deadly than machine guns and asphyxiating gases is this fire of hate. Fear not the weapons that destroy the body but the foe that destroys the soul. We must love our national as well as our individual foes, not because they are lovable but because our love will make them lovable. not because they deserve it but because we dare not disobey the Great Head of the Church when He commands us: "Love your enemies." May the Stars and Stripes stand not only for liberty but for love, and then we shall win the world for both freedom and Christ. A hard task? Yes, but the reward is sure: for "love is strong as death;" "many waters cannot quench love;" "love never faileth."

Practical Suggestions.

One way to help our Government is for every patriotic citizen to buy one or more Liberty Bonds. This new church which we dedicate to-day would be doing both a religious and a patriotic deed were it to make such an investment. For thirty years to come the interest would be a sure source of revenue for pastor's salary or other local expenses.

Another way to help win the war is for the church, if need be, to surrender its best pastors to serve as Chaplains. The colonel of a Maryland regiment urged me to do all in my power to help the government find the number needed today—two thousand. If our boys are leaving our altars for the front we must follow them with all the religious influences which they so much need in face of the moral dangers of the camp—the hellish drink traffic and the professional prostitute. If the government to whom we dedicate our sons will not give the needed protection we should do it even if it means the closing of many of our houses of worship. The Y. M. C. A. has mapped out a program and we must stand by them.

And the final word of warning is: Do not begin your economy at the door of your church. Hard times may be before us for many days. We shall have to learn thrift, economy and sacrifice. And it may be that after all the greatest battle we shall have to fight will be the battle against our own mercenary spirit. God deliver us from selfishness. May we refuse to get gain above our due. And if it come to cutting down expenses let us begin with our own bodies and tables and let the house of God be the last to suffer loss. Then shall we have the right to pray for the peace of Jerusalem and the right to expect prosperity within our palaces.

FORWARD MOVEMENT CORNER VIII

There is one thing I am willing to guarantee. Listen, will you? If there had been six articles on finance I am sure that there would have been some suggestions from Ash Hopper, Lie Down and Rest Man, Young Student, and Solomon's Wife,—one of them at least—X. Y. Z. and a legion of others. Now be sure of this, if you get up in arms and begin to tell us how to do it, be sure if you brand your article "Forward Movement" that you stick to the subject, for if you write on some other theme than what you head your article the folks will get disappointed and will not read the genuine article when it does come out.

Now I may not be sticking to my subject in this "Corner" article, but if you will let me stick to my crowd a little while and leave the subject if necessary I will be much obliged to you.

One man said: "I do not like so many new fangled things being brought into the church. You have so many new ways that we cannot keep up with them." My! it's a good thing that lazy fellow did not live away back when they had the heave offering, the sin offering, the trespass offering, the wave offering, the wood offering, the peace offering, the wine offering, the burnt offering, the thank offering, the drink offering, the meat offering, the free offering &c. Would that not have been troublesome to the folks that want to do a little soul-saving during the meeting, if any at all, and pay a little money at the end of the year. Many times when they have about eat up the ham they have boiled for the three or four days they give to the revival, they begin to edge around to the pastor and say, "We are losing the crowd and we would better stop, for we will not have any folks here tomorrow and we cannot do any good." Now the fact of the business is that lots of folks think they are serving the Lord when all they have done was to eat the ham and enjoy that. Why, I actually knew of one church where they had a Children's Day and the collection was $4.50 and one man counted $70.00 worth of boiled ham on church ground. Now that is no uncommon thing. There is more than one church that has done that. Do you want proof? Then we call ourselves Christians and say just save the folks and the balance will coem around all right. Never, unless there is some teaching along that line.

But I am just started and space gone. Listen out. N. G. Bethea.

ITEMS FROM THE FIELD.

Roanoke.—The pastor, Bro. Edwards, asked me to attend the opening of the new church at Whitakers, Sunday, June 3, and conduct the first service. I gladly accepted the invitation. This charge was my first pastorate and I feel that some of my best friends are here. It was a pleasure to be with them again, and enjoy with them this great occasion. Great on account of their splendid achievement of having completed this beautiful house of worship. They had labored and sacrificed to see this glad day, when they could meet here and continue their worship in such a church home.

The old church was located in an undesirable part of town. Two years ago the lightning struck it, and since then the people havo thought of nothing but a better location and a better church. The pastor had prepared me for seeing a church building of rare beauty. It is well located, and conveniently arranged. Pastor and people were happy and rejoicing on this opening occasion. There was preaching at 11 A. M. Dr. W. E. Swain was to preach at the evening service, but a severe storm in the afternoon was supposed to have prevented his coming.

After the night service, I went with the pastor to Enfield. On Monday morning I went with him to see the Enfield church now in course of erection. This will probably be completed by fall, and will be one of the best churches in the Conference. The contractors were pushing the work rapidly.

Roanoke will be the banner circuit this year in church improvement.

Asheville.—I preached yesterday, June 10, at 11 A. M., at Asheville to an interesting and seemingly interested congregation. I found them busily engaged in preparing for a Children's Day service to be held Sunday night.

This week Bros. Gerringer, O. B. Williams, Bates and I will be holding Institutes on Buncombe and Ivy charges.

Bro. Fogleman, recently assigned to Buncombe, has entered upon the work with such a degree of earnestness as to enlist the co-operation of his people and I trust that the work will now move forward.

LAST CALL FOR SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The prospect for the Summer Conference is brighter than it was. We are now expecting between forty and forty-five.

Rev. F. T. Benson, D. D., and Rev. C. E. Forlines, D. D., had already promised to be with us. And now we have the definite promise of Rev. Lyman E. Davis, D. D., to be with us. We shall also have the pleasure of hearing Rev. Sylvester Newlin, D. D., of the Friends Church of High Point, and perhaps Hon. Gilbert T. Stephens, of Winston-Salem. These leaders of men will prove a great blessing to all who attend. And if not one of these men were to be there our own brethren who are on the program would give us a feast of good things. When you look at the program in the Herald of last week, I don't see how you can stay away if you can manage at all to come.

Bro. Layman, I know that in some cases your pastor is not coming because he feels that he cannot spare the money to come.

I am going to ask the delegate from each charge to the last Annual Conference to make inquiry about this and see. A few of you get together, raise a purse for your pastor, and send him to the Summer Conference. It is not too late to do this. But you'll have to hurry!

Let every preacher who owns an automobile, or a Ford, come in it to Oak Ridge and if another preacher lives close to you bring him along. He would rather help you pay for gasoline and rubber than to buy a railroad ticket.

However, if you are going on the railroad write to Prof. T. E. Whitaker, Oak Ridge, N. C., and he will have you met either at Kernersville, or Summerfield. If you do not write him then he will not know to send for you.

Be sure to arrive at Oak Ridge in time for supper at about 6:30 on Monday evening, June 18th, 1917.

Trusting and praying that we will have a splendid conference, I am, Yours in His Name,

A. G. Dixon.

High Point, N. C., June 12, 1917.

Burlington.—Our Sunday school attendance was below the average last Sunday, due to the inclement weather and muddy streets. We had special music in the Sunday school. The men's chorus of our church which was organized last week rendered two selections. They sang "The Church in the Wildwood" and "The Way-side Cross," both being very good, and enjoyed by all. This chorus is composed of about 15 of our young men and middle aged men, and the organization of this chorus is the result of the efforts of our pastor who is very proud of the success of his efforts. This chorus will furnish music every Sunday.

Bro. Pritchard gave us two good sermons Sunday. Miss Allene Amick sang a beautiful solo just before the sermon. In the evening service the men's chorus rendered a splendid selection. The subject of the sermon was The way of the Transgressor. The attendance was fairly good at both services.

The usual Jr. and Sr. C. E. meetings were held at the regular hour of meeting. Bro. T. T. Stafford conducted the Sr. meeting and used the topic for that date, which was Sins of the Mind. Bro. Stafford proved to be an excellent leader and made the service very interesting and helpful.

The business meeting of the Senior C. E. Society was held on Monday night of this week. The meeting was featured with the election of officers for the new term beginning July 1st. The following were elected: C. B. Way, Pres.; L. S. Thompson, V. Pres.; Miss Cleater Durham, Sec.; Miss Mary Brown, Ass't Sec.; Miss Thelma Moran, Treas.; Arthur Amick, Cor. Sec.; Miss Elsie Moser, Press Reporter; Miss Lula Riddle. Organist.

Misses Clara Gibbs and Mary Brown attended the State C. E. Convention at High Point last week. They report a great convention.

We were glad to have as a visitor in Sunday school and preaching services last Sunday Miss Nina Vinson of Brinkleyville, who is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard this week. She will attend the Summer school at the State Normal College.

The Jr. Philathea Class of our Sunday school conducted an ice cream social on the church lawn last Saturday night and raised about $12.00 for our church debt fund. Miss Susie Stafford recently became teacher of this class.

Harvey Russell, the 17-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Thornburg, died at their home last Sunday and the funeral service was conducted by Bro. Pritchard on Monday. The child had been ill only a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Thornburg are members of our church, and they have the sympathy of the church in their sad bereavement.

The Burlington church was the first in the United States to enroll as a co-operative church in the Forward Movement. Bro. Pritchard received certificate No. 1 last week, and we are proud of the distinction.

Next Sunday we are to observe "Baraca Day" in the Sunday school and church services. The Senior Baraca class has prepared a special program, which will be rendered in the Sunday school. Bro. J. Norman Wills, of Grace church, Greensboro, will be the principal speaker of the day. Our men's chorus will furnish special music and the Baracas will sing their song.

Bro. Wills will probably deliver an address at the morning church service. We are looking forward to a great day and a big attendance.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

Shady Grove, Guilford Ct.—Our S. S. is progressing nicely; attendance has been good for the past month.

Yesterday was our regular preaching day, but owing to its being Children's day our pastor just made a short address which was very interesting. Our children did finely with their recitations, dialogues and songs. The weather being so unfavorable in the morning we did not have as large a crowd as we were expecting, although the church was full and they were a very attentive crowd. Every one seemed to enjoy the exercise, especially the male quartette, Beyond the Sunset. Our decoration was of cedar and many beautiful roses, and several other different flowers. This day will be long remembered by us all. Children's Day offering was $4.10, which will go to the Children's Home. We hope to have many more Children's Days good as this one, and we also hope to have a new church before time for us to have another Children's Day. We already have a part of the lumber sawed for our new church and hope to go to work on it soon.

Our pastor spent today at the home of the writer. We enjoyed his visit very much. Hope he will come again soon.

With love and best wishes to the Herald, Grace Northam, Reporter.

June 11. 1917.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil and wife motored out to the Herald office in their new automobile last week, while in Greensboro. We thank them for honoring us with a visit.

FATHER.

At the sound of the gay laughter, father looked up, startled. Then he turned back to his desk, and finished his methodical preparations for "closing up." It was Kittredge's girl; she often came in to walk home with him. Father's gentle face settled into wistful lines. It had sounded like Betty's voice; how pleasant it would be if it had been Betty herself!

All the way home, on the trolley, father kept thinking of the girls. There were three: Martha, who was engaged to young Dale—a splendid match, every one said; Julia, who was a beauty, and Betty. They were splendid girls, all of them, much prettier than Dell Kittridge, and yet—father's thoughts ran back to their babyhood; even then he had not known how to play with them very well, but Annie had been alive to help. Since she died, father had somehow lost touch with his girls. He had worked harder and harder as the cost of living increased, but it needed something more than that. He wished that he could ask Kittredge what it was.

Dinner was ready when father reached home. It was a good dinner, and the girls chatted gayly about their dresses, and friends, and plans. They did not talk to father, and he ate in silence. After dinner, he went into the parlor to read the newspaper, but presently young Dale appeared, and father knew that he and Martha did not want any one else about. He wandered out on the piazza; but finding a gay group of young people there with Julia, he went slowly upstairs. Betty, as she passed the door of his room, saw him sitting there in the dark.

"All alone?" she asked.

"All alone, Betty," he answered. He tried to say it cheerfully, as if he did not care, but Betty came in.

"I wish I could stay,' she said, "but Dell Kittredge is waiting for me downstairs, and I've promised to go down to the library with her."

"Dell Kittredge!" father exclaimed.

"Why, yes—why, daddy, what's the matter?"

"Nothing," father answered. "Run along, little girl. I've seen her at the office sometimes, that's all. She comes to walk home with her father; they seem to have great times together."

Betty stooped, and kissed his forehead. "I guess they do, daddy," she said.

The next day, when father reached the office, he found a letter on his desk. The writing seemed vaguely familiar. He opened the letter with a puzzled frown. It read:

"Daddy Dear: You are cordially invited to escort your daughter Betty home tonight at five o'clock.

"Verry sincerely yours,
"Elizabeth Morris."

Father read it over three times, then he put it carefully away. He straightened out his thin shoulders, and glanced happily about the office. He looked ten years younger.—Youth's Companion.

IN HIS STRENGTH.

I will go in his strength—I have none of my own—
On his arm everlasting I'm leaning alone.
There is danger and darkness away from his side;
He is sun, he is shield, he is safety and guide.
When I thirst in the heat of the wilderness land,
Horeb's rock he will smite with his almighty hand;
When I hunger and faint in the wearisome way,
He will rain bread from heaven my spirit to stay.
In the midst of the fire, of the cloud and the night,
He will speak, and my fears at his word
will take flight;
And when from the waters of Marah I shrink,
He will sweeten their bitter before I must drink.
If long seems the journey and far seems the quest,
'Neath the palm-trees of Elim I'll lie down to rest.
Dark or light 'tis the same, for he goes on before,
The One who is refuge and strength evermore.
On wings of the eagle he'll bear me above
All the earth-mist and gloom to the home of his love.
From the heaven of heavens he'll hearken to me,
And at last in the morning his glory I'll see.

STATISTICAL REPORTS.

By the General Conference Statistical Secretary, Rev. Crates S. Johnson.

The Church Discipline outlines the duty of the General Conference Statistician in the following words:

The statistical secretary shall prepare a blank suitable for pastors' statistical reports providing for the fullest possible information, which after being endorsed by the executive committee shall be printed by the Board of Publication and put on sale and used by all the Annual Conferences except such as may be using more complete blanks which contain all the information of this official blank. He shall compile and publish during the month of May in each year in the official church papers a statistical report for the entire denomination, with such comparisons with other years as may in his judgment be of general interest and profit.

See Discipline, page 62, § 5.

It has not been possible to prepare and publish a statistical report during May, 1917. A few of our annual conferences do not print their minutes. Some conferences, while publishing their minutes, do not publish their statistical reports, or, if they do, the reports are likely to be partial and not embracing a uniform series of facts. As a result, the information is not at hand for a satisfactory annual report. It is hoped that conditions will be changed and that we will be able to comply with this phase of the statistician's duty hereafter.

A series of blanks is being prepared in obedience to the authority of General Conference and their use is enjoined upon the annual conferences. These blanks faithfully used will enable us to present complete and reliable statistics another year.

These blanks are not as good as they may be made. We invite criticism, They will be used this year as approved by the executive committee and may be revised later. We have tried to make them elastic enough to fit the needs of the several annual conferences, at the same time preserving uniformity, simplicity, comprehensiveness and brevity. There are three in the series.

In presenting this series of blanks to the conferences and churches we offer some suggestions concerning their proper use.

1. These blanks become official at once and should be used for reports to the conferences meeting in the fall of 1917. They should be ordered in generous supply from either of our publishing houses, the M. P. Board of Publication, 316 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md., or Pittsburgh Life Bldg., 219 Sixth St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

2. Before sending the blanks to the pastors the conference secretary should read carefully the Explanatory Notes. Certain changes may need to be made following suggestions. If any charge is without a pastor arrange to get its report from some other authentic source. Let the conference statistical report be complete and accurate.

3. Conference secretary or statistician should prepare beforehand large poster charts with appropriate ruling, with column headings and names of pastoral charges printed in, for the convenience of the committee on statistics in tabulating pastors' reports at conference.

4. Pastors should study the statistical blank before attempting to fill it. Have copy of last year's Minutes before you for comparison. Be neat, accurate, use a pen. See that your additions are correct,

5. A certified copy of the statistical reports from each conference should be forwarded to the statistical secretary of the General Conference, and especially if the reports are not to be printed.

A FINAL WORD ON SHELDON.

A few conclusions of the editor in his last seem to render it proper to add a few more words.

In my article of last week, of May the 31st, I said, "I, for one, believe the law graven on the table of stone by Jehovah is in full force, as observed and explained by Christ and the apostles." But I did not think it necessary to go into details of citations as to just how Christ and the apostles observed the Sabbath. I thought all intelligent readers, the editor among them, knew how Christ and the apostles observed, and interpreted the Sabbath. I admit a change in the law of the Sabbath, as to the day of observance, from Saturday to Sunday, but this is no essential change in the law itself, either in the spirit, design, or letter, as the law, as has been said, does not name a day of the week, on which to observe the Sabbath, or rest. There were to be six work days between the Sabbaths. Under the old dispensation this rest was observed on Saturday, as we count time, but under the new dispensation this rest is observed on Sunday, as we all know. But this by no means gives any one license to pick out just any day of the week for his Sabbath, or rest, as the editor seems to think, seeing the day has been fixed by competent authority, presumably by the apostles, through the authority given them by Christ, through the Holy Spirit, as indicated in John 14: 26, 16:13, and Matt. 16:19, 18:18. At least we find the Christian church keeping the rest on Sunday as far back as the second century. Irenaeus, who lived in the second century, being a disciple of Polycarp, who was a companion of St. John, says, "On the Lord's day every one of us Christians keep the Sabbath." Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, A. D. 101, speaks in a similar manner. So do others.

So it is no "loose" view of the Sabbath to hold to the fourth commandment, which requires one day's rest in seven, without naming any special day of the week. I challenge any one to show any scripture saying to rest on the seventh day of the week. Neither is there any scripture forbidding it. Under the Mosaic dispensation the seventh day of the week was observed; under the Christian dispensation the first day of the week is observed, and in each instance the fourth commandment is kept. So the fourth commandment is not "gone," or repealed, by a change of observance from the seventh day of the week to the first day of the week, as Sheldon affirms, as a specific day of the week is not an essential part, or even a literal part of the fourth commandment.

"To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

As to how far Christ's body could be seen on Mount Olivet is not the question at issue at all; but whether Christ will be seen on the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, as he approaches the earth in all the divine effulgence of Omnipotence—in his glory, the glory of the Father, and of the holy angels. That he will be thus seen seems to be clearly taught by Christ and the apostles, which Sheldon seems to question. But this is but in keeping with the attitude of the book. What is gained by such questioning we fail to see.

How many persons can see the sun when he is over the equator at one time? Half the world. How many can see the north, or polar star at once? At least half the people in the northern hemisphere. Christ may be millions or billions or even trillions of miles from the earth when seen, and if he is moving, by change of position he could be seen by all the inhabitants of the earth in a few seconds, or minutes, at most. So it is not a question of being seen on Mount Olivet by all, but of being seen in the heavens.

We may try to make it appear that there is no such thing as orthodoxy, by saying, "My doxy and your doxy," but it still remains that there is a set of doctrines that has been recognized and accepted by the churches and the great preponderating mass of Christians all down the centuries from the apostolic days to the present, as true, and any serious deviation from this as heretical. All well informed persons know this, and it is useless to attempt to evade this fact.

We have no desire to do an injustice to Sheldon's book; but there are other books which contain all the good there is in his book, without the objectionable features of his book, and why not use such books? Why adopt the questionable? A loaf of bread may contain ten ounces of pure flour, but a few grains of arsenic, strychnine, or other deadly poison, rendering it unfit for food. So of a great many books, especially in the hands of the young.

DELIGHTFUL.

A delightful Book: "His delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night." Ps. 1:2.

Delightful worship.: "Then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God." Job. 22:26. "They take delight in approaching to God." Isa. 58:2.

A delightful prayer: "The prayer of the upright is his delight." Prov. 15:8. "Delight thyself also in the Lord, and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart." Ps. 37:4.

Delightful obedience: "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the Lord?" 1 Sam. 15:22.

A delightful day: "Call the Sabbath a delight, holy unto the Lord, honorable." Isa. 58:13.

Delightful fellowship: "Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord." Isa. 58:14.

A delightful peace: "The meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." Ps. 37:11.

A delightful love: "How fair and how pleasant art thou, O love, for delights!" Song of Sol. 7:6.

A delightful experience: "Let your soul delight itself in fatness." Isa. 55:2.

Delightful consolations: "In the multitude of thy thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul." Ps. 94:19.

Delightful loving kindness: "I am the Lord which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the Lord." Jer. 9:24.

A delightful service: "I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart." Ps. 40:8.

A delightful law: "I delight in the law of God, after the inward man." Rom. 7:22.

A delightful land: "Thou shalt be called Hephzibah, and thy land Beulah: for the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married." Isa. 62:4.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

New Salem, Randleman Ct.—Although we have not had a report in the Herald for some time, we have not been entirely idle.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the efficient management of our superintendent, Mr. J. B. Lamb. The attendance is increasing since warm weather has come. We are planning to hold a children's day service sometime in the near future. The children always look forward with pleasure to this service.

We were fortunate in having five members of the Forward Movement Committee with us a few weeks ago. They all delivered very interesting and helpful addresses. We hope much good will result from their efforts.

Rev. J. F. Dosier preached us an excellent sermon last Sunday morning about keeping the Sabbath. Our pastor, Rev. J. B. O Briant, did not fill his regular appointment here the 1st Sunday in June. This was because of the protracted meeting being held at Mt. Lebanon. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Ruby Hughes, Reporter.

Pageland.—Bro. Quick filled his appointment Sunday afternoon. The congregation was good and the service seemed to be enjoyed by every one. We have four churches in our town, the Methodist Protestant, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist and Presbyterian. The different churches hold their services in such a manner as not to interfere with services at the other churches. Bro. Quick preaches twice a month for us, the 3rd Sunday at eleven o'clock and the 2nd Sunday at three o'clock. He used as his lesson yesterday the 12th chapter of Paul's epistle to the Romans. This discourse was intended for the church members. His subject, "The Ideal Church Member," using the Good Samaritan as the model. May we try to measure our lives to see whether we are the church member God would have us be. We want to be ideal men, it matters not what vocation in life we follow. Then if we claim to be church members we should be ideal ones as God wants us to be. Will we not strive so to be? Robert Turner.

Whitaker's, Roanoke Ct.—Last Sunday was a happy day for us: we held the opening service in our new church. We had a great sermon by Rev. G. W. Holmes who was once our pastor. Rev. W. E. Swain was to have been with us at night, but owing to bad weather he failed to get here, so Mr. Holmes preached again. The bad weather kept the writer from church at night but I am told the night sermon surpassed the one in the morning.

I say the opening day was a happy one for us, but a happier day will be when, freed from debt, we can see the day of dedication, and the happiest time will be when we shall see souls born into God's Kingdom around her altars; then we shall feel that our work has not been in vain. We want the prayers of the entire church that we may be a power for good in our town and surrounding country.

Our pastor, Rev. C. J. Edwards, has helped us in every way he could; when he could do nothing else he gave us all the encouragement possible.

We have made a hard struggle and shall continue to struggle until we shall be out of debt. We have had very little outside help. We feel that more people would help us if they only knew what kind of building we have erected.

With best wishes for the Herald and readers, Mamie Johnston.

A Letter from Robert Turner.

May I at this late hour try to tell how graciously I was received by the kind people of Yarborough Chapel on May 5th and how I enjoyed being with them in their missionary society. I had the honor of speaking to a very intelligent audience at the M. P. Parsonage at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. There were members from each of the different churches present, and all seemed to enjoy the occasion, and especially the delicious repast that followed the missionary meeting. This repast was characteristic of Bro. and Sister Williams' good judgment, for they had never heard the writer speak and they prepared to sweeten what was said or to please the audience whether the speaker did or not.

I was very glad to visit this church, due to the fact that the people there held such a warm place in father's heart. He served them for four years and during that time only missed one Sunday and that was due to death in the family. The good people there presented him with a nice memory quilt, which mother prizes very dearly, and thinks of the members of this church in terms, not as strangers, but as intimate unknown friends. Sister or "Mother" Yarborough was unable to be with us, but she invited Bro. and Sister Williams with the writer to take dinner with her and the time spent in her home shall ever be remembered. I also had the pleasure of speaking to the Bible class at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, and filling Bro. Williams' pulpit at eleven o'clock. Although there but a short time, I learned to love them, and feel that Bro. Williams will accomplish great good while there, for I feel that not only his good wife will uphold his hand, but with such members as this church is composed of I feel sure they will aid him in carrying on God's work. I cannot mention all of the nice things done to make me enjoy my stay and how accommodating the Messrs. Yarboroughs were in getting me from and to the station. But I will say in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bleass each one of you, God bless us all."

Randleman Ct.—We have just closed two meetings. We held our meeting at Worthville the third week in May. We had a good meeting. The church was much revived. One addition to the church and two more to join.

We held our meeting at Randleman the fourth week in May. This was also a good meeting. Two joined the church and four more are to follow. Rev. D. A. Braswell was our pulpit help. Bro. Braswell was not at all well in either one of these meetings, but he lost sight of this when in the pulpit. He seemed to be at his best then. He did good preaching—good as the best.

J. B. O'Briant.

Gregson-Barker.—Sunday, June 10th, 10 o'clock A. M., a very pretty wedding took place at the M. P. Parsonage, at Randleman, N. C. Mr. Hubert Gregson and Miss Hazel Barker were the contracting parties. These young people are both of Climax, N. C., and are very popular and have a whole circle of friends The wedding party consisted of two autoes full of young people, friends of both the bride and groom. They were a happy group of young people. Their many friends extend congratulations. The undersigned officiated. J. B. O'Briant.

Thomasville.—Dear Bro. Editor: Enclosed find a copy of the sermon preached by Dr. Elderdice at the dedication of our church. Every one who heard this sermon thought it just the message that all church people need just now and a large number requested that it be published in our church papers. I hope you will publish it this week. I hope every one will read it and that it may do much good to set us right just at this stage of the history of our country.

Our dedication service has been so well reported by Mrs. Boyles in last week's Herald that I deem it unnecessary to say much about it myself except that it was a most delightful service. The sermon by Dr. Elderdice was fine, one of the best sermons I have ever heard, and delivered in a masterful way.

The music was good. We appreciate the assistance of Mrs. Harrell of High Point.

Bro. Suits was with us, he being the only one of the former pastors who came. We were glad to see him. He preached for us four times while here, every one enjoying his splendid sermons. We thank him for coming and assure him that his coming was not in vain but that he endeared himself to the people here more than ever by coming.

Bro. Dixon came and held the revival services which was a delight to us all to have him with us and to hear his splendid sermons. The church seemed much revived and we had six conversions, four joining the church Sunday morning. We are very grateful for this splendid revival meeting; we all feel closer drawn to Christ and may He continue to bless this church.

This church is now in the best condition it has ever been in both financially and spiritually. It is in a flourishing condition, yet much work is yet to be done before it will be what I would like to see here. It has made splendid progress. One thing I must say, and that is the response of the members to every call of their pastor. Since I came here I have not made an appeal but that met with a hearty response.

I have resigned as pastor to take effect June 18, not because of any trouble, not because of any ill feeling on the part of the pastor or people, for the peple were never better to me than now. I feel my work is done here and I have been called into a larger field of usefulness. There is a work that is very close to my heart that I want to do and I believe God would have me do it, therefore I am taking the first step in order to get in line so that I may be of service to my fellowman, my country and my God in this capacity. I may never be allowed to do the work I want to do, but it will not be my fault, I shall do my part.

Of course I will be criticised by some folks, but then while they are after me they will let other men alone.

I pray God's richest blessings upon every one and may the work prosper in your hands. Sincerely, E. O. Pritchett.

Three Methodist Protestants Graduate at Elon.

For several years there has been an increasing patronage of the Methodist Protestant Church in attendance at Elon College. The church does not patronize, as a usual case, that which does not merit its patronage and respect. Elon College has, during its entire history, been broad and liberal, and has always striven to show herself worthy of the high place which she now holds in the educational world. The college is bound by no creeds except the creeds and doctrines of the Word of God, and she has, by honorable means, always held out a helping hand to every young man and young woman who has knocked at her doors seeking truth, knowledge, and culture. From ever widening circles this institution has been gathering her student body and, after this band of young people has been trained for service, the college has sent them back to bless the world of mankind.

At the commencement of 1917, three Methodist Protestants received at the hands of Elon College their diplomas and their bachelor's degree. These three men are Rev. B. M. Williams, Warren McCulloch, and Ira Gunn. Among the members of the graduating class of thirty-one, there were no men who were more highly respected or esteemed.

Mr. Williams and Mr. Gunn maintained themselves with credit throughout their four years of college work. They were both honored by their class, Mr. Williams being its president and Mr. Gunn being the Business Manager of the Phisicli, the College Annual published annually by the senior class.

Mr. McCulloch, coming from Adrian College, Michigan, took only the last years of his college work at Elon, but, during these years of work, he made for himself a worthy record and won distinction for himself by winning over twenty-five others the honor to represent his class on the commencement program on Commencement Day.

As a Methodist Protestant himself, the writer commends these young people to the Methodist Protestant Church, feeling that they are tried and capable and worthy for any service they may be called upon to render.

The recent Commencement at Elon was a great occasion. The President was pleased to announce that the Alumni Fund had been completed and that he is authorized by the Board of Trustees to commence the work of raising an additional one hundred and twenty-five thousand to add to the endowment of the college.

Among the faculty of the college are representatives of the leading Protestant denominations throughout the country, and the Methodist Protestant Church is represented by two persons on the teaching staff. There are a number of fine young women from our church who are there preparing for useful careers in the world. Several of these are preparing for the ministry, others are getting ready for the foreign field, and still others are developing into teachers and are preparing for useful careers in other occupations. (Member of the Faculty.)

High Point.—We had a splendid day last Sunday. The State C. E. Convention was with us and kept the folks out late Saturday evening, so a good many were not out in time of Sunday school; 238 present. But by 11 o'clock they were out, and gave Mr. C. F. Evans, Southern Field Secretary of C. E., a splendid hearing. He was at his best, and all of you who know Mr. Evans know that he is great. It was a great treat for us all, and his coming will surely do our church good. How any one can hear him and not be more loyal to his church I cannot tell. Next Sunday we are to have Rev. F. T. Benson, D. D., at 11 A. M. and Rev. Lyman E. Davis, D. D., at 8 P. M. Our people will welcome these brethren. In His Name,

A. G. Dixon.

Greensville Ct.—We had no preaching at Hobbs yesterday, the rain prevented us; we are having service twice a month now, so it won't be long before Bro. Morgan will be around again with a good and profitable message for us.

The S. S. Rally held at Philadelphia the first Sunday was a great treat to the writer. Four schools were represented. We already felt that S. S. work was a great work, but after meeting together and finding out what others are doing it inspires us to do greater service.

It was a delight to meet our Herald's Editor. I have often desired to meet him when I was writing Hobbs' report or reading our paper. He seemed somewhat surprised when he met Miss Edwards—Mathews' reporter—and myself; said he expected to find older-looking ladies; guess Miss E. will join me in saying, "I appreciate the fact that my face was so kind as not to show my agedness."

We are planning to have Children's Day service in July; will report what Sunday later. We would be glad to have the Editor with us at this service.

Dora Pair.

Our Children's Day.

It was a day of pleasure. It was a pleasure to the parents. It was a pleasure to the visitors. It was a pleasure to the pastor. It was a pleasure to the little ones. And no one that witnessed the exercises can deny that fact, after seeing the broad smiles appear on their faces as they approached the stand.

It was a success in every sense of the word. And much credit is due Mrs. Gerringer for her untiring efforts in training the little ones. And the part that was most pleasing to our pastor, Mr. L. W. Gerringer, was the foreign mission offering of $7.00. We all hope for an increase next year. T. S. Wray, Reporter.

FRED'S BIG SISTER.

"I don't go much on sisters," Rodney Black was heard to remark, "but I could stand a dozen like Fred's; she's O. K. Lucky dog, that Fred Wilkins.'

"Same here," Tim Welsh added. "She's better posted on fish bait and base ball than Fred is himself, and as to cookies—oh, my!"

Fred Wilkins' house was the most popular resort for the boys of the neighborhood, but Fred said good-naturedly, "I'm not chalking up any credit to myself for it; it's all Sue."

There never was a girl like her for making mouth-watering tarts and turnovers, doughnuts and cookies, and she knew enough of a boy's appetite to make them by the gross and the bushel, instead of paltry dozens and pints. As to skill in bandaging and caring for torn and bruised fingers and toes, even the doctors, so the boys said, had to take a back seat for Sister Sue. Yet, after all, her crowning talent was the wonderful way she had of patching and darning a ragged tear in coat or trousers, so that even one's own mother couldn't discover it.

"Say, she's going to have a birthday next Wednesday," confided one of the boys to the others. "Let's get her a present. She's always loading us up with good things, and doing things for us generally."

The group of boys readily agreed, and it was decided to ask Fred to learn from Sister Sue what she most desired as a gift. Fred agreed, and promised to report promptly. But two days passed and Fred kept away from the other boys or gave unsatisfactory answers when approached. Finally, the boys cornered him.

"Well, you see," he said, shamefacedly, "Sue isn't like other girls, always wanting things. If it was Bess, now, she'd tell a dozen things she'd like in one breath."

"Well, it isn't Bess, it's Sue," cried Will Davis. "What does Sue want?"

Fred took a long breath. "Well, you see," he began again, "she couldn't know I was quizzing her for anybody but myself, and she said—Pshaw, I ain't going to tell you," he broke off impatiently. "It isn't any of your business, anyway."

The boys grew indignant. "Well," said a voice. "I guess it is our business. If you think it is going to cost too much, we're not a stingy lot. We're ready to do it up fine. Out with it, Fred!"

Fred straightened up at that, with a "do-or-die" expression on his face, "Maybe you'll wish I hadn't. It is something that'll cost like fun, but I said I'd report and I'm a man of my word, so here goes. She just said, 'Frederick Jackson Wilkins, if you want to give me a birthday present that I'd like better than anything else, you take a sheet of blank writing paper and write on it an iron-bound promise that you'll stop smoking cigarettes; and sign it.' And that's all I could get out of her."

Fred said afterward, when he told Sue about it, "You could have sliced the silence that fell over the bunch of boys with my jack-knife." Every boy of them had known that Fred's sister Sue had no use for cigarettes, and they had always been careful to keep them out of her sight. It was Fred who finally spoke again:

"Well, I didn't suppose you'd like it a bit better than I did, but you made me tell."

"Say, are you going to give Sue what she asked for?" spoke up a boy, slyly.

Fred's face flushed, but his voice had a manly ring, and he promptly answered: "You just better believe I am. She's too good a sister to disappoint."

"That's what I say." blurted out Tom Polf. "It would please her mightily to have all us boys do the same thing, too. Let's do it. All in favor say Aye."

"Aye, aye," was the firm but quiet response from every boy.

"There's one of the boys wants to see you, Sue, out in the yard," said Fred Wilkins to his sister on the morning of her birthday. "He won't come in."

Sue smilingly accommodated herself to a boy's whim and hurried out into the yard, where she found Rodney Black. He handed her an envelope, bulky and broad, "From us boys, just to start off your birthday cheerful;" he told her.

Fred lingered around when Sue opened the envelope and read the promises written in many boyish hands to stop smoking, and heard a fervent, girlish "Bless their hearts! How did they know how much I wanted them to do this very thing?"

She wouldn't have been a girl if she hadn't been wonderfully pleased at the mammoth box of bonbons that came later, labeled in boyish hands, "Bought with the money we didn't spend on cigs." But she always insisted that, delicious as it was, it wasn't to be mentioned in the same breath with the presents that came in the envelope.—Union Signal.

"Give me a faithful heart,
  Likeness to Thee,
That each departing day
  Henceforth may see
Some work of love begun,
Some deed of kindness done,
Some wanderer sought and won,
  Something for Thee."

JENNY WREN'S JAILBIRD.

She was a "Jenny Wren" sort of body—shy, plain, and low-voiced—and nobody ever paid much attention to her. One day she flitted away as quietly as she had lived. The poor wept so bitterly that her townspeople half guessed that a saint had lived among them.

They stared curiously at her jailbird, who had come halfway across the continent for the quiet funeral. They would have liked to be cordial and friendly to the erect, fine-looking young business man, but they realized that it was too late. Ten years before he had been a spoiled, handsome youngster who in a moment of passion committed a crime. He said himself that it was easier to go to prison than to endure the cold glances of his former friends.

Jenny Wren had been his Sunday school teacher, and she did not consider her responsibilities ended when the prison received him. Every Sunday afternoon she wrote the boy a letter such as his dead mother might have written him. Her old fingers were gnarled and twisted with rheumatism, which made writing a task; but she never failed him. She begged magazines before their owners were half through with them to send to her prisoner. When he sent her the prison magazine with his article on the front page, she was as proud as if it had been a college paper.

A PINCH OF SALT.

"The Lord calls his people the salt of the earth," said the old woman musingly. "I reckon no one of us is more than a pinch—and some of us is a pretty stingy pinch the way we act sometimes—but it's just the pinch put in or left out that makes or spoils the cooking. Take it all together, it's likely we have a deal to do with the seasoning of the world."

It was a homely exposition, but a true one. We are not the "salt of the earth" alone for its savings, but also for its seasoning day by day. Though each individual is only a "pinch," yet each in his place should add relish and enjoyment to the life around him. Only God can bring the world to heaven, but every Christian who will can bring a little of heaven to the world and put it into the daily life of those about him.—Selected.

IN OUR FATHER'S CARE.

The ships glide into the harbor's mouth
And the ships sail out to sea,
And the wind that sweeps from the sunny south
Is as sweet as sweet can be.
There's a world of toil and a world of pains,
There's a world of trouble and care;
But, oh, in a world where our Father reigns
There is gladness everywhere.

The earth is fair in the breezy morn,
And the toilers sow and reap,
And the fulness comes to the tassled corn
Whether we wake or sleep;
And far on the hills by feet untrod
There are blossoms that scent the air;
For, oh, in this world of our Father, God,
There is beauty everywhere.

The babe lies soft on the mother's breast,
And the tide of joy flows in;
He giveth, He taketh, and He knoweth best—
The Lord to whom we win.
And, oh, when the soul is with trials tossed,
There is help in the lifted prayer;
For never a soul that loves is lost,
And our Father is everywhere.

The ships sail over the harbor bar,
Away and away to sea;
The ships sail in with the evening star
To the port where no tempests be;
The harvest waves on the summer hills,
And the bands go forth to reap;
And all is right, as our Father wills,
Whether we wake or sleep.

A MOTHER'S MISTAKE.

The two little daughters in this home were as unlike as it is possible for sisters to be. Helen was a quiet, delicate, thoughtful, conscientious child; while her sister, two years younger, was a gay, romping, healthy, careless girl, loving and lovable. The parents and friends injudiciously remarked about their characteristics before the children, until Ruth felt that it was her disposition to be careless and that she could not help it. On the other hand, Helen heard so often that every one could depend upon her that she prided herself upon this quality. She was a careful little student, a painstaking helper in the household duties, and a perfect little mother to the baby of the family.

Without knowing it the mother grew to putting extra duties upon Helen in the way of looking after her sister, and the conscientious child did her best without complaint. If Ruth were to bring home a book from school, to wear her rubbers, to do an errand, to perform some little duty at home—in short, to do what children are expected to do in their daily life—Helen must see that her sister did it. She must not only remember for herself, but for her careless sister as well.

At last a severe illness reduced Helen to a mere shadow, and the mother for the first time realized what she had been doing. In her delirium Helen constantly said: "Ruth, you must wear your rubbers today. Mamma said so. Ruth, you must remember to feed Fido. Ruth, don't forget to study your spelling." And so through the list of endless cautions and directions until her mother's heart ached. The child finally came slowly back to life, and even to this day has the worried, fretful disposition developed by years of overwork in the way of responsibility. The mother is making every effort to remedy the mistake, and is thankful that she learned her lesson before it was too late.—Hilda Richmond.

DAILY BREAD.

Christ taught us to pray every day for our daily bread. It comes to us so regularly as a reward of our daily labor that we almost forget to pray for it at all, or even to return thanks when we receive it. How many Christians hasten every day to the shop or field without taking time to breathe one short prayer for God's help in the day's labors? Yet we need His help and He needs us. Our work is a part of His work, and He is interested in its performance. Of the first thirty years of the life of Christ we know almost nothing, but that He was always about His Father's business, and He worked with Joseph at the carpenter's trade. He spent the greater part of his short life in showing the world that even common labor may be business that God is interested in, and that to work without reference to God, to work for bread for bread's sake alone, or to live by bread alone and not by hearing and constantly obeying the Word of God, is to live a life that is less than human.

If we should pray for material bread, much more should we pray for the Bread of Life. It comes by labor, too. There is certain spiritual satisfaction that comes from right thinking and right living. The man who strives to do his whole duty to man shall in no wise miss his reward even though he does not think of God. The man who thinks of God, but thinks of Him as if He were afar off, who obeys but does not pray and does not love, will also receive the reward that is due his small measure of piety; but it is infinitely better to be a son than a servant. The son loves to abide always in his father's house. He loves to be sure of his father's companionship and approval. He loves to pray, as he begins his task: "O Father, grant that all my labors this day may be begun and completed under Thy approval and blessing! Grant that of the poor material I bring this day something may find a place in Thy eternal house. Grant that for this day's labor I may receive my daily bread, the portion of this world's good that I need; and that I may receive the bread that endureth, the fellowship of God this day."—Selected.

ON TIME.

Napoleon said: "I beat the Austrians because they did not know the value of five minutes."

Napoleon's marshal, Grouchy, came up late at Waterloo. For that delay the conqueror of Europe died a captive eagle on the barren rock of St. Helena.

On the great clock of time there is but one word, "Now."

"By the street of By-and-By one arrives at the house of Never."

Putting off means leaving off, and going to do means going undone.

"On time!" is the cry of progress. "Too late" is the groan of failure. The race of success runs on time.—Young Folks.

A CITIZEN OF HEAVEN.

A Christian does not turn his back upon the fine things of this world because he has no natural capacity to enjoy them, no taste for them, but because the Holy Spirit has shown him greater and better things. He wants flowers that will never fade; he wants something that a man can take with him to another world. He is like a man who has notice to quit his house, and having secured a new one, he is no more anxious to repair, much less to embellish and beautify the old one; his thoughts are upon the removal. If you hear him converse, it is upon the house to which he is going. Thither he sends his goods, and thus declares plainly what he is seeking.—From "My Mother's Scrap Book."

—On Tuesday Rev. C. J. Edwards wrote from Rocky Mount as follows: "Mrs. Edwards was operated on here yesterday A. M.; was under the knife three hours and forty-five minutes. We don't know what to expect. She isn't very critical condition. I hope the worst is over, but we can't tell. A loving Father is caring for her." How soon sorrow comes after joy! Just a few minutes ago Bro. Holmes' report of Bro. Edwards' pleasure in the new church opening came under our eye. Now this. We tender sympathy in the acute and deep anxiety through which Bro. Edwards is now passing.

REPORT OF WORK.

(China.)

April 1, 1916, to March 30, 1917.

Greetings to Our Board and All Friends and Upholders of Our Mission:

We wish to thank you for all your faithful work, offerings and prayers. May we all work in the name of the Lord and for His sake, and may we all bring our humble service to Him like the five barley loaves, and two small fishes, knowing that He will not cast away what we bring to Him but grant His blessing upon it. Questions may arise in our hearts: "What are they among so many," or others may say: "Why was this waste of the ointment made," but the Lord gave the right answer to both kinds of questions and will do so yet when we pour out our service in love to Him.

This year has been an eventful year. China has gone through hard struggles, first on account of the high-handedness of Yuan-Shi-Kai's rule and his tragic death. The time of his presidency was filled with bloodshed in the capital and over the whole country, and rebellion between the south and north. Great amounts of money have been appropriated, or rather stolen, from the country's funds and government banks. President Li-Yuan-Hong is a man of peace, but different political parties are still fighting for the power, that makes it hard for the president to establish peace. The question of joining the European war has lately drawn all attention from the government, and has made them forget all that two months ago was of vital interest to them.

We have had great extremes in the temperature this past year. The winter has been one of the coldest that we can remember and there has been untold misery amongst the poor. Many have frozen to death. Last summer we had great torrents of rain and our compound suffered considerably.

Under all changes we may still rest on our Lord, knowing that He is the same today, yesterday and forever. He keepeth us and his work in His hands as well as guarding the great events, praise to His holy name!

Our work is carried on in different ways. Please note that the statistics are separate, following this report, a copy of which has been sent to the China Continuation Committee.

Regular Sunday Services and Meetings for Christians and Inquirers. In Kalgan, our chapel,—a common Chinese room holding 200 persons packed—has generally been filled at our Sunday meetings, which have been attended by all classes. Two Christian teachers from R. R. and government schools, Mr. Nien and Mr. King, have given us assistance by preaching several times, which has been greatly appreciated. In connection with our Sunday meetings we have held the Sunday school, having classes for both young and old. We use the S. S. union lessons.

At Suanhwafu and outstations the Sunday meetings and Sunday school are held with more or less fair attendance. We have had services at one of our Christians' homes in another part of the city during the year except in the very coldest season.

Times of Special Meetings with Bible Classes for men and women have been held during the winter in Kalgan and Suanhwafu with an attendance of 35 to 40. During half of the day those attending have been divided up in classes and taught according to their ability to comprehend and follow on, and during the rest of the day we have common meetings with chosen subject. We have also held classes in two villages for enquirers where we have had two native workers busy during the winter. In one of these places, "Sanlichuang," we have rented a small house for worship. The expense of rent, etc., has for the most part been met by the natives, not including the evangelist's wages. There are over thirty enquirers in that village alone and lately four were baptized there and others wish to follow, although we move rather cautiously. These meetings have been a great help in the work and we hope not only to keep them up, but have such meetings arranged in all our outstations. Last spring we had Mr. and Mrs. Knight of China Inland Mission at our annual helpers' meeting, which was very helpful.

The time that we spend in receiving callers often takes the greater part of the day for ourselves, and also for some of our evangelists. We have to deal with many kinds of questions and meet with needs temporal as well as spiritual. People out of work often take their refuge in the "Jesu church" asking for help in some way or wanting letters of introduction in order to get work. Many who suffer innocently are coming asking for help to get right and often we are greatly perplexed as to what to do.

The Schools have been kept up as usual. On account of Mr. Heininger being absent, the Kalgan Boys' School as well as those at the outstations have been worked by native teachers. It has not been possible for me to spend more time for school work than what has been necessary for supervision. Mrs. Soderbom has had charge of the Girls' School. As she wrote a letter not long ago telling about it, she does not consider it necessary to report it over again. During the year we have taken steps with regard to improving the course of study in our outstation schools in accordance with what the mission schools generally have and what we also have kept up in the Kalgan schools. We are not satisfied ourselves with our school work. It is not possible to carry on the school work properly up to the needs and claims of the times in the present buildings and with the present arrangements. We have had to turn off several applicants lately because we had no room. We are very glad for the promise of getting new buildings for our schools. These we hope we can start as soon as Mr. and Mrs. Heininger have returned.

Street Chapel work has been conducted in Kalgan, Suanhwafu, Ts'aikopu and Hua Shaoing where the street chapels have been kept open a part of the day. We also have a street chapel in Suei Chuan but no worker. This work is intended to reach all kinds of people and many hear the gospel and come in contact with Christian truth for the first time through this medium.

Tent Preaching: Last summer we had our tent set up in several villages and towns. One of our young preachers, Mr. "Yu-Shing-Pang," and also a student, Mr. Kao-Ching-Ming, and another helper were with it while several others helped at different times. It was a hard summer on account of the heavy rain torrents and cold nights. On one occasion the tent was nearly taken away by a river and one night a thief broke in and stole clothing and things belonging to the helpers. The fruit of tent preaching has been the gospel made known to many who would have no other opportunity. Books and tracts spread, more enquirers enrolled. In Huai-an city where we had the tent last year two school teachers have taken a stand for Christianity. They read the Bible and Christian books and try to spread the truth to others and they have urged us several times to open work in their city, which, however, we have as yet been unable to do so.

The Dispensary Work has been, as before, carried on by our native Dr. Ts'ui and one assistant and a blind evangelist. You will find from the statistics that the total number of treatments have been 7978. And although the price of drugs has been from two to five times more than during times of peace, yet we have been able to meet the expenses by the fees,—the doctor's wages not included. We recognize the benefit and need of a more effectual and better medical work; yet taking into consideration how few workers there are and the present equipment, we must acknowledge all the good that has been accomplished. Many have come with frozen limbs necessitating amputation, and many sufferers have been relieved, and to many of these our dispensary has been t[illegible] chance. A small fee is taken at t[illegible]or, which is approximately one gold cent, but those who can pay for their medicine, or in cases of amputation, have to do so. Therefore we would not be without this branch of the work and if the Lord enables us at any time to enlarge it, it will be for the welfare of many sufferers as well as for the spreading of the gospel.

A Street Children's Sunday School has also been kept up in the Dispensary, chiefly by Mrs. Soderbom. Four of our big school boys have been helping in it nearly every Sunday. During the coldest season we had to give this up for some time.

Visiting Homes. Mrs. Soderbom has, according to her time and strength, visited homes. She has had opportunities in this work that we would not have had otherwise. It is a good way of getting in closest contact with both Christians and heathen.

The Proposed City Center Work. We have seen several places during this year but they have not been satisfactory either in price or location, some in danger of flooding during the rainy season. At last we decided on one that we had talked about before Mr. Heininger went home, for which we are at present negotiating. Our Chinese and the other foreigners of Kalgan were all in favor of this site, although it is not without faults and inconveniences. We also communicated with Mr. Heininger and he telegraphed and said "buy." So we offered $3500 Mex. for it and besides this sum there are old houses that we could either buy for a cheap price or give them some help in removing them. Our offer is not yet accepted. If they do so we have to stand by our word. There are several reasons why we have not pushed this affair. One that the rate of exchange has been all against us for a long time, which makes anything that we undertake to do with American gold 40 or 50 per cent. dearer and sometimes more than ordinarily. Secondly, just as we were determined to go ahead after the receipt of Mr. Heininger's telegram all the bad rumors broke out about war between America and Germany and also China, so we hesitated, but were later obliged to continue our negotiations that we had begun before, rather than to drop the matter altogether. Another thing also, we should rather wait than to make a bad investment. Maybe Mr. Heininger will be here again before we get any better prospect. We will do our best and trust God to lead to a good outcome. In China it is not wise to push too hard in purchasing property because anybody doing so will have to pay for it.

In Hua Shao-ing we have this year bought a house for the mission work and we are at present building a new house for chapel and school. This purchase has been paid for by proceeds from sale of land formerly belonging to the church.

During the year I have made four longer trips around the district, and several shorter visits to places nearer by Kalgan have been made by myself or Mrs. Soderbom. As it has been advisable that one of us stay at the station Mrs. Soderbom has had to mostly stay at home looking after the work while I have been out. We frequently visit Suanhwafu and Ts'ai Ko-Pu, as these places are on the R. R. line. As the work in the outstations is included above, I only need to say in addition that the work has been carried on like last year by our natives, but we have felt great need of spending more of our own time to give help to those places. It has been necessary to close a place which we opened last year, "Chia-hsien-chuang," on account of the unchristian conduct of the man who let us have his house for meetings. This was a great disappointment to us all, Chinese as well as foreigners and we had great trouble and work to get it straightened out. But then we had the joy of opening up the other village near by, "Sanlichuang," already mentioned.

Now, dear friends, we are not blind to our short comings and disappointments. I wish I could show a little more of that side, but don't forget that it is harder to get the darker side to show on the picture than the bright side, which perhaps is fortunate. Again we must remind ourselves that we do the work not only because of what we see and get from it but for the sake of our Lord's will. Disappointment and hindrances are often only the way to progress and blessings.

We need more foreign work in all departments to infuse more life. Our strength has been inadequate this year to the demands of the work. Our helpers have on the whole done good servic but still we have felt that there is something lacking. We are glad to know that Mr. and Mrs. Heininger will soon be at their work again and for the promise of needed buildings which will give us a chance of more effective work.

The way the Lord teaches us to increase our work is to pray the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth laborers into His harvest. He, only, can give the right call to the mission field, and you and I should partake in this prayer.

Yours in the Lord's service,
Carl G. and Anna Soderbom.

A WAR EMERGENCY IN CHINA.

At this time when one needs a bottomless purse to take care of the many demands, the American Section of the World's Sunday School Association has been asked to meet a war emergency in China. The Sunday-school work in that great field has been financed heretofore largely by the British Section of that Association, but owing to their depleted resources they have been obliged to call upon the American Committee to take over the budget and administration of China. The American Committee, at a recent meeting, unanimously voted to shoulder this additional burden.

Under the present organization, there is maintained a headquarters office in Shanghai, where Rev. E. G. Tewksbury has been doing splendid work as the General Secretary of the China Sunday School Union. It is proposed to continue this arrangement, giving Mr. Tewksbury two native assistants to help him in the general organization, and also to place native secretaries in every Province which is ready for such service.

After conferring with those best informed, the following were stated to be the Provinces which should be manned: Chihli, Shantung, Szechwan, Hupeh, Hunan, Kiangsi, Chekiang, Kwangtung, and Fukien. The average density of population in these ten provinces is 400, Shantung Province leading with 683 to the square mile. Compare this with 191 to the square mile in the state of New York, and 100 in Illinois. To take care of the program outlined above for the Sunday-school organization of China will require a budget of at least $18,000.

China's population is 400,000,000. Of the sixty million children of school age only four million are being publicly educated. The Christian Primary school with its Bible teaching will be for many years the principal hope for the education of these millions. As showing the advance in Sunday-school work in China, there has been an increase of 60,000 in the weekly distribution of Lesson Helps during the past year. The following statement regarding Sunday-school work has been made by J. W. Bashford, Methodist Bishop for China:

"The Sunday-school work in China appeals to lovers of men in America, first, because of the great economy with which it has been conducted in connection with our schools and churches; second, because it lays hold on the young life of China and helps to cast that life into the Christian mold; third, because China is the largest nation in the world, and fourth, because China is now passing through the greatest transition in her history. If she can be guided in this transition by Christian ideals, we shall see something like one-fourth of the human race enter upon a new civilization and become a strong factor in bringing the Kingdom of Heaven to earth."

DIED.

Patterson.—Anna Patterson, nee Lofflin, born Jan. 13, 1830, died May 28, 1917; married June 5, 1853, to Rev. Jacob C. Patterson.

This union was blessed with eleven children, nine of whom still survive.

She joined the Methodist Protestant Church in girlhood and continued a consistent member until death removed her from earthly scenes at the age of eighty-seven years, four months, and fifteen days.

This long life of faithful service is deserving of more than passing mention. She was truly "a mother in Israel." Many of the pastors of the Methodist Protestant Church can testify that her home was in fact as well as in name, "the preacher's home."

The neighbors received help in trouble and sickness, and comfort in sorrow and bereavement.

Though of limited literary attainments she, because of her loving sympathy and large experience, was looked to for advice and counsel. The sick children especially wanted to "send for Mrs. Patterson."

She lived a life that exemplified the power of grace divine, and died trusting the Savior that had been so much to her in life. The day before she died she said she did not know whether she would get well or not, but "it's all right," and almost in the language of Paul who said, "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." On May 29, the mortal remains were deposited in the last resting place, a large congregation testifying by their presence to the esteem in which she was held. Services conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. J. E. Hall of the Moravian Church and Rev. Wm. Beckner of the Dunkards. C. H. Whitaker.

Mabry.

Our hearts were made sad on the morning of June the 2nd when our Heavenly Father who never makes mistakes saw best to take from us little Eddie Mabry. He was 18 yrs., 1 mo. and 10 ds. old, although you would not have taken him to be past 12 yrs. He had been an invalid for the past ten years, having had infantile paralysis when 8 yrs. old. The immediate cause of his death we pneumonia. In his early childhood he expressed a desire to join the church and he has ever lived a devoted Christian life. He bore his affliction with all patience and was never heard to murmur a word of complaint.

It was hard for us to give Eddie up, but we realize that it is far better with him. All was done for him that loving friends and faithful physicians could do, but the Lord needed him, therefore let us try to submit to His will.

He leaves a widowed mother, one sister, grandparents and other near relatives to mourn their loss. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones and help them to be ready to meet him on the other shore.

"We love thee well, Eddie,
But Jesus loves thee best."

His Aunt.

The Lord, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to take from earth to Heaven one of our sweet little Cradle Roll members, Sarah Rebecca Dorsey. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Dorsey, of Hollister. Age, 1 yr., 8 mos. and 4 ds. We can't see now why our little ones should be taken away, but "sometime we'll understand."

Fond parents, the Lord lent you this little flower to bloom in your home for a season, but has now taken her home with Him in Heaven. Weep not, she is not dead, but sleepeth "safe in the arms of Jesus." May God comfort the bereaved father, mother, sisters, and brother.

Mrs. W. A. Delbridge,
Cradle Roll Supt.

Great Loss at Gibsonville.

Our church, and, in fact the entire town of Gibsonville was shocked by what might be called a sudden death of Sister Sallie A. Huff, which occurred on Sunday evening at about 10 o'clock, June the 10th. Sister Huff was taken with paralysis on Wednesday, after which she was not able to speak until the end came. Her health had seemingly been better than usual for some weeks.

Sister Huff was a daughter of the late Berry Davidson and was born at Snow Camp in Alamance Co., Jan. 7, 1856. Her age at her death was a little over 61 years.

She was converted at 15 years of age at Bethlehem Christian church in Alamance Co. and joined the M. P. church at Bethel on the Alamance Ct., where she continued a faithful girl member until the building, largely by her father, of Fairview church, where she with the family moved their membership and joined as charter members. She remained a member of this church until about the year 1894, when she moved her membership to Gibsonville, where she has been a faithful member until her death. She was a teacher in S. S. and organist for the church for nearly a fourth of a century.

In the year 1888 she was united in marriage to O. L. Huff. After their marriage they moved to Mocksville, Davie Co., for a number of years.

From this place they moved to Gibsonville, where her husband was successfully engaged in milling business until his death five years ago. To this marriage was born one son, W. N. Huff, who is now located in Gibsonville. She also leaves one full brother, Bro. W. N. Davidson, of Gibsonville, and two sisters, Mrs. John and Rev. T. J. Ogburn. Also two half brothers, J. C. Davidson of Fayetteville, and Dwight L. Davidson, of Gibsonville. Sister Huff had a very high regard for that which she believed to be right and was true to her convictions. Our church and town of Gibsonville will greatly miss her. Her son and the entire family have our heart-felt sympathy.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Union Grove, Orange Ct.—I exchanged pulpits with Bro. F. C. Lester, Sunday. Bro. Lester conducted the communion service for me on that day, but he reports that he was rained out in the morning, but had a good service in the afternoon notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. At this time Miss Maggie Williams was given her church letter of dismissal from Union Grove to join the M. E. Church, South, at West Durham. While we regret to give her up, our prayers and best wishes go with her as she joins her new church home.

On last Friday night while in the hospital at Durham for treatment death called away the Baldwin child (whose given name we are not able to give). Our prayers and deepest sympathy are with the loved ones in their sorrow and grief over the departure of their child and little brother.

We are planning to have our children's day service at Union Grove on next second Sunday.

J. Clyde Auman, Pastor.
June 12, 1917.

Union Grove, Yadkin College Ct.—Last Sunday was our day for preaching service. Bro. Cecil was with us in S. S. and then at 3 P. M. preached a very helpful sermon. Owing to the rainy weather there were not as many present as usual. Our S. S. gives the collection taken on every second Sunday to the Children's Home. Last Sunday it amounted to $1.24.

We voted on the delegates for the Annual Conference.

Under the new Forward Movement plans our church has been keeping up its finances pretty well, over paying part of the time. We had the pleasure of having our pastor in our home last Sunday night.

He left early Monday morning to visit Mr. Lineberry Motsinger, who is very sick at this writing, we are sorry to note.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Bertha Mock, Reporter.

The cold weather has been against the girls' tomato crop, still they hope to raise a crop and gain much knowledge in cultivating and canning. The little boys are rejoicing because they have lettuce and radishes large enough to eat.

Our corn crop has made a fine start The field is looking green. H. A. Garrett.

MARRIED.

Beautiful Home Wedding.

A beautiful home wedding took place last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Adams, on Marshall street, when their daughter, Ruby, was united in marriage to Mr. Roby Wagner, Rev. Dr. D. Clay Lilly officiating.

The parlor was simply, though effectively, decorated in field daisies and English ivy, the bridal couple standing under a wedding bell of daisies.

Before the service Mrs. M. H. French of Wilmington, sister of the bride, sang "Because I Love You, Dear," accompanied by Miss Bessie Wagner, of Lexington, the bridegroom's sister.

The bridal party entered the room to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by another sister, Miss Elsie Adams.

The only attendants were Miss Edith Adams, maid of honor, gowned in pink taffeta, and carrying pink roses, and Mr. C. M. Thomas, best man. During the beautiful ring ceremony, Miss Adams played softly, "Melody of Love." The bride was given away by her father and was attractively attired in a traveling suit of dark blue, with accessories to correspond, her bouquet being of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

Following the service, the guests were shown into the dining-room, where pink and white roses were used in profusion. The lovely bride's cake all wreathed in roses, was cut by the guests amid much merriment, and delicious punch and cake were enjoyed.

A great many valuable and beautiful bridal gifts were much admired, and later Mr. and Mrs. Wagner left for a trip North. Upon their return they will make their home in this city.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. R. J. Wagner and Miss Bessie Wagner, of Lexington, and Mrs. M. H. French, of Wilmington.—Winston paper.

MILLIONS STARVING IN BIBLE LANDS

Immediate help is necessary to save the remnants of peoples once happy and prosperous in Armenia, Syria, Caucasus, Persia, Egypt, Palestine.

Christian America is called upon to provide bare necessities for 2,144,000 homeless dependent people in these lands. Thousands of them are orphans.

War with Turkey cannot prevent distribution of relief since many of these people are refugees in Russian and British spheres of influence.

The story of their deportations and sufferings is harrowing in its details.

Regular continuous contributions are needed. All money handled without expense by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, Chas. R. Crane, Treas., 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Southern Railway System

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

An Ambition and a Record

THE needs of the South are identical with the needs of the Southern Railway: the growth and success of one means the upbuilding of the other.

The Southern Railway asks no favors—no special privilege not accorded to others.

The ambition of the Southern Railway Company is to see that unity of interest that is born of co-operation between the public and the railroads; to see perfected that fair and frank policy in the management of railroads which invites the confidence of governmental agencies; to realize that liberality of treatment which will enable it to obtain the additional capital needed for the acquisition of better and enlarged facilities incident to the demand for increased and better service; and, finally—

To take its niche in the body politic of the South alongside of other great industries, with no more, but with equal liberties, equal rights and equal opportunities.

—A German air raid over England yesterday killed near a hundred people and wounded over four hundred.

Fairview, Anderson Ct.—Our Sunday school is very good, having 91 present Sunday.

Our pastor preached two very interesting sermons the first Sunday in the month, although the congregations were small on account of rain.

The forward movement institute workers were with us Tuesday. Sorry the congregttion was small, but the farmers are very busy in their crop. Rev. N. G. Bethea talked on Evangelism, Rev. C. W. Bates on Literature and Rev. O. B. Williams on social service in the church. Bro. Bethea also spoke on the every-member canvass, using chart on the wall, making our duty to our church, and how to succeed, very plain.

The ttlks were all very interesting and helpful. I trust we will take up the work and go forward, work more for the interest of our church and Sunday school than we ever have before.

We were sorry Rev. G. W. Holmes couldn't be with us Tuesday; hope he will come later.

While here Bro. Bethea organized a Sunday egg club with nine members. The money to go to the Children's Home.

TUESDAY AT SUMMER CONFERENCE.

An hour's pleasant ride beside Rev. T. M. Johnson in his auto landed us at Oak Ridge at 10:20 A. M. We at once entered the church and found Mrs. A. G. Dixon just closing an address on the Christian Endeavor Society, which she spoke of as the "pastor's assistant." Dr. Benson was called upon to pursue the subject further. He said the Christian Endeavor organization is a good scheme, but it must be worked and rightly worked to get the benefit of it. He does not believe in making it a scheme of finance. He does not believe in putting the financial operations of the church into the hands of the children. Some children have been thus imposed upon until they think that religion consists in collecting pennies, he says. C. E. Societies have been killed by making them means to financial ends. Certain preachers have left a trail of dead societies behind them by such a process. The social needs of the young people must be provided for. The temptations appealing to the young are greater today than ever before and the young people must be saved not only for their own sake but for the sake of the church. A church that loses its young people may lose its life. About 75 per cent. of our churches in Maryland have young people's organizations and I pray God that you may co-operate in the work for the young people.

Dr. C. E. Forlines came on at eleven o'clock for an hour's lecture. He spoke of this as an age of progress. Progress has brought new problems. Not only has necessity produced inventions for use in the material world, but necessity requires new adaptations and new methods in the social and religious world. Children are not educated in the home now as in former times. The work of education and training has in large measure passed over to the community. If the church fails to catch the forward movement spirit, it will be left behind by the world and will fail to exert its proper influence. In the processes of life, human character is being formed and fixed. The church should have a great part in the formation of character by bringing right influences to bear upon the young. Young people are impressed by examples. Hence the importance of correct lives in their associates. But the examples of the characters in the fiction young people read also make an impression, and they will read fiction. Good fiction is needed because perfect examples may be presented there, not found in real life. Good biography is also valuable in forming good character. The biography of Jesus shows us a perfect man, but living in another age and clime. We must translate his spirit into our conditions and try to do as Jesus would do in our place. With the need of good examples, we must also recognize the need of some power to enable us to distinguish the good from the bad and appreciate the difference. This power is found in the Holy Spirit as he operates in the human mind and heart. And the cleansing blood of Christ who died for our sins must be recognized. All mere human appliances would be vain without these divine agencies but the divine agences have been provided, and we must provide the human appliances.

Dinner time followed. The members of the conference were most hospitably entertained by the people of Oak Ridge community. It fell to our good lot to be entertained with others in the home of Prof. T. E. Whitaker, whose wife is a daughter of that staunch layman and whole-souled Methodist Protestant, the late J. Lee Ogburn.

We met again in the church at 2:30 P. M. Supt. Garrett, of the Children's Home, made a brief address telling us how much the children were disappointed that we did not meet at the Home this year, and assuring us that we will always be welcomed there. He said the Home had had its most successful year. The children had made good progress and the farm crops are growing well.

Bro. Bethea put in a word, saying he had just organized three new Sunday Egg clubs for the benefit of the Home.

Rev. T. M. Johnson came on with an address on Our Responsibility to Our Own in the Matter of Education. Failing to provide educational institutions, we are like a church that fails to provide places of worship, depending on the provision of other denominations. There are plenty of schools, but they are not ours and they are not working especially for our interests. To be educated in a school of one's own denomination strengthens one's loyalty to his own church. Schools may draw young people away from church, from the Bible. and from God. He told of a sad case of a young man whose faith had been thus destroyed. He brought his Bible and gave it to Bro. Johnson, saying he had no further use for it, and Bro. Johnson still has this sad memento of a blasted life. Character is formed during the educational process. Other churches recognize this fact, and so should we. We should prepare for education into the highest and truest manhood and womanhood. Our people are awake to the need, and are willing to give money to provide for it. We should go forward in the matter. This is no time for slackers or quitters.

Bro. Dixon spoke briefly expressing the conviction that we must have a college for our own or suffer serious if not disastrous loss as a church.

Rev. J. D. Williams then came on with a stirring address on "Reaching the Reached and Saving the Saved." In his judgment and that of others, a large percentage of church members are only nominal Christians, and some in the church do not even profess to be Christians. Those within the church who have only a form of godliness and not its power constitute a great field for work. They should be preached to as common sinners. The minister should "cry aloud and spare not." Nominal Christians should be made to realize that there is no hope of salvation without experiencing the regenerating power of God's Holy Spirit in the heart. Pastors and churches should be more careful in receiving church members to see that they have repented of sin and that they are submitting them-

PREPAREDNESS.

There is a city I am told,
Where all the streets are paved with gold.
A place prepared for you and me
Where we may spend eternity.

If God's word is true there is no doubt of the truth of this statement, and it seems to be the part of wisdom for us to spend every moment of our conscious existence in getting ready for that glorious home of the soul; but are we doing it? Perhaps we are trusting to divine grace to make up anything we may lack in preparedness instead of using the grace ourselves to fit ourselves for the company of our elder Brother, and the holy angels. If we were invited to some grand entertainment just for one evening we would use our best efforts to be perfect in dress and deportment—the most minute detail would be carefully attended to. We would not be satisfied to let any one outshine us, or our children; but when we are invited to the great marriage supper of the Lamb we go carelessly on without a thought of how we will appear in that great white blaze of glory.

Can we believe that our Savior will take pleasure in introducing us to the Father dressed in the filthy rags of worldliness, and selfishness, Sabbath breaking and impurity, dishonesty and greed, malice and envy and evil speaking and lack of love for Him and the cause?

Do we sit back and sing:
"Jesus, thy blood and righteousness
My beauty are, my glorious dress," and expect to depend on that alone? They are indispensable in our salvation, but we will find the abode of the blessed very disappointing if heaven does not begin while we tabernacle in the flesh.

The Master said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." To whom was He speaking? Every single human soul that takes the name of Christ, and we are not failing to do it, either for or against God's great plan of salvation. Would you dare to believe that we can go in and out, among our fellow men for one day, and leave no impression for good or evil on them? If you have turned some sinner from his evil way, or even caused him to reflect on his evil course you have accomplished that much in preparing your raiment for the day of days. If you have made one person believe less in the God you profess to worship it is a few more soils that will appear at the time you will most wish to be spotless.

This is a time that tries men's souls. In this boasted twentieth century of gospel light, folks with a zeal worthy of a better cause pick the Bible to pieces on all occasions. "The laws made by divine wisdom for our government being formulated in the 'dark ages'(?) are entirely inadequate for this grand advanced age." They say in regard to the Sabbath—"It has never been incumbent on us to observe the Sabbath since Christ and his followers went through the barley field, and satisfied their hunger by eating of the growing corn." The Master explained the situation. He only meant that in future labor to relieve suffering was not unlawful, but all other kinds were just as they had been. The seventh day of rest—meaning one day out of every seven—is just as necessary for man physically and spiritually as the air he breathes, but it is Satan's favorite way into the hearts of poor blind humanity to make them believe that they are losing heir rightful enjoyment by keeping the Sabbath day holy, or set apart for mental and spiritual rest. Did you ever hear of a person being a better Christian after he forsook the house of God on the Sabbath day, and went careering over the country in an automobile? It is doubtless all right to go anywhere on the Sabbath when we can take Christ along, but we know from ancient history, and present experience that Christ is at the church on the Sabbath day, at the hours that people congregate there for worship. Then, we are informed that people know too much to deny themselves of all ungodliness and worldlip lusts, and to essay to live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world. There may really be no hereafter, and we ought not to be expected to reject a certainfy for an uncertainty—so we will compromise on some new laws that our smartest(?) people think are more reasonable, at least easier to enforce, than those made by divine love. "If we expect young people to attend church you must have something to amuse them." Moving picture shows, all kinds of worldly enertainments and every conceivable kind of catch-penny organizations are expected to desecrate the house of God to draw a congregation. All these institutions of the Evil One are substituted for the old-time loving service to God which is only made possible by an indwelling Savior. If one speaks of its being a pleasure for a child of God to serve Him they will laugh you to scorn, and the greatest pity of all is that little innocent children are trained from early childhood to look on vital piety as a fairy tale. One man expressed the opinion that if people had to be taken into the church only when they had received Holy Ghost baptism we could never raise money enough to pay a pastor, and we would have to do without one.

The forward movement! What is it? Every child of God must save one soul—or be the means of bringing one to Christ—every year. That would be grand, but very surely we cannot introduce a person to the Savior if we do not know Him ourselves.

If we are preparing ourselves for that "City Beautiful" we must live every day with an eye single to the glory of its Founder, and we can only do that with His abiding presence, and when people take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus they will not fail to fall into line.

VICTORY.

(From an address by Rev. W. H. Neese at Shady Grove Children's Day service.)

I believe that victory will be ours when the present conflict has reached its final consummation. It will mean victory in thoughts higher than those contained in mere military terms. Even though our nation should go down in military defeat, her glory and honor will be forever exalted for having sacrificed her billions of dollars and her millions of sons, for the lofty ideal and supreme purpose of obtaining universal peace. When that time of peace comes it will mean victory, not only for liberty-loving America, but victory for the human race.

The crisis through which we will necessarily have to pass in order to attain to our high hopes and holy ideals, will be in a measure equal, if not greater, to the anguish of myriads of lacerated hearts on that fearful, frightful night when the destroying angel slew the flower of Egyptian manhood. However severe and trying the departure of a mother's soldier son may be, she can well afford to rejoice in having bequeathed to her country and to her God, a noble son willing to sacrifice his own life in the interests of a noble cause.

God never intended that we should live wholly for self, nor for the present alone. We are to live for one another, and for the general betterment of the human family. We are under divine obligations to so shape our lives and conduct here, as to insure the perpetual peace and happiness of those around us, and of those later on who will follow the trail that we have blazed for them.

The victory that shall be ours and the victory in which the whole world will rejoice, will be heralded by the dawning of a new day. Even while the war clouds are at their darkest, and hell is sending forth volumes of curling smoke, the non-church-going and non-praying men and women will begin to call mightily upon God. When sons are away, somewhere, and home and all else appears trembling in a balance, then God will be remembered as their only refuge and their only abiding hope. The non-praying will then catch a new vision and selves to God and enjoying a Christian experience. Church activity will not take the place of the religion of the heart. We can't save eople by giving them an office in the church. They must be saved in the gospel way. In order to reach this great mass of lifeless church members, we must make a mighty effort and a thoughtful effort and a combined effort. The so-called "faithful few" must become really in earnest and both they and the pastor must set the example of a true type of personal piety. We must be "good people to live with," we must have a real regard for those about us and do our best to bring them out from the domination of the world into living relation with Christ. The preaher must know what sin is and what conduct is sinful. He must not be blind to the evil in the life of the wealthy or those high in social standing. He must preach the truth of God fearlessly and lovingly as a true man of God. We must not try to rope people into the church with the plea that the church needs them because of their intelligence or character. We must show them that they need the church and that without the salvation of Christ they are forever lost and undone. We must let people know that there is more satisfaction in the religion of Jesus Christ than in all the world can bestow. Then God will be magnified in the church and will reveal His glorious power.

Rev. N. G. Bethea gave an address on the "Hallelujah Side of the Gospel." He referred to the view that all that is necessary is to get people converted, that they will then of their own volition do their full duty in the matter of giving as in other matters. He said this is a mistaken view, that people need instruction and good examples and frequent reminders to develop the habit of liberality. Some spurned shouting in church, he said; but he thought the time might come when they would be glad to hear some shouting. He thought people should preach tithing and practice it, and then they will have greater things to rejoice over. He told a splendid story of a traveling man which we hope we may print in full; so we will only refer to it now. He gave some of his own experiences illustrating and proving the point that we can rejoice better after we have helped somebody. The happiest Christmas day of his life was at a time when he had at considerable effort collected means to help some people in need. The hallelujah side, the "glory" side, comes as a result of helping somebody.

At night Dr. Lyman E. Davis spoke on Spiritual Forces in Forward Movements. He gave examples of men who had led in great forward movements (such as Moses, Luther, Washington) and showed that all of them had been prepared for their leadership by spiritual power within their own souls. So it must always be. The forward movement in our church must first be a movement within the souls of its members. Some are waiting for the Forward Movement to come along. It can never come along. It must come from within. It is far more important to move forward than to have the "Forward Movement."

In our forward movement, the pastor must be the primary instrument of progress. While he cannot move for his people, he can inspire and awaken by his word and example. It was an address abounding in fine pasages which we cannot reproduce here, and closing with a humorous poem entitled "Dr. Grit and Deacon Grace" which we may be able hereafter to give to our readers in full.

We regretted that we could not stay for the address of Dr. Benson which immediately followed.

VALUE OF LITTLE BIRDS.

The birds are the best friends that we have. Why? Because they labor daily in the fields, destroying the insects that kill or feed upon the tender plants upon which human lives rely. Have you a friend that will labor for you just for his board and clothing? No, indeed; you cannot place your eye upon any that will do this for you, except the birds which are being slaughtered by boys and men in large numbers. They are willing to do this if only allowed to live. Why do you not try to protect these friends who are so faithful to you, when they ask you for no pay for their services? Do you not realize that they are worth hundreds of times more to you as insect destroyers than their flesh is worth to you in a bird pie or in some other way?

The birds are needed more and more every year. As people increase and the clearing of lands goes on, the insects are bound to increase very rapidly, and if the insects increase why should not the birds increase also? It is because they haven't had the protection that they ought to have had. Some of the species of birds that used to be found in large numbers are now very seldom found at all, simply because they have not received any mercy from the hunter, and because the laws have not been strict enough to prevent people from killing them.

Boys and girls should feel it their duty to do all in their power to get laws passed that will give the little friends in feathers better protection.

The law-makers in Washington, D. C., have a bill before them which, if passed, will guarantee life to thousands, probably millions, of birds in every state of the Union. Every young reader of this page is asked to do whatever he can for his community and in his country to help save the birds that do good to all humanity.—Our Dumb Animals.

PRAYING FOR PROSPERITY.

In the Old Testament dispensation material and physical welfare were looked upon as the chief evidences of the goodness of God. Prosperity is indeed the gift of God and should always be thankfully received and sacredly dispensed. The source, sanctity, and need of prosperity are revealed in the following prayer and its answer: "And Jabez called upon the God of Israel, saying, Oh that thou wouldst bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou mightst keep me from evil, that it might not grieve me! And God granted him that which he requested." 1 Chron. 4: 10. Jabez asked God for two kinds of prosperity, increase of worldly goods and exemption from suffering and sorrow. For health and happiness are the tokens of God's goodness as truly as lands and harvests. But since prosperity is so often abused and becomes a curse instead of a blessing, extreme care should be taken as to the spirit in which and the purpose for which it is requested in prayer.

THE "PARD" IN TROUBLE.

A waif of a boy was eating a stale half-loaf on the street corner yesterday with the air of a starveling, when a stray dog came along and crouched at his feet. The hungry look remained in the boy's eyes; but he glanced down at the vagabond dog, and said in a friendly way:

"Wot you want? This ain't no bone. Git!"

The dog moved off a little, and again it crouched and looked wistfully at the food.

"Say, do you want this wuss nor I do?" asked the waif. "Speak, can't yer?"

The dog gave a quick bark, and the boy threw him the rest of the loaf.

"Nuff said," he remarked, as he watched him eat ravenously: "I ain't the feller to see a pard in trouble."

And the boy went one way, and the dog he had befriended another, both the better for the encounter.—Detroit Free Press.

DIED.

Hunter.

J. G. Hunter was born Aug. 4, 1864, and departed this life June 12, 1917. He had been sick all the spring, but not confined to his room. He was taking a treatment for heart dropsy, which called for salts, and this never failed to make him sick. While contending with the salts sickness he fell from the porch and when taken up breathed only twice. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh.

Mr. Hunter was married April 1, 1879, to Miss Sallie E. Hutchins. To this union were born four daughters; and one son who died in infancy. His wife died Dec. 14, 1913. Mr. Hunter was a good husband, a kind father and a good neighbor.

He had been a member of Union Chapel for 14 years or more. He was laid to rest by the side of his companion in the cemetery at Union Chapel to await the resurrection morn. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. T. F. McCulloch.

Weep not, dear children, father has heard the Master's final call; his work on earth is o'er.

Funeral of Sallie A. Huff.

The funeral of Sister Sallie A. Huff was held at the M. P. Church of Gibsonville, Tuesday, June 12, 11 A. M., conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, assisted by Rev. Mr. Clapp of the Christian Church and Rev. Mr. Umberger of the M. E. Church.

The large congregation more than filled the capacity of the church. The floral display was unusually beautiful and profuse.

After the services at the church the funeral procession proceeded by automobiles to Bethlehem Christian Church, where also a very short service was held, and the body was laid to rest in the cemetery beside her husband. In the cemetery also was buried her father, the late Berry Davidson. J. H. B.

Those Whom God Has Called to Their Eternal Reward.

On the thirteenth of April, 1917, God called Mrs. Mildred Perry Lee Isley to her eternal reward. The funeral service was conducted in the home by the writer. She left a husband, seven children, twenty-three grand children, and three great grand children to mourn their loss. In early life she gave her life to Jesus Christ at Friendship, Methodist Protestant Church.

On June 12th the three year old son of J. B. and Bessie Sharp answered the call of our heavenly Father. Funeral services conducted by the writer in Friendship Methodist Protestant Church.

On June 14th Mrs. Barbara Loy came to the end of her earthly suffering and her soul returned to God. Her earthly pilgrimage was 77 years, 11 months and 12 days. She leaves to mourn their loss seven children, forty-two grand children and three great grand children. Her childhood was spent in St. Paul's Lutheran Church. After marriage she connected herself with Mt. Hermon Methodist Protestant Church. Her life still lives in the valuable citizenship of the children she leaves behind. Funeral services conducted by the writer in Mt. Hermon Church and her body laid to rest in Mt. Hermon cemetery. J. A. Burgess.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Ct.—Our pastor filled his appointment here the second Sunday in May and preached another good sermon. The Lord's supper was administered; there were a good many that partook of it. Our pastor wasn't with us the second Sunday in June, as the day was rainy. Was sorry it wasn't so our pastor could be with us. Although the day was bad there were a few out, and they had service.

There has been right much sickness in the community. The sick ones are on the mend now, I am thankful to say. Sunday school and prayer meeting are fairly good and still improving.

Mr. Paul Hawkins, a popular young man of this community, and Miss Annie Lucius, a popular young girl from Aurelian Springs, were recently married; hope for them a long and happy life together. Vannah Shearin, Rep.

A FIG FOR THE SPARROWS.

Frank Denby sat on the front steps of his father's house and surveyed his mother's flower beds with a prospecting eye. Time was flying faster than his camping funds were growing and he was still two dollars short of the price of a scout tent.

"Mother," he began tentatively, "a thorough weeding wouldn't hurt your flower beds. I see a good many little patches of grass, and the walks are not specially clean."

Mrs. Denby, sitting at the window, raised her eyes from her sewing and looked out over the garden.

"You're right, Frank, but old Dick is going to give me a day next week. You wouldn't take the old man's job away from him, would you?"

"No," said Frank, dubiously, "but I certainly would like to get a job myself.."

His mother sewed thoughtfully for a while and then she spoke.

"The figs are beginning to ripen. If you'll manage to keep the sparrows from pecking holes in the fruit and spoiling it you may have all the figs from one tree to sell. But you can't peddle them. You must make a sale to the fruit market.

"Nick Shapiro will buy them from me. I'll see him today," said Frank. The scheme struck him as being a good one.

"And you'll have to get up early in the morning, for that is when the sparrows get in their work," added Mrs. Denby.

Frank pulled himself up from the steps with energy for fresh enterprise.

"Guess I'll go take a look at the prospect," he volunteered.

There were three fig-trees, loaded with fruit just approaching a state of luscious ripeness. Frank raised his hand and picked one of the figs to break it open. In the softest spot, where the fruit showed a faint reddish tinge, was an ugly, jagged hole, somewhat larger than a sparrow's beak. He tried others to find that a goodly portion of the ripest figs had been ruined in the same way. Then he went back to the house, got out his shotgun, and began to clean it. Half an hour later he was on his way down town to make the deal with Nick and to purchase a good supply of bird shot.

"Where are you bound for, Frank?" a voice called to him as he passed his next door neighbor's gate at a pace that prefigured death to sparrows. Old Mr. Benson was sitting under the big oak in his front yard and Frank stopped at his question to explain where he was going and why.

"You needn't shoot the sparrows," said the old man when Frank had finished; "I'll tell you a way to make them let your figs alone. They're afraid of white string, and if you'll get a big ball of it and interlace your fig-bushes with it you won't be troubled by sparrows."

Frank looked sceptical.

"I don't see how they can be afraid of white string," he protested. "They're not afraid of anything else under the sun." He rather held to the gun and bird shot as trustier means of protecting his interests.

"Try the twine," said Mr. Benson.

The deal with Nick was made to the satisfaction of both the contracting parties, but Frank went home in a still uncertain frame of mind, having purchased a large ball of twine and no bird shot. He went out immediately to set about carrying out Mr. Benson's instructions, but as he twisted the string in and out among the twigs and leaves he felt as if his task was a fruitless one. Nevertheless he finished it up with thoroughness, and if the twine had been more ornate in character his mother's fig-trees, when he got through, would have presented the appearance of gayly bedecked Christmas a new inspiration, and the thrill of a new born faith will burst into a petition beseeching God to save. "God save!" All the way from the trembling hearthstone to the far off smoke of battle, the cry of burdened hearts will be, "God save!" When the war clouds finally scatter, and the cannon cease to thunder, the sun of peace will shine over all the earth. God will be recognized and sought after as man's only lasting comfort and hope. Out of the blood of the sacrifices that are being offered up today there is destined to come forth a purer race, and a holier people. The loftiest hope and the noblest motive that would inspire me to the complete and faithful performance of my duty on the foreign blood-soaked fertile fields, would be the hope of a glorious dawning of a new day, and the coming of a better race.

HOW TO COMBAT THE MOVIES.

Dear Bro. McCulloch: Bro. J. E. Pritchard wanted to know how to combat the influences of the moving picture shows.

This scribe has had no experience at all with patronizing moving picture shows, haven't a penny to throw to the Devil and his works, but would kindly suggest to Bro. Pritchard that our preachers, their wives, sons and daughters stop patronizing the Devil; then perhaps the sport-loving church members will become ashamed of themselves and be sorry if they do a thing their pastor would object to, and stop going, too. Bro. Pritchard, just as long as our preachers and church members follow the world, the sinner will never have a serious thought, because of the leader's example. How it makes me tremble and fear for their safety. How can a preacher, or a consecrated cherch member, so to speak, ask God's care and blessing on them when they are entering in the Devil's door way? Would they be willing for our precious Savior to come along the street, look in and see them mingling with the Evil One's workers, especially making merry with them?

Then parents may reprove their children for going and wasting their precious moments, money too, and be met with a response: "Pastor and family attend, your church members attend. Why not I?" Oh! the awful influence. Protracted meeting comes on, church cold as an iceberg. What's the trouble, pastor and church members? Before the meeting amounts to a row of pins, "all have to get right with God." Why, O why, not get right with Him and stay right and have an influence all the year for good and not evil. It has been very truthfully said, These days it is hard to tell sheep from goats. Preacher, church members, let me implore you, stop and stop now, using your influence for evil, using precious money that the Master needs in the work and preach as you never have before; preach, and implore the people to stay away, save their money in these perilous times of strife, preach and practice what you preach, all you people that have an influence, then when revival meetings come to us, all will be ready to go to work for others and not have to get right with God ourselves.

"MUST ARMENIA PERISH?"

The desperate situation of the people of Western Asia, including Armenia and Syria, receives special consideration in the current issue of the Independent, of New York. There is an editorial by Dr. Hamilton Holt; a communication by Honorable Charles Evans Hughes; a series of graphic illustrations; and an article by Fred P. Haggard, one of the secretaries of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

Mr. Haggard's article is entitled "Must Armenia Perish?" and opens with the following pathetic incident:—

"A rug merchant's shop on Madison Avenue is a long way from Turkey, but it proved to be an open window through which I beheld Armenia's woe from a new angle. Recognizing the man's nationality, I ventured to express my interest in his people. His reaction was immediate and his trembling voice and moist eye led me to suspect that his feeling was not due simply to race loyalty. Yes, there was more and he would tell me his story.

"It was nearly thirteen years ago that I came to America with my little Armenian bride. Business opened favorably for me and I prospered. When the time came to celebrate our tenth wedding anniversary we talked over different plans but at last I said, 'I have it! Instead of a celebration here with presents, I will send you and the children back home. We will not tell the old folks. You will surprise them! So in the fateful summer of 1914 they sailed. I confess I cried. It was hard to be separated for the first time from my dear one, but what joy would come to the aged parents! And then,' and the man bowed in agony, 'came the war! They had just arrived at their destination and I acted promptly, you may believe. The authorities at Washington were most kind. Through the Embassy at Constantinople they located my wife and the children and forwarded money I placed in their hands. I learned that my dear ones were well, but alas—I could not hear from them. More than two years have passed and still there is no personal letter though I am assured that they are still preserved. While they are not permitted to return, I have not lost hope that I shall see them again. But you can imagine my feelings in view of what I know is taking place all around them, that practically all the Armenians of the town where they are have been killed or driven away and that any day I may learn that they are no more—or worse!"

The haunting fear expressed by this one man rests like a nightmare upon thousands of Armenian homes in America, only in hundreds of cases the full story is known—their loved ones have perished or have been driven as exiles into the mountains or deserts from which they may not live to return."

Other extracts from the article follow:

"The evident intention of the Turkish authorities was to exterminate these Christian races. 'Turkey for the Turks' became a watchword of the leaders who thought it possible at last, once for all, while the powers were busily engaged elsewhere, to rid themselves of those who were so provokingly prosperous and who were, when harassed, able to secure sympathy from western nations."

Gruesome as this recital has been, not half the story has been told. Letters, pamphlets photographs, reports and books by eye-witnesses and investigators lie before me in profusion as I write. But further draft upon these sources is unnecessary. The case is established. Armenia's centuries long persecution has reached its climax. Flesh and blood cannot endure more."

"Is there any hope? Can the remnant be saved? Hope lies in the spirit of the race which, but for that, would long ago have become extinct. Even in those who still survive amid the scenes of their desolation that spirit remains unbroken. Furthermore, hundreds of thousands of the sons and daughters of Armenia and Syria, now living in western lands, comprise a fellowship whose love and loyalty have not failed and will not fail. These people will live. Their waste places will be rebuilt. Justice will be done."

"But while diplomats and statesmen are working on a solution of the 'Armenian Question,' and without doubt it will this time be a final and satisfactory solution, the duty of America is clear. It must feed the starving millions, it must get ready to rehabilitate them when the war i sover. It is a gigantic but worthy task. Its accomplishment is entirely within our power."

Execution of Syrian Scholar and Reformer.

Turkish newspapers published in Constantinople recently received in this country contain the news of the hanging of the Hon. Sulunian el Bustany.

No particulars have been received as to the cause of his execution. Mr. Bustany is a Syrian from the Province of the Lebanon, and a man of great ability and learning. He had a fondness for the classics, especially the Greek from which he translated the works of Homer into Arabic.

He was elected a deputy from Beirut to the first Parliament under the new Turkish Constitution and was designated to deliver the address of welcome at the opening of that body. This he did in Arabic, Turkish, Armenian, Ancient and Modern Greek, English and French. He completed the last two volumes of the Arabic Encyclopedia begun by his celebrated uncle Butrus Brestany. He was first Minister of Commerce, and later Minister of Education in the Turkish Cabinet.

FREE SPEECH.

Among the things for which America stands is the principle of civil and religious liberty. Nothing can be more un-American than to deny to a man the right to do his own thinking and to utter his own conviction when that conviction is born out of the deepest reverence he has for truth and duty.

We find it difficult to repress our indignation at the absurd charges brought against citizens of the United States, who, differing from the majority of their fellows on the question of war or peace, are denounced as traitors to their country, burnt in effigy, and virtually ostracized.

We can understand a church so largely convinced that war is the only resort left the nation that it might desire the resignation of a minister who conscientiously believed he could not be true to the teaching of Christianity and uphold war. We cannot conceive of a church accepting such a resignation in any other spirit than that of good will and regret.

We can conceive of neighbors differing widely upon this same question of war or peace, but to charge a man with being false to his flag because he honestly believes he has no moral right to shoulder a gun and go forth to kill someone under that flag, is to show how little one understands the significance and meaning of American history.

Personally we believe there is nothing left for us as a nation to do but to protect ourselves against the forces that have declared war upon the sacred liberties of mankind, and would supplant democracy by autocracy. For all that, we reverence the sincere conviction of the man who differs from us. We hold his right as divine as ours.—Our Dumb Animals.

GREAT RELIGIOUS REVIVAL IN FRANCE.

The war has not been all evil. Its horrors, crimes, cruelties, its terrible hosts of death, its hundreds, nay, thousands of millions of lost treasure, its demoralizing influence on civilian and soldier, all these evils have a counterpart in the heroism, self-sacrifice, pure patriotism and unselfishness which have been so conspicuous, and which, when peace once more blesses the world, will we believe, bear good fruit.

It is only natural that religion should be affected in a very large measure while practically the whole manhood of France has been for over two and a half years in death grips with the enemy. The "Poilu," the hero and pride of his country, has in the trenches had time to think and reconsider his former attitude towards the religion he once flaunted. Beginning by doubting the justness of his former views, and coming in touch with the men for whom he formerly professed contempt, often even hatred, his doubts have become conviction and today he frankly admits his error. The "Clericals" no longer are his pet aversion. The "Poilu" has found in them good clean living comrades, always ready to help, always at hand to speed him on his way to a Heaven he formerly disbelieved in. He has long since seen the folly of attributing to the Clericals, his former Arch-Enemies an imagined conspiracy to rob him of his freedom, to hold the masses in thraldom by preaching a religion he once believed to be an impossible fable unworthy of credence.

Although France has had its periods of unbelief, when we say France we mean a considerable portion of its people, for religion never dies, though for a time eclipsed. A remarkable fact tending to show the return of faith in "La Grande Nation," as it once proudly proclaimed itself to be, is, that twelve years ago the ministry of that day consisted of some fifteen members, eleven of whom were declared agnostics, three figured as Catholics, but one was a "preaching" Catholic. Today the greater number of the present ministry are not only good Catholics but practising ones. In the Army it is the same. Distinguished generals set an example by observing their religious duties and giving opportunities for their men to do so. In all ranks men are no longer ashamed to be seen going to mass as they formerly were. Nowadays men crowd round their priests when Divine help is sought.

In this terrible struggle the priest has displayed a spirit of fraternity,—a self-sacrificing heroism beyond all praise, beyond all belief.

When General Joffre wanted men to carry out a difficult and dangerous mission at the front he said: "I generally employ priests." Over two thousand of these devoted men have given their lives in witness to that love of God and country.

From end to end of France religion has become sacred. A new and purified race will emerge from all the orgies of blood that have stricken the dear Motherland. That so gifted a people as the French should once more embrace the faith they had in a great measure abandoned, and the spectacle of crowded churches filled, as we know, to the very doors, is a comforting fact from which legitimate hope of a better future for the nation is permissible.—Edw. Fox Sainsbury, in Our Dumb Animals.

DID YOU SEE IT?

I mean the Conference steward's report. Was your church represented in that report? If not, why? Half the Conference year is gone and only a few of our churches have paid anything on annual conference budget. What has happened to some of our larger churches? Especially some of those that said they didn't need any Forward Movement Institutes? L. W. Gerringer.

JUDGE LINDSEY AND THE CHILDREN.

Said a prominent New York newspaper some years ago: "All virtuous men will rejoice to learn that a bad boy of ten has been sentenced to a prison term of six years. He will come out of prison peculiarly skilled in crime and entirely beyond reformation. Starting at a tender age with these advantages, he should rank high among the enemies of order and prove a source of great danger and expense to the State."

This is exactly the kind of thing which Judge Lindsey, "the children's judge," has made impossible in Denver. His work has been so successful that it has gained him an international reputation as an authority on juvenile delinquency and, better still, has made good citizens of so-called "bad" boys and girls.

The fact that his labors in behalf of the children of Denver have antagonized the selfish political interests of the State has been the cause of such bitter enmity and virulent attack as few men have been subjected to. But he has won out every time. Once when his enemies were fighting with might and main to prevent his re-election, newsboys on the street were helping to win the victory for him by singing as they sold their papers:

"Who? Which? What? Wisht we was men,
So we could vote for our little Ben!"

tree. His neighbor, George Frost, thought as much when he spied him from the next yard, and called out:—

"What's the answer, Frank? Getting in practice for next Christmas?"

"Haven't got Christmas in the back of my head," said Frank, the shortness of his reply being due mainly to the long tediousness of his job.

At the supper table he unburdened his doubts in the bosom of his always receptive and usually sympathetic family.

"Do you see why sparrows should be afraid of white string?" he asked.

"No. Unless they think they will get their feet caught in it," laughed Mr. Denby. "It may be prenatal instinct. But Mr. Benson wouldn't send you on a wild-goose chase, and there must be something in his idea."

"I'm going out in the morning, and if there's a sparrow in sight I intend to get the bird shot," said Frank.

The sun was just coming up through the big oaks in Mr. Benson's yard when Frank slipped softly out the door and went into the garden. As he came near the fig-trees he was struck by the peculiar stillness, where heretofore his ears had been met with vociferous chatter and the soft flutter of vanishing wings. And instead of finding a small army of marauders he saw one lone sparrow perched for sentinel duty on the topmost twig of the tallest tree. The sentinel retreated precipitately, and Frank began an inspection of the fruit to see if the birds had been in reality kept from injuring it. Not a fig had been molested. They hung untouched, ready to be converted by a little deft manipulation into camping paraphernalia.

A week later Frank sat beside Mr. Benson on the bench under the old oak.

"I cleared three dollars and thirty-five cents on those figs," he announced.

"Cleared?" said Mr. Benson. "You weren't out anything except a ball of string and a little time."—Annie L. McMakin, in the Churchman.

"My body is my house, it is not I.
In it I'll sojourn, 'till in yon fair sky,
'I'll lease a nobler dwelling, built to last
When all the carpentry of earth be past.
From my high place viewing this lone star,
What shall I care where its poor timbers are?
Since though its crumbling walls turn into dust and loam
I shall have left them for my eternal home.
My body is my house, it is not I.
Triumphant in this faith I'll live and die."

Danger in Filling Gasoline Tank.—Friction of gasoline against chamois may generate electricity and unless care is taken to have funnel in good contact with metal part of machine so as to ground this electricity there may be a spark which will cause gasoline to explode.

—A writer in Gleanings in Bee Culture relates an instance in which a swarm of bees kept their honey from being destroyed by fire by fanning it with their wings. Stationing themselves at the entrance of the hive the bees created such a current of air that only a small part of the honey inside melted though the fire burned through the hive in many places. It is a mystery, the writer says, how the bees themselves were able to live in the heat.

—While walking along a country road C. H. Fish, of Maine, was suddenly attacked by a large owl which grabbed his hat and flew with into a tree. Unable to make the bird relinquish its prize, the man borrowed a gun and brought down both hat and bird, but the hat was shot as well as the bird.

—Last year the brewers were spending a great deal of money to tell the farmers that breweries were a necessary market for grain. The brewers are now spending much money to convince the country that they really use very little grain. "Sacred to the memory of John Doe, who departed this life in the fifty-seventh year of his age, bitterly regretting that he must leave the most beautiful and best of wives."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

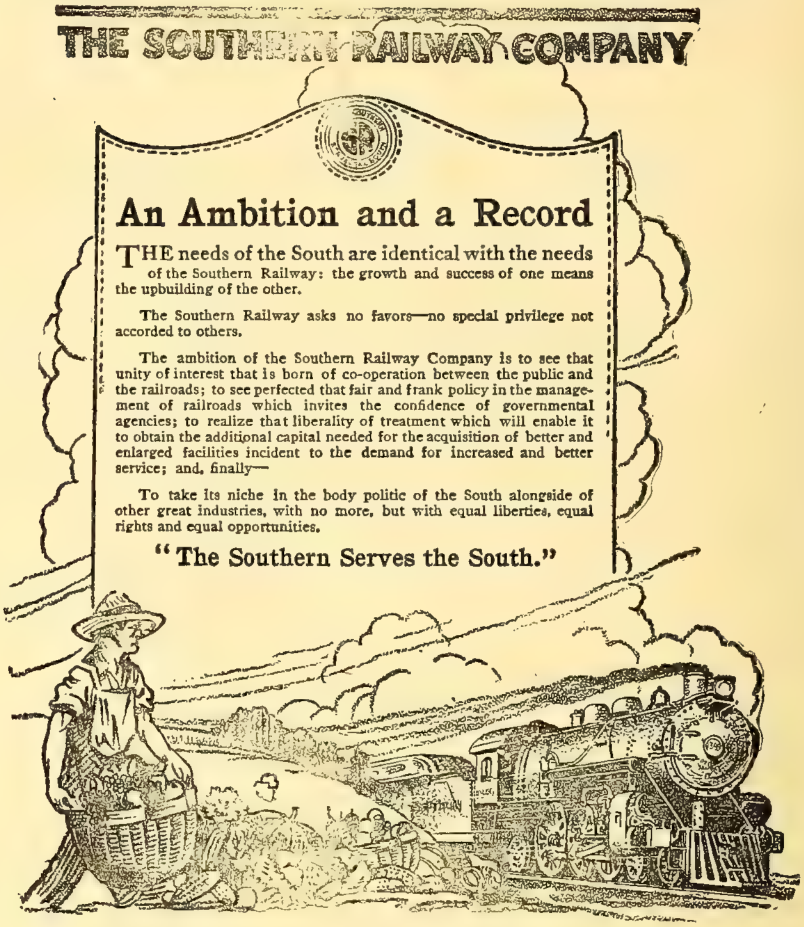
Southern Railway System



An Ambition and a Record

THE needs of the South are identical with the needs of the Southern Railway: the growth and success of one means the upbuilding of the other.

The Southern Railway asks no favors—no special privilege not accorded to others.

The ambition of the Southern Railway Company is to see that unity of interest that is born of co-operation between the public and the railroads; to see perfected that fair and frank policy in the management of railroads which invites the confidence of governmental agencies; to realize that liberality of treatment which will enable it to obtain the additional capital needed for the acquisition of better and enlarged facilities incident to the demand for increased and better service; and, finally—

To take its niche in the body politic of the South alongside of other great industries, with no more, but with equal liberties, equal rights and equal opportunities.

"The Southern Serves the South."

Miss Sutton wrote in remitting: "I noticed in the Herald of May 31, "Ten cents a day will save a life." At first, I persuaded myself that our work needs all my mites, so I passed it by, till I notice in June 7th issue a contribution has been sent in "For Suffering Armenians." I can no longer withhold my help, if a life is at stake; so I am sending six dollars to save a life for sixty days, praying God's blessing on the life it may save.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

A woman, whose life has been long and checkered with many reverses, said lately: "Nothing has given me more courage to face every day's duties and troubles than a few words spoken to me, when I was a child, by my father. He was the village doctor. I came to his office where he was compounding medicine, one day, looking cross and ready to cry.

"What is the matter, Mary?"

"I'm tired. I've been making beds, sweeping and washing all day, and every day, and what good does it do? Tomorrow the beds will have to be made and the dishes washed over again."

"Look, my child," he said, "do you see these little empty vials? They are all insignificant, cheap things, of no value in themselves; but in one I put a deadly poison, in another sweet perfume, in a third a healing medicine. Nobody cares for the vials; it is that which they contain that gives them value. Your daily work, the dishes washed or the floor swept, are homely things and count for little in themselves; but it is the sweet patience, or zeal, or high thoughts that you put into your work that shall last. These make your life."—Youth's Companion.

A NEW BOOK FOR LAYMEN.

''The New Layman for the New Time'' is the title of a new book published by the Fleming H. Revell Co., of New York. It was written by Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College. It is a book that we would be glad for our laymen to read because of the inspiration and suggestiveness. It shows that laymen of our time are falling far behind their privileges and obligations in the work of the church, bringing languishing to a cause that should be flourishing. It shows the layman how to find and fill his place in the work for the advancing kingdom of Christ. Laymen have become rutted in comparative inactivity and in an over-reliance on the minister. This book would lift laymen out of the ruts and set them moving in a broad field of delightful service.

The introduction to the book is by the well-known Christian writer, Amos R. Wells. He regards it as a book for ministers as well as for laymen and says:—''These stirring pages will accomplish a great work if they set ministers and other church leaders everywhere to planning definitely for the aggressive work of laymen. Give the men fit tasks for men, the women work for women, calculated to call out all their powers and make the utmost demands upon their purses, time, strength, intellect, and devotion. They will respond. Boldly, gladly, and promptly they will respond.''

The author says: ''The five chapters comprising this book outline from a layman's standpoint the underlying principles that should animate the modern laymen—that are to-day animating thousands of them, portending a mighty awakening for the Church.''

The publisher's price is 75 cents a copy to which is to be added the postage, but to the first forty persons who send their orders to the Methodist Protestant Herald the book will be sent postpaid for 75 cents. It is a book of 160 pages.

Read it, and it will open your eyes to many fine possibilities in your service for the Master.

The branch of the vine does not worry, and toil, and rush here to seek for sunshine, and there to find rain. No; it rests in union and communion with the vine; and at the right time, and in the right way is the right fruit found on it. Let us so abide in the Lord Jesus.—J. Hudson Taylor.

THE PREACHING WITH AN UNDERTOW.

Bathers by the seaside know, some of them by sad experience, what an undertow is and does. Many an expert swimmer has been drawn by it deep into the deathful waters to rise no more. Such a scene was in the mind of a distinguished pastor who once referred to ''the fatal undertow in sensational preaching.'' There is, therefore, a kind of preaching which is perilous both to the preacher and to his hearers, for it drags them down and drags them under. Beware of the preaching with an undertow!—Ex.

CASUAL REMARKS.

By W. F. G.

This subject is not fiction, but facts about a live people. Perhaps our friends far and near would be glad to read about how we do—how we have been doing, and how we do now, and how well we want to do; and how well we should do.

Our people do not expect to be what is termed peculiar, but we have our ways, our individuality. There is such a thing as individuality belonging to persons and to peoples and to nations and to organizations. Habit has much to do with manners and customs—and we do well to form good habits. We can't be too careful about forming temperate habits—and there is teaching needed. Men and women must be sober and intelligent in order to be safe teachers.

There are many things for us to think about in order to do well—to do our best.

Character as a house has need to be founded solidly and not on the sand. We have need to be taught and instructed—but there is not much scolding needed.

If men and women are disposed to be fiery. and are called to deal with the public, they had better write; and if they can't write they had better serve on the wood hewing, and the water drawing side of life. There is many a man not plowing who has missed his calling.

Our ruralists are about as safe as to calling as any class of people. Our class, under the administration of Joseph, made Egypt rich. They were the dependence for that rich commonwealth that God called Joseph to be responsible for. But this subject means to tell about the simplicity and the safety and even the importance of the life of our humble class.

It is well to devise and plan to use means for well-doing. We often hear it intimated, even by leading speakers and writers that people do well by suffering through deprivations and having hard times—but none of our teachers make choice of enduring such hardships, but all wish to do well for themselves. Well-doing is a great subject for us to think on. Many of our people are deprived of the good things of life, and many are not educated.

Now while I'm writing at a distance about our people, and trying to tell about how we do, if I can say some things that will benefit the relatives I will be glad to do so.

Our people have need to learn, and all, old and young. Some of our aged men and women are more anxious to learn than are some of the young people. The things that belong to our every-day life are the things that we should take hold of.

Life is serious, even for the sake of this short life. The little child thinks that an 80-year-old person has lived in the world a long time, but time seems short to the aged. It is very interesting to the aged to refer back to the days of childhood and youth, and they can tell many interesting things.

There are no people in the world in better shape to be contented and happy than the well-to-do common people—in fact the well-to-do people, who are not very rich are the common people, because the two other extremes are not quite so common. All classes should study economy, and all should practice economy. and frugality for the sake of all others. Such a practice and such a state would belong to charity; and what do we find in this busy world better than charity?

Industry and economy come on the line all the way through life. Our farming class are the first people for the needy world to look to for a living, and they are the main class to be noticed in these writings.

Teaching and training and schooling, and with all being taught the art of work, belong to the essentials for the life of the young people—and then a whole life-time of work. It is a great thing to learn to work, and a fine privilege to be so fortunate as to have work all along through life. The common people who are so well-to-do as to have work of their own, and with it a safe living for life, are really better off than the class who have nothing to do—however rich they may be. However; one great trouble about the class that we term well-to-do is that they manage to have too much work to do—and the overwork is all slavish work. I wish that all could be able to have a regular system for work, or for a refined living. There is no refinement about working one's self to death—even if a man has money in the bank, but the way to be strictly refined is to be able to make the best of life personally, and for those whom one is responsible for. A great thing, a really ideal thing is to have a system for men and women so well arranged that all can have due relief from work every day. The time of 24 hours divided in three parts, eight hours for work, and eight for giving attention to the higher life, and for all the rest and the recreation that is due, and eight hours for the needed sleep. The above belongs to rather the highest ideal for real civilization. We common people don't read enough. We are not sociable enough. We are too busy trying to please the animal, our animal life, and if we don't mind we make ourselves the strangest animals in the world—and over in Europe the human animal (if there is one over there.) has been turned down below the habits of the brute kind.

Of course regular work should be kept up, and there is work for all. We can't enter into the fullness of real life unless we pay due respect to the little things of life. Often the fragments turn out to be the largest part in the measure, and make a prominent appearance for the occasion.

We must not ignore the day of small things; we can't afford to do so. No person can be liberal and charitable without being generous. We live by means; and real life is made up of means. Character is made up of a bundle of habits, and a good life is developed by good deeds. Sacrifice, self denial, belongs to real life for all.

All these things belong to a real social life. The little material things of life are, in the main, to be noticed.

Numbers of men and women start out in life with nothing, and yet many of this class succeed. All ought to succeed, but many do not succeed. Some fail, and some often fail because of adverse circumstances such as they are not responsible for. It is a sad case when those who have toiled and endured and suffered have to live poor and suffer by extreme poverty.

We are creatures of learning; the birds build and provide by instinct, but we are intelligent mainly by learning, and usually poverty and misfortune come by failure to learn. All, old and young, should be willing to learn, should be willing to be taught, so as to learn. This makes it necessary for us to keep in shape to be good listeners; but some people don't listen.

THE DAYS AND THE YEARS.

Elihu felt keenly the disappointment of days and years during the long, painful arguments between Job and his comforters. Job repeatedly condemned God in order to justify himself. Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar failed, either in convincing Job, or in pointing out the falsity of his claims. The young men, even as now, were supposed to keep silent while the aged and more experienced had their say. With high regard for both age and experience, Elihu observed all the courtesies due such people. Finally, in agony that would not be controlled, he exclaimed: "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom." He learned that men didn't gather wisdom, as stones moss, with the coming of the years.

Elihu, unless it be Thomas, is perhaps the worst maligned man in the Bible. He is termed "the young theolog," being "full of matter" and in his own estimation possesses "knowledge complete, exactly enunciated and systematized." His name, "He is my God," furnishes the key to his character. He was patient, courteous, diligent, intelligent and zealous for the honor of God. Being filled with "the inspiration of the Almighty," and celestial fire burning within his breast he was uncompromising in his stand for the right. After the older and more experienced had spoken, Elihu gracefully, forcefully and clearly set forth his views on the subject: not giving a display of his book knowledge; but speaking, like the Apostles, of those things he had seen and experienced.

Harold Bell Wright in "Their Yester days" expressed a great truth in his apt phrase, "It take more than twenty-one years to make a man." Shortly after William Jennings Bryan entered college, he decided a pair of long pants would make him a man and wrote his father about the matter. The father replied, "My son, it takes more than long pants to make a man." The writer recently attended the fiftieth anniversary of his alma mater. The songs of praise and the speeches of jubilation resounded from all sides. The college had lived fifty years. The Alumni, former students and friends rejoiced together. The echo seemed to come back, What has the college lived for? What contribution has she made to her age and generation? The inscription, "Time Tried and Panic Tested," written over a bank in one of the Dakotas, suggests qualities worthy to perpetuate.

The picture of the fig tree, withering away, being cut down, that it might not stand in the way, nor cumber the land; after the Master had gone three seasons to it for fruit, suggests the doom of the unfruitful. When we consider the large number of churches that go from year to year without a convert, and the small number in the others. we often wonder how long the Lord will suffer such to stand in the way and cumber the ground. This barrenness may be due to the conduct of the older members: employing means and methods that either should be in the museum or on the rubbish heap. "The museum or on the rubbish heap. "The constantly before us: sometimes the new may be better and sometimes the old: we must never let our sentiment get the better of our judgment regarding the old and the new; aged and the young. The prayer of the church and the individual should be: "Teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."—Ps. 90: 12.

The days and the years should be our best teacher; a lamp to guide our feet over the untrod paths. The most forceful lesson that time teaches is that men reap what they sow. The life, conduct and habits of the fathers are largely repeated in their sons. Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "Man is an omnibus in which all his ancestors are seated." Some children inherit such tendencies to sin that they go naturally to those sins as ducks to water. I recall a man who lived such a checkered life that he caused the hairs of his father and mother to turn gray prematurely; divorced his wife, left his two sweet boys and married again; divorced his second wife and married his first over. The younger boy with knee pants on carried a pistol for days to kill the father. "Paid back in his own coin," "chickens coming home to roost." "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Men in their darker moods fail to recognize the value of time. Franklin said, "I have had but five fairly happy days." Servius said, "I have been every thing from peasant to emperor and nothing is of any good." St. Bernard wrote, "Life is begun in blindness, continued in toil and ended in emptiness." Jacob in his talk with Pharaoh touched the same dreary vein: "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and I have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage." No wonder Pharaoh remained in his sins. Such testimonies would never make a Felix tremble; persuade Agrippa to become a Christian. Lord Byron wrote

"Through life's dreary road so dim and dirty,
I have dragged on to three and thirty;
What have these years brought to me?
Nothing except three and thirty."

In contrast hear the Apostle Paul rejoicing, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day." The cry of victory as Jesus deposited His Spirit in the hands of His Father has won the admiration of the Christian world.

Cheer up:—

"It may be the bitter future
Is less bitter than you think;
The Lord may sweeten the waters
Before you come to drink;
Or if Marah must be Marah,
He will stand beside the brink!"

SOUL-WINNERS.

"A business man in Wales spoke to his office boy about his soul, and from that word a work began that won his entire office force to Christ.

"A merchant in England determined that no day should pass without his speaking to some one about Christ; in one year he led scores to the Master.

"An invalid Christian woman in Australia, for forty years unable to put her foot to the floor, by means of her pen and prayer led forty people to Christ in a single year.

"A father traveled one thousand miles to tell his son that he was concerned about his soul, and had the joy of winning him to the Savior.

"As the followers of Christ, we have the only cure for sin, the only hope for those in despair, and we are privileged to point out the only way that leads to eternal life, and having this inestimable privilege we are called of God to speak and not to be silent, to work and not be idle, to pray and not fail."—Sel.

ITEMS FROM THE FIELD.

Forsythe.—The pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, had made for me two appointments on his charge for Sunday, July 8. At 11 A. M. I was at Hickory Grove. The various committees recommended by the Forward Movement Commission were appointed. The Committee on Literature began its work at once with fair success. Where these committees have not been appointed they should be without delay. Let each of us feel it his duty to help carry out the recommendations and instructions of the Conference in reference to this great movement.

At 3 P. M. I was at Maple Springs. The pastor went to fill an appointment at Oak Grove. When I reached the church I found Bro. J. D. Williams had come to be with us and had arranged to have me conveyed to Winston. I presented the work that we wish to be done and the pastor will appoint the committees to carry it out.

Bro. Williams made some appropriate remarks, stating that no plan would avail much without persistent effort on the part of the membership.

Winston.—I was with Bro. Williams at Winston for the evening service. The people were very attentive and I enjoyed the privilege of speaking to them. Some expressed in kind words their appreciation of this service. It is helpful to us when we feel that we have been in any way helpful to others.

Roanoke.—When I reported my visit to Whitakers on Roanoke charge I failed to mention that I filled an appointment at Speight's Chapel. The congregations are never large. The membership is small. On this occasion the weather was threatening and it began raining soon after we reached the church. Several, however, came out. A visit to Speight's Chapel would not be complete without a visit to the splendid home of Dr. Speight. He is still confined with a lingering illness, but is cheerful and manifests an interest in the church. Among the small membership of Speight's Chapel there are some excellent people. G. W. Holmes.

I'M GLAD I CAME HOME.

I was so lonely, so very lonely,
When I from my Savior had wandered away;
Now I am happy, so very happy,
Since I to my Savior have come home to stay.

I was so hungry, so very hungry,
When out in the desert I wandered alone;
Since I'm in Canaan, living in Canaan,
I've plenty of bread, O I'm glad I came home.

I was so weary, so very weary,
When tired of my wandering I lay down to die;
Jesus came near me, so very near me,
When, in my distress, unto Him I did cry.

I'm glad I came home, O so glad I came home,
From Jesus my Savior I'll nevermore roam,
No more am I starving, weary or lone,
Since Jesus has found me; I'm glad I came home.

THE OPEN VISION.

One summer evening, while stopping in a beautiful suburban home not far from our city, I was told this story by one who had lately been an inmate of the house:

A maiden, some sixteen years of age, had all her life been the unconscious victim of a blemish in her eyes that hindered perfect vision. A surgical operation was fnally agreed upon, and successfully made. The girl was kept within the house until her eyes gathered full strength, and was permitted, gradually and sparingly, to go out doors. It so happened that some time elapsed after her recovery before she went into the open air after nightfall. One evening she rushed into the parlor with face aglow with excitement. The joy of a great discovery illumined every feature.

"O, come!" she exclaimed, "come out quickly to the lawn, and see what beautiful things have appeared in the sky!"

Her friends hastily followed her out of doors, wondering what might have occurred. They saw nothing.

"What do you mean?" they asked her.

"Look!" she said, pointing eagerly heavenward, "don't you see those bright things up there? They are there—and there—sparkling all over the sky!"

"My dear child," said one who loved her, "those are the stars."

Yes, the stars, which she had not seen before. Friends could hardly take in the fact that for all the years of her life the dear child had been moving through God's world with a limited vision, seeing only what lay close around her, utterly oblivious that there were stars, hosts of stars, and all so very beautiful. How strange it seemed!

I think of something far more strange—aye, and pitiful. O, souls of men! heaven is full of shining light that God has hung out to beam the pathway to His eternal home, to lure you upward, to show you how far eternity exceeds time in beauty; how far heaven rises beyond earth in value and glory. Yet, O friends! your eyes are still withholden. You do not see; you do not comprehend. O, for the hand of Him who opened the eyes of the blind when He walked this world to touch your soul and give you sight of these realities.—Gospel in Nature.

J. HUDSON TAYLOR'S MOTTO.

Nearly every good and great man has one or more mottoes interwoven with his life as the secret of his success. The famous founder of the China Inland Mission, Mr. J. Hudson Taylor, declared that the motto of his life was found is Mark 11:22—"Have faith in God." A variant shade of meaning is given in the margin: "Have the faith of God." This means that we are to reckon on God's faith to us. "All my life has been so fickle," said Mr. Taylor; "sometimes I could trust, and sometimes I could not, and when I could not trust, then I reckoned that God would be faithful." Happy and useful are they who have faith in God!—Biblical Recorder.

CLINGING TO HIM.

Cling to Christ. A gentleman, walking along the shore, thought he would carry home one of the pretty limpet shells all about him on the rocks. He tried to pick up one, but the limpet clung so firmly to the rock that he could not pull it off. He was surprised that so little a creature should be so strong for him. He tried to push the limpet off the rock with his cane, but he could no more move it than the rock to which it clung so firmly. He said to himself, "I'll see whether I cannot have you yet." So he sat quietly and watched the limpet, to see if it would stop clinging and move about. For a long time it held on. Then it moved a little. With one sudden grasp he took it in his hand, because it was not clinging to the rock. Satan knows he has no power to harm us when we are cleaving to our Rock, Christ Jesus, so he lurks about for his chance when we have abated our watchfulness and prayer. What we all need is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. With Christ enthroned in our hearts "that wicked one toucheth us not."— S. S. Illustrator.

. . . . .THREE GREAT SINGERS.

The brilliant, fashionably clad audience roared an ovation to the great singer. She was unquestionably the best soprano in the world. The critic turned to his friend, the self-made millionaire, and said: "Did you ever hear any song more exquisitely rendered?"

"Yes," said the rich man musingly, for he was touched by the magic of what he had heard. "Yes, I have heard three greater singers."

"I want to know," exclaimed the critic.

"The first was years ago. The singer was plain of face and gray of hair and tired of body. There was much work to do and many mouths to feed. I was the youngest child, sick and cross. And the dear singer crooned to me a lullaby, and I slept. It was a wonderful song. The next was years afterwards. We had a little cottage. It was summer, and the windows and doors were open. My wife was in the kitchen preparing supper. She was singing something about the true love coming home to her. It was for me. And that too was a wonderful song. Some more years elapse. There is a toddler in the garden, and she sings hesitatingly something about daddy and his baby. These are the three singers, my friend, that beat all of your sopranos."

And the critic—well, perhaps the critic agreed with him.—Exchange.

GOOD SECURITY.

"Mister, do you lend money here?" asked an earnest young boy at the office door. The lawyer turned away from his desk, confronted a clear-eyed, poorly-dressed lad of some ten years, and studied him keenly for a minute. "Sometimes we do—on good security," he said gravely.

The little fellow explained that he had "a chance to buy out a boy that's crying papers." He had half the money required, but he needed to borrow the other fifteen cents.

"What security can you offer?" asked the lawyer.

The boy's hand sought his pocket and drew out a paper carefully folded in a bit of calico. It was a cheaply printed pledge against the use of intoxicating liquors and tobacco. As respectfully as if it had been a deed to a farm, the lawyer examined it, and handed over the required sum.

A friend who had watched the transaction laughed as the young borrower departed.

"You think I know nothing about him?" smiled the lawyer. "I know that he came manfully and tried to negotiate a loan instead of begging the money. I know he has been under good influences, or he would not have signed that pledge. I agree with him that one who keeps himself from such things has a character to offer as security."—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

THE ANGELS OF HELP.

"Yes, I b'lieve God sends angels to help folks in need," said the little washerwoman, turning her plain, care-lined face from the steaming tub, and flicking a plash of white suds from her red hands. "I s'pose some of 'em would feel pretty queer if anybody called 'em angels," she laughed, "but I don't know as it makes much difference whether you see any wings or not, if it's God's work they do." She paused a moment.

"I often think about things that have happened to me," she added reflectively. "Once I was going with my two little children to meet my husband. He'd got work at a repair shop out in some little place, and I was to go most of the way on the train, and then John would meet us and take us the last few miles by interurban. I didn't have much more than enough to pay our way. But the train was held up for an hour or more, so that by the time it got to the stopping place, the children cried because they were hungry. I was so sure John would come to meet me that I went into a bakery and spent part of my change for something to eat. But something had happened at the shop, and John couldn't get away. When I found I must go the rest of the way alone, and tried to buy my ticket, I hadn't change enough; the ticket was fifty cents, and I had only forty. I broke down and cried when the agent wouldn't let me go. Then along came a boy, a cap stuck on the back of his head, and he was swinging a baseball bat. When he saw me, he stopped whistling and asked what was wrong. When he had heard the trouble, he fished a dime from his pocket, got my ticket. and then went on his way again. If he'd had wings, I couldn't have been surer that God sent him to help me.

"Another time—that was after John got too sick to work any more, and I was trying to get him home—we'd started to walk across the town from one depot to another. I was carrying the baby and a heavy grip. and he was leading the two little children, when John began to cough and to grow too faint to go any farther. I didn't know what to do. But while I was wondering about it, along come three young girls, with pretty hats and flying ribbons; not the kind of girls you'd expect to see pay attention to the likes of me. But they stopped short and began to ask questions. They offered to carry the baby, and even to carry the grip—bless their hearts! When they found John was too weak to walk, they drew off and talked together. In a minute they went off somewhere, and called to us to wait for them, and what do you think they did? They hired a carriage and bundled us all into it. No'm, nobody need tell me God don't send angels in the same way he used to."

It was the simple, homely little story of one whose life knew hardship and trouble, but who had not lost faith in God or in humanity. It is the same story that is going on daily all around us. God's angel of help is usually the spirit of kindness, and he sends it into human hearts and allows human hands to do its work. It does more than relieve suffering, it uplifts souls, and more than any other influence draws them toward God. A poor heathen woman taken to a hospital in Korea, watched wonderingly the surgeon and nurses who had been so kind to her, and remarked, "If that is Christianity I'd like to be a Christian." The power to be one of Christ's messengers, to do angelic work, belongs to each of us every day of our lives.—Forward.

LORD ROBERT'S AUTOGRAPH.

The Scripture Gift Mission of Great Britain is distributing among its soldiers in army and navy millions of Gospels and Testaments each containing the famous autograph message of Lord Roberts, now deceased. It is worthy of a place on the fly-leaf of every one's Bible, and is as follows: "I ask you to put your trust in God. He will watch over you, and strengthen you. You will find in this little Book guidance when you are in health, comfort when you are in sickness, and strength when you are in adversity."—Biblical Recorder.

THE FAITH OF JOB.

Faith in the goodness of God: "What? Shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil?"

Faith in the wisdom of God: "I know that thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from thee."

Faith in providence: "In whose hand is the soul of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind."

Faith in affliction: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Rockingham Charge, Peedee Church.—We are in the midst of an epidemic of smallpox. We have had some other sickness, too, and for the last few weeks we have had some deaths among our people. A few days ago the writer was called on to conduct the funeral of Irene Edwards. She was a young lady about twenty years old; and last Friday we were called to conduct the funeral of Bro. Carney's little daughter. She was a bright little child about two years old. May the Lord bless them and comfort them. Also death has been in the home of Bro. and Sister M. D. Braswell and taken away their little daughter Lottie. She was a sweet little child not quite one year old. She is greatly missed by her father and mother and also by the writer. Little Lottie seemed to know everybody and we all miss her. But while we all miss her it is Heaven's gain. May the Lord bless Bro. Braswell and wife in their bereavement and may they hear the encouraging words of Jesus saying, Let not your heart be troubled.

Bro. Braswell and his good wife are doing all they can for the church. Also their home is the preacher's home; they love to have the preachers who come to this charge to help hold meetings come to their home. I am sure any preacher would enjoy a visit to their home.

Yesterday death visited the home of Bro. Farmer and took away their young child. Since our last report from here Aunt Mary Hurst has been called home. She was 82 years old and a member of our church at McFarlan. Her funeral was conducted by the writer and her body was laid to rest in the McFarlan cemetery. May we all watch and be ready, for we too will be called some day.

A. M. Hamilton.

Mt. Carmel, Yadkin College Ct.—The Sunday-school at this place is progressing nicely. We had about sixty-five present Sunday. We hope it will still improve. Rev. C. A. Cecil preached an excellent sermon here Sunday. The next appointment will be the first Sunday in August, at eleven o'clock. Children's service will begin, preaching in the evening. This is the beginning of our protracted meeting. Rev. A. D. Shelton will help in the meeting. The prayer service is doing fine at this place. We hope it will improve.

Reporter.

Matthew's Chapel, Greensville Ct.—Our pastor filled his appointment here the first Sunday afternoon, and preached a splendid sermon to a large crowd. Was sorry it was so our pastor could not be with us third Sunday morning in June, as we are always glad for the Sunday to come for him to be with us. Our S. S. now has very good attendance, 55 present Sunday. There are still a good many in reach who have not yet become interested enough to attend, but we hope they soon will. Our special meeting will begin 4th Sunday in July, as has been reported. We trust that we may have a great ingathering of souls at all our meetings and that many may be added to the church and kingdom of God. We especially ask all the good people to pray for our meeting.

Mody Bowen, Assistant Rep.

Burlington.—Our Sunday school attendance was much better than it was the previous Sunday—an increase of 24. The men's chorus favored the school with a selection from the new book which they recently bought.

The morning church service was attended by the usual sized congregation. Our pastor preached a missionary sermon, his subject being "The Macedonian Call." The text was from Acts 16: 9. Just preceding the sermon opportunity was given for the reception of members, and Miss Margaret Moore was received by letter from Providence Christian Church, Graham. We are glad to have her as a member. Her father joined our church by letter sometime ago.

Our children's day service was held at 8 P. M. An interesting program was rendered by the children and the choir. Each one on the program performed in a splendid manner, thus reflecting credit to those that had charge of the training of the children. An offering was taken for the Board of Foreign Missions; this amounted to $12.70. Despite the unfavorable and threatening condition of the weather the church was filled to overflowing, part of the annex being used to accommodate the people.

Next Sunday we will have our regular services. The music for the evening service will be diversified. The choir is to be composed of men only, and this will be a unique feature of our church service.

Bro. Pritchard assisted in the funeral service of C. L. Andrews, a member of the Baptist church, and a brother-in-law of Bro. J. E. Brown, of our church, last week.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

Creswell.—The regular appointment was filled yesterday at Rehoboth and the sacrament administered. It was a pleasant and profitable service. The night service was called in so the pastor could be at Mt. Hermon with Bro. Taylor in closing the meeting. The weather was unfavorable part of the week, but we had a good meeting. Bro. Taylor did fine preaching and was appreciated by the church and community. There were five additions to the church—Misses Bessie and Callie Barnes and Essie Davenport, and Messrs. Rixie White and Jennings Davenport. Mt. Hermon is doing well now. It has a good Sunday school and prayer meeting and the singing is good. Children's day will be held at Rehoboth next Sunday morning followed by dinner at the church and preaching in the afternoon.

Rev. H. H. Bateman will fill the appointment in Creswell Sunday morning, and the pastor will be there at night and have the communion service. We are expecting Dr. Klein at the children's day at Mt. Hermon August 2nd.

J. H. Abernethy.

Shiloh, Randolph Ct.—Last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock was our regular service hour. Our pastor was with us, but we gave the day to the children, holding our annual children's day. The children did fairly well. The offering was $17.50.

Our president, Rev. G. W. Holmes, is to be with us next Saturday, July 14 at 11 o'clock. Hope the attendance will be good.

Our special meeting will begin the second Sunday in August, and we desire the prayers of the readers of the Herald that our meeting may be a success.

Mr. Ed Goley who has been confined to his bed for some time is very low at this writing. Mrs. E. H. Henderson who has been sick for some time improves very slowly. Success to all the readers. Rep.

Concord.—We did not have any preaching service Sunday morning, but our pastor gave us a splendid sermon Sunday night, one of the best yet, we believe, although they are all good. Quite a large congregation listened attentively to the word.

Our special meeting closed last Wednesday night. We had a great meeting. Bro. Williams did some splendid preaching and greatly endeared himself to our people.

Much credit is due Mr. R. P. Benson for his faithful service at the organ.

We were very sorry that Bro. Williams took quite sick and had to leave Wednesday. We trust he is better by now and will soon be well. Some of our members are very sick at this time; Mrs. S. H. Teeter has entered the Presbyterian hospital at Charlotte for an operation for appendicitis.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Rev. H. L. Feeman, Sec.

Burlington Christian Endeavor.—The Burlington Christian Endeavor Society have elected a press reporter, at the June business meeting, so we hope to have a report in the Herald occasionally. Miss Elsie Moser is the reporter, but she is sick this week, and unable to write a report. I will make a brief report for her.

Last Sunday the society held its regular meeting, beginning about 7: 30. Miss Willie Gibbs had been appointed leader for the meeting, but owing to sickness could not be present. Mr. Arthur Amick led the meeting in her stead. The topic for the meeting was, "Tried and Proved," and embraced the promises of the Bible. A very interesting and helpful discussion was enjoyed by the few that were present. The downpour of rain at the hour for the meeting caused several to miss the meeting.

Next Sunday evening the meeting will be conducted by Miss Bertha Tatum. The topic that will be used is. "God our Helper."

The July business meeting of the Society was held on Tuesday evening, July 3rd, at the home of Miss Mary Brown. The usual routine of business was transacted, and after the meeting adjourned the members present enjoyed a social hour in which Miss Brown served refreshments.

Several members of the society visited Miss Elsie Moser, who has been sick for several days, last Sunday afternoon, carrying her flowers and good cheer. The entire Society wishes for her a speedy recovery, as her presence and valuable assistance in the C. E. work are missed very much. C. B .Way.

KEEP BUSY.

If you expect God to choose you for a great work, be busy. He seldom selects idlers. When He wished a deliverer for Israel, He went into the wilderness for Moses, who was watching sheep; when He wanted a man to save His people from the Midianites, He sent for Gideon, who was threshing wheat; when He wanted a man after His own heart to be king of Israel, He sent for David, who was keeping sheep. Idlers do not suit. The Lord wishes those who are not only willing to work, but who are hard at it. Idlers are too often lazy, and that may be the cause of their idleness. Such seldom have enough ambition to take care of themselves, let alone caring for the Lord's work. But idlers suit Satan exactly. He likes such as have no ambition; for they make the best slaves. The Devil wants slaves for his work, but God wants something better. He wishes men and women who have ambition, who take an interest in their work; he wishes servants who are anxious to rise, for He means to promote them some day. From servants He adopts them into His family, and makes them His children.—Forward.

MY MISSION.

I was longing for a mission;
Fancy made it something grand—
Something that would win the praises
Of the world on every hand—
So I squandered time in waiting
For the chance that never came,
Quite forgot to think of others
In my longings after fame.

But one day I had a vision
Of the needy ones near by.
Of the hearts that starve with hunger
Till they faint and fall and die—
Starve for little deeds of kindness,
Or a word of hope and cheer,
And smiles that cost so little
But can make it heaven here.

Then it was I found my mission—
Knew what work God meant for me,
And I cried, "Forgive my blindness;
Now, at last, thank God, I see!"
And my heart that had been selfish
In its longings to be great
Saw great fields of labor waiting
For me just outside my gate.

So I seek to scatter sunshine
In a dark and cheerless place.
Loving words have given courage;
Smiles have cheered the tearful face.
In the joy of helping others
God's good time I waste no more
Since my life found its mission
Waiting at the very door.

—Eben E. Rexford, in the Christian Herald.

A SINGLE PURPOSE.

It has been well said that it pays to stick to one thing. Only those persons in whose lives some one great purpose outweighs everything else rise above the shoulders of the crowd. Concentration does it. Strugglers in the commercial world are reminded that "the man who minds his own business will soon have a business of his own to mind." Paul had a passion for one thing, as he said: "Forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." And Paul succeeded by holding to that one thing; so that his life was glorified by the presence of Christ and made fruitful to the rest of the world, as few, if any, other lives of the Christian era. Have you decided what your one goal is? In singleness of purpose as Christians we should seek some specific Christian sphere of work. Like Paul, we will then make a marked success of the Christian life and service.—Young Folks.

FACTS ABOUT AFRICA.

Nearly one-fourth of the earth's land surface is comprised within the continent of Africa.

It is as far around the coast of Africa as it is around the world.

Every eighth person of the world's population lives in the Dark Continent.

The blacks double their numbers every forty years and the whites every eighty years.

There are 843 languages and dialects in use among the blacks of Africa. Only a few of the languages have been reduced to writing.

The coal fields of Africa aggregate 800,000 square miles; its copper fields equal those of North America and Europe combined, and it has undeveloped iron ore amounting to five times that of North America.

Africa has forty thousand miles of river and lake navigation, and water powers aggregating ninety times those of Niagara Falls.

One area in Africa unoccupied by missionaries is three times the size of New England, a second would make four states like New York, a third would cover eight Iowas, and a fourth is eighteen times the size of Ohio.

Throughout Africa there is one missionary for every 133,000 souls.

Almost the entire continent is now under European flags. France has a colony in Africa twenty times the size of France itself. The British flag flies over a territory as large as the United States.—World Outlook.

Smith, the hotel manager, and Jones a manufacturer's agent, were talking one day about their respective business interests.

"I say," remarked Jones, "how do you use such an enormous quantity of pears and peaches."

"Well," replied Smith, "we eat what we can, and what we can't eat we can."

"Indeed!" said the other. "We do about the same in our business."

"How is that?"

"We sell an order when we can sell it and when we can't we cancel it."

SERMON TO CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE.

The First Commandment with Promise.

Text: "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Ex. 20:12.

It is often said that a child never pays the debt that he owes his parents. The debt is great, a debt for life and opportunity, a debt for food, clothing and shelter, a debt for counsel and correction, a debt for example and influence, a debt for the purest and best love, a debt for untold sacrifices, and a debt for the heritage of a good name. The text, which is the fifth commandment, makes it the duty of every child to pay this debt, at least so far as it is possible to pay it. "Honor thy father and thy mother." You should honor your parents by your respect, love, obedience, support and remembrance.

Respect.

Your father and mother may be ignorant, old-fashioned, faulty, and unfaithful; yet they are entitled to your full respect in spite of these defects. Don't be guilty of the unspeakable folly of being ashamed of your parents because of any of these drawbacks. Respect them because they are God's first gifts to you—gifts that have brought so much happiness into your lives. Respect them for the sacred relationship; they are your father and your mother. Respect them for the quiet and peaceful satisfaction that will come to you by so doing.

Love.

It is said that love begets love. If so, what a large harvest of love parents should reap from their children. Where will you find a purer, more constant, and more self-sacrtficing love than that of a mother? Children, do you render your parents the large measure of love that is due them? Or do you forget and neglect, because their love is such a common and frequent occurrence, like the sunshine and the rain? Now don't regard this love simply as a matter of course. Pause to think how much joy one act of their love brings to you. And bear in mind that there is an ever-flowing stream of such acts of love. Pure love in return is the best appreciation. A thankless, unloving child is a monster. No gifts or deeds afterwards can atone for the sin of not loving father and mother.

Obedience.

Paul said, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." It is the children's privilege; it is parents' due. The parents are clothed with authority from God. To reject this authority, to show disrespect for it, is to dishonor the God who gave it. Jesus gave a fine example of obedience to parents. When His father and mother found him in the temple, it is said that "he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them." Parents are capable of directing the conduct of their children because of their superior wisdom and larger experience. Jesus no doubt knew more than His parents and in consequence did not need any counsel or direction from them. But He was obedient to them in order to set an example for all children to obey their father and mother. Obedience is the best expression of love. Therefore, children, obey your parents because you love them, because they love you, because God placed them in authority over you for your good, because you will be safe from evil, and because this will help you to obey God, live right, and be useful in the world.

Support.

Sometimes parents through sickness or misfortune become dependent in old age. Sometimes they wear themselves out working for their children. And sometimes they give so generously to their children that they have little left for a rainy day. In either event it becomes the children's duty to give their parents a support. This is a most sacred duty. The Jews in Christ's time had a tradition that if any one would give all he had to the church he would be free from supporting his parents. But Christ taught that the support of dependent parents was a greater duty than even giving to the church. It should not be un unwilling support, nor a stinted support. They are entitled to the very best you can do for them. For they did the very best for you when you were little. It is a great privilege to return in part the great care and generous support that your parents first gave you.

Remembrance.

Give your parents a chief place in your memory. Above all other human beings they are entitled to your grateful remembrance. Don't forget them, nor their countless deeds of kindness for you. If they are living, visit them or write to them often. If they are dead, cherish the memory of the self-sacrificing lives which they lived before you and for you. And let such memories strengthen your courage in the honr of conflict, inspire your purpose in every honorable endeavor, and bring you much comfort in times of trial and distress.

The Promise.

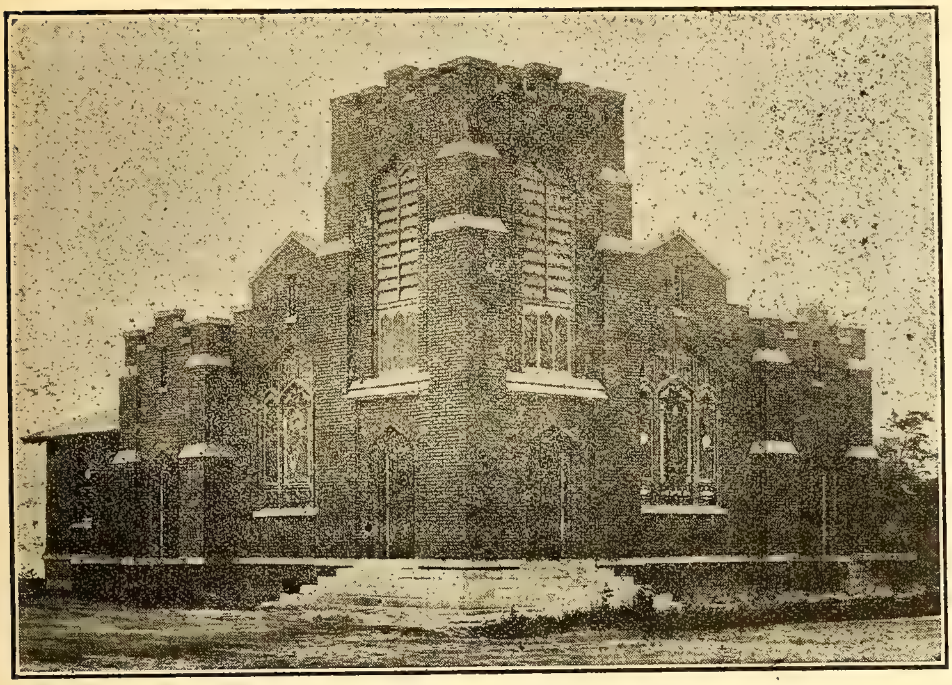
Length of days is promised to those who will thus honor their parents, "that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." The wise man had said of wisdom, "Length of days is in her right hand." And in keeping the commandments, he also wrote, "For length of days, and long life, and peace, shall they add to thee." Therefore to honor thy father and thy mother is the part of heavenly wisdom. And to keep the fifth commandment is to find help and inspiration to keep all the commandments. Long life is one of the most desirable of earthly blessings. It is said that "all that a man hath will he give for his life," that is to live a long time. There are rich people who would give millions just to live a few years longer. But long life cannot be bought with money. It is the gift of God to all who wll keep the commandments of God, especially to those who honor their father and mother.

I will close by giving an illustration of reliance upon this promise. A little boy was sick nigh unto death. The doctor said that he couldn't live. His father with a breaking heart told the little sufferer what the doctor said, that he must die. The boy looked up into his father's face and said: "Father, haven't I honored you and mother, haven't I always obeyed you and mother?" The father said, "Yes." "And father, didn't God promise long life to all who will honor their father and mother?" Again the father said, "Yes." "Then, father, I can't die, because God is bound to keep His promise." Putting his faith in this promise of God, the brave little fellow, contrary to all expectations, rallied from his illness, and got well. "A little child shall lead them."—The Word of Life.

I do not say you can make yourself merry and happy when you are in a physical condition which is contrary to such mental condition, but by practice and effort you can learn to withdraw from it, refusing to allow your judgments and actions to be ruled by it. "What does that matter?" you will learn to say. "It is enough for me to know that the sun does shine, and that this is only a weary fog that is round about me for a moment. I shall come out into the light beyond presently." This is faith—faith in God, who is Light.—George MacDonald.

SPEAKING OF BEECHER.

The Congregationalist tells of a lady who was stopping with a farmer's family in Chatham, Mass. The farmer was speaking of Mr. Beecher. "Oh," he said, "he lived very close to God." "Anyway he lived very close to men," the lady replied. "That's where God is," said the farmer. And the farmer was right.—Biblical Recorder.



NEW METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH, WHITAKERS, N. C.

Montgomery: The North Main Street Methodist Protestant Church in High Point has lost another one of its substantial, faithful members in the death of Benjamin F. Montgomery. Bro. Montgomery was born Aug. 8, 1858, died June 4th, 1917. Age, 58 years, 9 months and 28 days. He was married to Miss Sarah Welburn more than 30 years ago. To this union there were born seven children, four boys and three girls, all of whom are living. Bro. Montgomery professed faith in Christ early in life and poined Lebanon Methodist Protestant Church. When the North Main Street Church was built, he moved his membership here under the pastorate of Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk.

There were few people more faithful to their church than was the subject of this sketch. He was so nearly always in his place that when he was absent from a service his pastor knew that sickness or absence from town was keeping him away. He loved his church dearly, and was a wise counselor in its affairs.

He had been sick for several weeks. Just in a run-down condition from which all of us thought he would soon rally. We had no thought that he was in a serious condition until about one week before his death when in a conversation with him he said, "I have no idea I'll ever get out any more." But even then we had no thought that the end was so near. I have never known an individual who seemed to realize the conditions as Bro. Montgomery did, who met the conditions with any more calmness and composure than he did. He did not say so much, but he seemed to say by his actions, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me in that day."

Bro. Montgomery loved his family and his family loved him, and he ruled well his household. And there was a joy and happiness in the home that welded them together by the ties of love which are stronger than death. He was never domineering nor overbearing, but was always looked to as the head of the home. He ruled well his household because he ruled it with love.

He will be missed in the community, and in the church, but he will be missed most in the home, where all looked to him for counsel and guidance. He was a good Bible student and was so much better posted in the Scriptures than the average man that he was able to give wise counsel.

He loved his pastor and was peculiarly the pastor's friend. Personally, I feel that in his going I have lost a close friend. If he apppreciated his pastor's efforts he told him so and thus showed his appreciation. If he had a criticism to make he made it directly to the pastor and not to somebody else. He made his criticisms with the thought of helping and not of hindering.

The wife who is left behind with the children have only lost their loved one for awhile. If they will only be as faithful as he would have them be it won't be long until they too will go home to be with him in that beautiful world where separation and sorrow will never come.

THE MAGIC WORD.

Bennie was cross. In the first place, it rained when he wanted the sun to shine. Then he cut his finger, and now he was hungry and Jane wouldn't give him anything to eat. "You've got to give me some bread and butter," he said.

"You go along and stop your noise," replied Jane.

So Bennie wandered out in the garden and found George playing with his ball.

"Give me my ball," he said crossly. "You've had it all the morning."

"Don't bother me," replied George, "I have not finished with it."

Bennie turned away, half crying. Annie was sweeping the parlor. "I want you to put some salve on my finger and tie it up," he said. "It hurts."

"Wait a little," replied Annie. "I'm so busy now."

The tears in Bennie's eyes got bigger, and soon began to fall fast. He lay down on the sitting room couch and sobbed, and there mamma found him a little later.

"Why, what's the matter, Bennie, boy?" she asked.

"Any one won't do a thing for me," he cried. "They just send me off instead of doing what I ask them to do."

"Perhaps you haven't used the magic word."

Bennie brushed away the tears and looked up. "Magic word?" he said.

"Why, yes. Didn't you know there was a magic word that would make people do just what you wanted?"

"What is it, mamma?" cried Bennie.

Mamma whispered in his ear. Bennie wiped his eyes, grinned, and then jumped down and ran to the kitchen. "Oh, Jane," he cried, smiling, "please give me some bread and butter."

"Of course I will," said Jane. and she put jam on it, too.

Bennie sat on the doorstep to eat it, while he watched the clouds break away and let the sunlight through. Then he went out in the garden.

"Please, George, may I have the ball now?" he asked, smiling.

"Catch it," said George, tossing it to him. "I'd have let you have it long ago if you hadn't been so cross."

When he had grown tired of playing he went and stood beside his mother where she sat sewing. "Well, Bennie boy, how does the magic word work?" she asked.

But before he could answer, little May came in with a frown on her face. "You promised you'd make me a dollie, and you didn't do it," she complained.

Bennie laughed. "I think I'd better teach May the magic word, too," he said to mamma.—Ex.

PELLAGRA RESULT OF BEAUTIFUL BUT FAULTY FOODS.

That pellagra may be prevented and the cost of living reduced at the same time is according to Dr. Edward J. Wood of Wilmington who treats this subject fully in the June issue of the Health Belletin which is just from the press. Dr. Wood says that back to soil and the old water mill must be our slogan if we get away from those conditions that not only produce pellagra but many of the prevalent nervous disturbances, which he attributes to beautiful but faulty food.

"Modern milling methods are largely responsible for pellagra," says Dr. Wood. "If the old fashioned mill of fifty years ago was now in use we would see pellagra disappear as rapidly as does ship scurvy when the sailors reach port and fresh fruit. Our wheat is ground in such an elegant way that the outside is discarded because of its dingy color, and so the cattle get what our children are dying for because of appearances."

Apparently, it is the lack of that dirty portion of the grain which lies on the outside, and which the mills take off, that produces pellagra. It is that yet unknown but very necessary element in food called vitamin. The remedy suggested by the writer is that we eat whole corn meal and whole wheat flour or make our bread of corn chops and our biscuits of shorts or middlings.

Other factors playing a part in the production of pellagra, in Dr. Wood's judgment, are excessive cooking, as excess heat destroys the vitamin in foods, and the great use that is made of soda and baking powders. The alkaline preparation that is liberated when heat is applied to soda is destructive of vitamin, and in order to check pellagra at this source, people must go back to yeast raised bread or old-fashioned hoe-cake or corn pone.

"Cook your meals less and throw the frying pan out of the window" is the author's advice as to the harmful effects of excessive cooking. He says: "Our people overcook nearly everything except those things needing much cooking, as do cereals, which are universally undercooked."

GROW A SECOND CROP OF IRISH POTATOES.

The fall or second crop of Irish potatoes is one of the means by which the production of one of the most important food crops may be increased. For a number of years, this second crop of Irish potatoes has been an unimportant item in the food supply of North Carolina but with emergency times at hand, Mr. W. N. Hutt, Horticulturist of the North Carolina Experiment Station, urges upon the growers of the Eastern section of the State the importance of putting in an extra crop.

In Extension Circular No. 49 prepared by Mr. R. G. Hill, Superintendent of the Truck Station at Willard, N. C., careful instruction in the growing of this crop is given. The problem of seed is one of the most serious questions confronting the average grower but it has been found that when seed from the first crop are spread out on the floor in some sheltered place where they are exposed to a strong light but not to direct sunlight, and are turned at frequent intervals until they are greened or sprouted, they are then ready to plant. This method insures against injury from rot caused by moisture and allows of the culling out of stock showing signs of disease. In this case a good stand is secured.

Tests have shown that the best time to plant the second crop is from the middle of July to the middle of August. In a favorable fall they might be set as late as September first, but there is always danger of late plantings being caught by frost before maturing. Additional information in regard to the second crop of potatoes and copies of the circular 49 may be had on application to B. W. Kilgore Director, Agricultural Extension Service, Raleigh, N. C.

DIED.

Sutherland.

Mrs. Alice Pamelia Henderson Sutherland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Henderson, of Ivy, N. C., and wife of Wm. H. Sutherland, died at her home, 34 North Ann St., Asheville, N. C., Jan. 12th, 1917, age 39 years, 8 months and 10 days.

She was a member of the M. P. Church, having professed Christ at the age of ten years and joined the Pleasant Gap M. P. church and remained a faithful member of the M. P. church until her death.

She married William H. Sutherland Jan. 10th, 1895, and to this union two daughters were born; both were married at the time of her death.

She lived a beautiful Christian life, and was always so interested in getting every one she came in contact with to do right. She was always doing some deed of charity and love to those around her, especially the sick. And we are made to feel as the Scriptures say, "Inasmuch as you did it unto the least of these, you did it unto me." Her friends and neighbors were many and dear, and even the little children of her community were all in love with her.

She was sick for several weeks before her death, but neither she, her family, nor her physician thought her sickness was serious, until the morning of her death; she seemed much better than usual that morning, but about 7 A. M. she was stricken with apoplexy. Her physician was called, but when he reached her side he said there was no hope. About 9 A. M. she passed into that beautiful world where parting and troubles are no more. This sorrow therefore is not unmixed with joy. We do not weep as those who have no hope, and some time in the providence of God we shall meet her again. How we all miss her only those who have lost a dear sweet daughter, wife, sister or mother, can imagine. She leaves a husband, parents, two sisters and two daughters to mourn their loss. She was laid to rest at her family cemetery Jan. 14th beside a sister who had preceded her to the grave several years before.

But wherefore weep? Her matchless spirit soars
Beyond where splendid shines the orb of day;
And weeping angels lead her to those bowers
Where endless pleasures virtue's deeds repay.

Mrs. L. F. Grant.

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

"TOMORROW MAY BE TOO LATE."

The steamship Central America, on a voyage from New York to San Francisco, sprung a leak in mid-ocean. A vessel seeing her signal of distress bore down toward her. Perceiving the danger to be imminent, the captain of the rescue ship spoke to the Central America: "What is amiss?" "We are in bad repair, and are going down; lie by till morning," was the answer. "Let me take your passengers on board now." But as it was night the commander of the Central America did not like to send his passengers away lest some might be lost, and thinking that they could keep afloat a while longer, replied, "Lie by till morning." Once again the captain of the rescue ship called, "You had better let me take them now." "Lie by till morning," was sounded back through the trumpet. lights were missed, and though no sound

About an hour and a half later her was heard the Central America had gone down and all on board perished, because it was thought they could be saved better at another time. Let the reader lay the lesson to heart. "Now is the accepted time." Tomorrow may be too late—too late for what? Too late to be eternally saved.—Sel.

St. Paul once wrote a letter to a struggling mission, advising it how to become strong. He said not a word about bazaars or dramas. He utterly overlooked the advantages of giving a dance for the young people, or getting up a world's fair, or running to and fro selling tickets for the salvation of the world. He simply told the people to pray. "Continue steadfastly in prayer and persevere in the same. (Col. 4:2). When he wrote to large city parishes like those in Rome and Corinth, his advice was the same: "Continue instant in prayer." "Pray without ceasing." (Rom. 12:11, I Thess. 5:17).—The Messenger, S. S. "Typhoid fever has one and only one source," says the State Board of Health, "the human intestines of a typhoid patient or carrier. Animals other than man do not have typhoid. In the human intestines the typhoid bacilli grow and multiply.

"Flies are the chief spreaders of typhoid, though fingers, food, water and milk play no small part in its spread.

"While it is exceedingly advisable to be vaccinated against this disease on having been exposed to it or on going where the infection is likely to be met, as on vacation tours or outing expeditions, it is all the more advisable to be vaccinated as a general precaution and as another form of life insurance. The number of the typhoid carriers has proved to be large and no man can spot them till after they have done their work."

QUARANTIVE LAW EFFECTIVE.

The new State law for the control of contagious diseases became operative in North Carolina August 1. The diseases which are to be reported include Whooping Cough, Scarlet Fever, Typhoid Fever, Bubonic Plague, Measles, Smallpox, Typhus Fever, Yellow Fever, Diphtheria, Infantile Paralysis, Asiatic Cholera, and Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis. All reports should be made to the State Epidemologist, Raleigh, N. C.

The State Board realizes that it must depend a great deal upon the co-operation of the physicians of the State in making this law effective.

North Carolina Ahead Again.—It is said that the shell that destroyed the first German submarine hit by the Americans after our entrance into the war was made by a North Carolina man working in a machine shop in Raleigh. Mr. H. R. Smith, formerly of Greensboro, and that the gun was fired by a Kinston boy. Shells are numbered and in this way the identity of the maker was determined.

—Sixty-one thousand people work in the rubber factories at Akron, Ohio, where a large part of the world's rubber goods are manufactured. There are 30 or more factories working night and day. There are three shifts of eight hours each. Last year 2,637 dwellings were built in Akron to accommodate the new comers, and still houses are scarce and in one instance a family lives in a half of a chicken house while the chickens occupy the other half. Those are hospitable chickens.

NOT ASHAMED OF US.

Twice does the author of the Book of Hebrews refer to the fact that men may be received and recognized by God without shame. In 3:11 he says that Christ "is not ashamed to call them brethren" and in 11:16 he says that "God is not ashamed to be called their God."

We might expect that it would be otherwise. What a high rank it is to be brethren of Jesus Christ. We rae so far beneath him, so utterly outclassed by him that we could scarcely expect to be thought of in association with him at all, much less to be accorded the place of brethren. Such a prospect should make us feel our unworthiness, and also make us rejoice in the great grace and condescension of God which would uplift us to such a height. When Jesus was on earth he called his disciples his friends and treated them as friends. After he had risen from the dead and was still farther removed from them he called them "brethren." Go tell my brethren, said he, that I will meet them in Galilee. How fortunate we are to have such an "elder brother" as He is. Instead of being filled with pride, we should be filled with the spirit of humility and with profound gratitude to God for this unspeakable privilege of being brethren to Jesus Christ.

And when we are told that God is not ashamed to be called the God of such creatures as we, we should be moved to a most determined and persistent effort to become such that God will have less reason to be ashamed to be called our God.

There are men in the world so low in the scale of civilization that a civilized man would be ashamed to be their king or chief. But God is not ashamed to be called our God!

HOW HE GOT OUT OF OUR CHURCH.

He had long been wishing to get out. He felt too big for as small a church as the Methodist Protestant. With him size was the paramount consideration, and he felt that he had the size and the church hadn't, and therefore he was out of place. It was an accident that he ever came to be a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. He never deliberately intended such a thing, but when he came to himself he was in the Methodist Protestant Church and he did not have the courage, big as he was, just to draw out without any reason other than the fact of his great size.

But the time came when he made a move to a town where much larger churches were represented, though there was a small Methodist Protestant Church in the same town. Now this was his chance and he did not neglect it. The Methodist Protestant was at one end of the town. He located at the opposite end where he was too far away to attend the Methodist Protestant Church, and of course he wanted a church home. So he joined one of the larger churches. As he has since failed in business, we do not know whether he feels so large now.

And by the way, did you ever think of the connection between business failures and loyalty to church? We have, and it seems to us that men that do not hold on to their own church when it is in the right are more likely to lose out in business.

—These are earnest days in many of our churches. This is the time of year when most special meetings are held in our State. It is therefore in a sense the harvest season of the church, the season of ingathering. And when we consider the preciousness, the infinite worth of even one human soul, how urgent does the work appear! Earnest Christians cannot consent to the loss of even one. As long as there is a soul in peril, the situation calls for the most strenuous effort for relief. What if it were a child in a burning building or being carried down a stream. How men would risk their lives to save it! Can Christians be less in earnest about those out of Christ, the only hope of the sinner? No: we must work while it is day. The night approacheth when our work will be over.

Tent Meeting.—Rev. T. M. Johnson reported at Tabernacle last Sunday that there were over fifty conversions and reclamations in the tent meeting in the grove a few miles below Tabernacle. Such was the interest at the close that the people expressed a desire for another meeting next year and wished that the tent might remain. This, of course, could not be, but arrangement was made to have service twice a month in the grove during mild weather. Bro. Johnson is to preach there at 2 P. M. on the third Sunday of this month, after preaching at Julian and before preaching at Tabernaclue.

—There was a large congregation at Tabernacle last Sunday, forenoon and afternoon, in the beginning of the special meeting. Rev. J. H. Bowman was the expected pulpit help after Sunday. On Sunday the pastor, Bro. Johnson, had no pulpit help except that given by the editor of the Herald, who occupied the pulpit in the forenoon service. Bro. Johnson told his people that Bro. Bowman is such a worker that they would have to keep the traces tight in order to keep their end up. We hope to hear a good report from this meeting. We believe there are people there who have a mind to work.

—Bro. D. H. Hunter, of Tabernacle, has reached the age of 85, but has the vigor of a man of much fewer years. He still manages his large farm, getting up early and lending a hand. He comes to the city alone with farm produce every Saturday, traveling ten miles and reaching the city about seven o'clock in the morning. His faithfulness to the church does not relax. He is in his place and interested in all the work of the church.

—Prof. Chas. C. Sharpe is now home on a visit. He has been principal of the Kernersville school for several years, but goes this fall to take charge of the school at Walnut Cove at an increased salary.

—Nobility remains noble.

SOME PERILS TO AMERICAN CHRISTIANITY.

Moral and spiritual perils are worse than physical. The present peril to America is not war, or internal strife, but is due to the increase of the less educated and non-Christian population, and the growth of religious indifference and immorality. For example, recent statistics published by the Federal Census Bureau indicate that the birth rate among Negroes is lower than among the whites and the death rate is higher, while the birth rate among the foreign born population is much higher than among the native Americans.

In commenting on this the Christian Evangelist says: Apparently these figures indicate two tendencies in our American social life. First, they indicate that thé white race is slowly supplanting the colored in population; and secondly that the foreign born whites are supplanting the native born. In this latter fact lies a great danger for American Christian ideals. The majority of our foreign born population are Jews, Catholics, or Freethinkers. The growth of the Roman Catholic Church is due largely to the greater proportion of births among the immigrants. Catholicism grows up almost entirely by absorbing its own children rather than by proselytism. Protestants frequently let the children get away from them and then hold big revivals to get them back. We need an evangelism which will hold the children quite as much as one which will bring them back into the fold.

If America is to maintain a leading place among the Christian nations, if the Republic is to hold to Christian ideals and institutions, obviously it is high time that the Christian Church takes still more seriously the task of evangelizing and educating the non-Christian foreigners who are so rapidly increasing in numbers and influence. There is need for a Home Missionary Campaign to unite all Protestant churches and to win over the indifferent and materialistic masses of the population.—Missionary Review, selected by C. H. Beck, Secretary.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In Boston, Mass., some Jewish citizens are endeavoring to have the practice of singing Christian hymns in the public schools abolished and unsectarian hymns and patriotic songs substituted for them. A petition to this effect was presented to the school committee and the petitioners' representatives were given a public hearing; among them were Rabbi Phineas Israeli, ex-Rabbi Charles Fleischer and Jacob Wiseman, President of the Y. M. H. A. Of those who appeared for the opposition a number were Christian clergymen, who with hardly an exception were moderate in their statement and courteous in their conduct toward the petitioners.

A glaring exception, however, was the Rev. Mr. W. D. Brigham, of Dorchester, who was brutally arrogant and insolently impertinent. He said in part:

''That the Jews knew the conditions in Boston and in America before they came here and that in coming they should have made up their minds to abide by them. They knew that it was a Christian (Protestant) country and should not have come here if they wanted to live under other conditions.

''America would not think of going to Russia and asking to have conditions changed,'' he added, ''much less give up religious teachings as the people have been accustomed to practice them.''—The Glory of Israel.

THE SELECTIVE DRAFT.

On June 5th more than 10,000,000 of our nation's best men enrolled themselves in obedience to the law and in response to a genuine desire to rid the earth of Prussian autocracy. They hold themselves in readiness at their country's further call to take their places in the Liberty Army, to make the world safe for democracy.

On July 21st more than a million of these noble sons of America were called by process of the selective draft to be the vanguard of our citizen army to do their bit in bringing freedom to all mankind. These noble men will respond like the noble men they are, and the world will stand aghast at the tale of their heroic accomplishments. These men will fight not for themselves, nor yet for their country's aggrandizement, but for human brotherhood and individual liberty for all men. It is a grand spectacle. Nothing like it ever happened in the annals of mankind. God speed them and bless them as they go!

That Other Draft.

But I am thinking just now of that other selective draft, imperious, relentless, ceaselessly operative, inescapable, from which these is no exemption for any man. I mean the selective draft of life. It knows no pity, no exemption basis. Every man must face the firing line. He will be rated patriot or slacker according as he delivers the goods. Nor is there favoritism. Neither birth in a high place nor great riches and influential connections can secure you a commissioned officer's station under its operation. Dead-sure, equable justice to every man according to his deserts—that is the price of promotion and of official station under its exacting standards.

How It Can Be Met.

The pressing query for every man or woman—for women, too, enlist under its banner—is: How can I meet this life-draft best? There is but one answer—Prepare for a large service by a large preparation. Two friends are now through high school. One decides to go to work, the other to College. Both devote themselves wholly to their callings. A quarter-century has passed. The boy who went to work is holding his own, in a nip and tuck struggle for existence. The other man is a Josephus Daniels, or a Lloyd-George, or a Kerensky. The difference is to be explained not in ability, but in preparation. There is nothing like four years in College to give wings to life's possibilities. It transforms pigmies into giants, little folks into big ones, to place them in their formative days under the liberalizing, uplifting, manhood-generating spirit of a noble Christian College.

My Bit Now.

Your precious bit now, since you are under the statutory age or have not been drawn, your precious bit is to spend the days in preparing yourself for a large service in the days to come. Theodore Roosevelt has struck off in trenchant phrase the duty of the hour, when he said in Pittsburgh last week: ''This hour does not demand self-sacrifice, but service. Get ready to do your bit.'' The supreme duty, the consecrated path of patriotism for every American youth now is the use of the time in gaining such a conception of life and human needs as will qualify for highest service when the work of world-reconstruction begins after the war has been terminated. Experience demonstrates that there is but one source of this conception—a College education. Those who act on that tip will do the noblest bit now.

This hour demands that you slack not. Get ready for life's selective draft. Preare to help rebuild the world that it may be forever safe for democracy!

Go to College—that is your bit!

Go to College—this is your patriotism today!—Elon College News Bulletin.

—Mr. Frank Causey, son of the aged Robert Causey, of Tabernacle, who has been away from his old home most of the time of the years and some of the time far away, is attending the meeting at Tabernacle and visiting relatives this week. His father is about 89 years old.

PRAYER FOR CONFERENCE.

Our Father, wilt Thou bless our Conference with a great blessing! May no illness or accident keep any of its members away, and may all go feeling that they must be about their Father's business. Make Thy presence felt in the very first session, and in every session. May the brethren feel that it is good to be there. May there be a disposition on the part of all to do Thy work in Thy spirit and in Thy way. And when the work of the Conference is done, may there be a glad acceptance of its plans on the part of all and a return to the field in which Thou dost permit us to labor for a little while with an earnest desire to glorify Thee by the abundance of our good works.

And wilt Thou bless those who receive in their homes the members of the Conference. May they be impressed with the earnest, kindly, Christian spirit of their guests and so be more strongly drawn to the people of God.

And may the pastor of Mebane church and his noble wife be sustained by Thee in bearing the strain! Make the burden light for them, and give them the joy of appreciated service.

And Mebane Church—may the coming of the Annual Conference be an inspiration to its members. May they be impressed as never before with the importance of Christian work and with the effort of the Methodist Protestant Church to realize the spirit of Christ in human life and so help to establish God's Kingdom on earth.

May our Conference be such in spirit and work that Thou, O God, canst take delight in looking upon it!

CONFERENCE FACULTY MEETS TUESDAY, 1:30 P. M.

All members of the Faculty and those who expect to come before the Faculty are hereby notified that the meeting will be held in the M. P. Church at Mebane on Tuesday, Nov. 20th, at 1:30 P. M.

There will be no examinations after Tuesday, those who fail to be present on that day will have no opportunity to appear before the Faculty.

C. L. Whitaker, Chairman,
R. M. Andrews, Secretary.

—Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, and Congressman A. W. Barkley, of Kentucky, co-authors of the measure which made the District of Columbia dry territory, will be the principal speakers at the initial session of the National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, in Washington, D. C., on the evening of December 10.

This meeting will have the character of a jubilee over the victory which the drys won when the Barkley-Sheppard bill was enacted. Andrew Wilson, President of the Anti-Saloon League of the District, will give the address of welcome, and Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of New York City, who is president of the National League organization, will respond. The chairman will be George W. Crabbe, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland.

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the navy and a pronounced dry, has been asked to speak at the convention.

Rev. Dr. George W. Young, of Louisville, will be a speaker; Dr. Young has always been a fighter. As a Virginia boy he ran away from home to enlist with Stonewall Jackson to fight the Yankees. He has been prominent among the leading spirits in matters of interest to Confederate veterans.

Since the war he has been devoting his time to fighting sin. For many years he held successful and notable pastorates in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Then he turned his attention to fighting the liquor traffic, the chief enemy of the church.

SOME GOOD FROM WAR.

With all its evils, and their name is legion, war is forcing upon millions of our people a few things that are for our good. The most of us are learning to live either without meat or to eat but little of it. Multitudes will doubtless be surprised to discover that their health is all the better for this experience. There are few who are not denying themselves a score of things once hardly deemed luxuries, but which look quite unnecessary now in the light of their cost today. In addition to this who shall measure the sacrifices that have been made to share with suffering men and women across the sea, the unselfish service that has been called forth by the demand for the soldiers' needs, the heroism awakened in the hearts of those who have answered their country's call, or who have given their sons and daughters, their husbands, their brothers, to what they have felt was a great cause. Alas that so many lessons we seem able to learn only out of bitterness and sorrow!—Our Dumb Animals.

IS PEACE AT HAND?

We must not be too sanguine, for this war has brought so many of our hopes and illusions to naught. Nearly all the prophets have failed to foresee the trend of events. Yet the signs of the hour all point to the triumph of our righteous cause.

We believe that the period of pessimism has passed and the certainty of a fast nearing peace is daily becoming more manifest, a peace which should and shall endure if the nations are true to them selves and the ideals they profess. So that posterity will bless us for the terrible sacrifices now made.

If the world's prayers could prevail, if the millions of mothers, fathers and children who daily beseech the Divine Ruler of the Universe, who in anguish bow down before the Heavenly Father, asking that the deluge of blood may be stayed, would avail, peace would be possible tomorrow.

Why the Almighty has so long permitted this sad inhuman war to continue we know not. One thing only is certain: there must be a wise purpose and we must be convinced that essential good will come of it, for in the end right and justice must prevail and the crime of war will, we believe, be at an end.

How illuminating and what a pleasure it is to read the press of France today at the critical hour of the world's history.

The tone of all has been firm, reasonable, and dignified. All writers ardently desire peace, a peace without any revengeful object and yet would not France or any other country a century ago or even half a century ago, in the hour of its triumph have demanded dire punishment to be meted out to its enemy?

France today simply demands just restitution, such restitution as the world in council will grant her and to which she has a moral right.

We think all points to an earlier peace than seemed possible three months ago. Oh, the joy of it! What shouts of happiness and gratitude will be raised by a liberated world, what thanksgivings will be sent up to Heaven by hundreds of millions of God's creatures when the Herald of Peace shall sound the final ''cease firing!'' How from every belfry of every Christian Church the joyful peal will ring out its tuneful music, its peace message! God grant that it may soon be thus.—Edward Fox Sainsbury, in Our Dumb Animals.

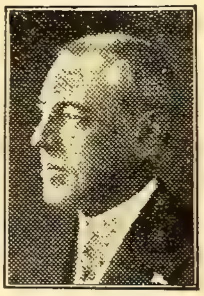
A GOOD REASON WHY.

By Howard B. Grose, D. D.

Almost the first question put to a speaker who presents food conservation to a church convention or meeting is, ''Why should we be asked to save wheat when millions of bushels of grain are wasted in making whiskey and beer?''

In no direction can American women so greatly assist as by enlisting in the service of the Food Administration and cheerfully accepting its direction and advice.

—WOODROW WILSON.



President Wilson.

Enroll During "Pledge Week."

A nation-wide campaign to complete the enrollment of our forces in conservation of our food supply, is a duty of necessity, humanity and honor. As a free people we have elected to discharge this duty, not under autocratic decree, but without other restraint than the guidance of individual conscience.

—HERBERT HOOVER.

For these very good reasons:

In the first place, we are asked to save wheat, and not a bushel of wheat is used in making whiskey or beer or other intoxicants. Under the Food Act the manufacture of whiskey and all distilled beverages is prohibited, and this took effect Sept. 8, 1917. Therefore, no grain of any kind is wasted in that way. More than that, no wheat is used in England, Italy or France for the distillation of alcohol for beverage purposes.

As for beer, while the Christian people strove to gain wartime prohibition, and many still hope for it, these facts are of interest so far as food conservation is concerned: In 1916 there was used in the production of malt for the manufacture of beer for home consumption and export about 60,000,000 bushels of barley, 15,000,000 bushels of corn, and 3,000,000 bushels of rice. This was about 30 per cent of the normal barley crop and one-half of one per cent. of this year's corn crop. To prohibit the making of beer, therefore, would save 60,000,000 bushels of barley, which if milled would produce a pound loaf of barley bread per day for 6,000,000 people, if our people could be persuaded to eat it.

Why should Christian people save what, then? Because not a bushel of wheat is being used today for the manufacture of intoxicating drinks, and wheat is the one grain our Allies must have and that our people are asked to save.

One point more. The fact has been pressed upon us from the first by the Food Administrator that if we are to feed our boys in the war zone and our Allies and win the war, we must somehow supply the Allies with at least 220,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, for which there can be no substitute.

The 60,000,000 bushels of barley now used in the making of beer is equivalent to 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, based on their milling ratios. Therefore, if we could substitute this barley for wheat on an even basis by abolishing the brewing industry we should still need to save 170,000,000 bushels of wheat to send abroad.

This ought to answer the question. We should have to carry out the food conservation program even if the Government were to prohibit the manufacture of beer tomorrow. We are in the midst of war. We cannot make our co-operation as Christian citizens and patriots dependent upon the prior righting of all social and economic wrongs. Hunger will not wait upon reform movements, however righteous. We certainly should not have less beer manufactured if Germany were to win the war. Recognizing the absolute necessity of supplying our Allies with their minimum requirement of wheat, also of meat, sugar and fats, we have but one duty in the crisis—not to question why not something else, but to throw ourselves unreservedly into this patriotic service immediately required of us. In so doing we are condoning no wrong which any of us believes needs to be dealt with. Let us discriminate, not charge up to the Food Administration what is not in its province to deal with, and gladly do our patriotic bit. Save food? Yes—and if there is some waste incident to the sudden gathering of great bodies of men in cantonments, then the more need to save.

Home Card

UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION

WHAT YOU CAN DO TO HELP WIN THIS WAR.

See other side showing why you should do it.

Our problem is to feed our Allies this winter by sending them as much food as we can of the most concentrated nutritive value in the least shipping space. These foods are wheat, beef, pork, dairy products, and sugar.

Our solution is to eat less of these and more of other foods of which we have an abundance, and to waste less of all foods.

Bread and cereals.—Have at least one wheatless meal a day. Use corn, oat, rye, barley, or mixed cereal rolls, muffins, and breads in place of white bread certainly for one meal and, if possible, for two. Eat less cake and pastry.

As to the white bread, if you buy from a baker, order it a day in advance; then he will not bake beyond his needs. Cut the loaf on the table and only as required. Use stale bread for toast and cooking.

Meat.—Use more poultry, rabbits, and especially fish and sea food in place of beef, mutton, and pork. Do not use either beef, mutton, or pork more than once daily, and then serve smaller portions. Use all left-over meat cold or in made dishes. Use soups more freely. Use beans; they have nearly the same food value as meat.

Milk.—Use all of the milk, waste no part of it. The children must have whole milk; therefore, use less cream. There is a great waste of food by not using all skim and sour milk. Sour milk can be used in cooking and to make cottage cheese. Use buttermilk and cheese freely.

Fats (butter, lard, etc.).—Dairy butter has food values vital to children. Therefore, use it on the table as usual, especially for children. Use as little as possible in cooking. Reduce the use of fried foods to reduce the consumption of lard and other fats. Use vegetable oils, as olive and cottonseed oil. Save daily one-third of an ounce of animal fat. Waste no soap; it contains fat and the glycerine necessary for explosives. You can make scrubbing soap at home, and, in some localities, you can sell your saved fats to the soap maker, who will thus secure our needed glycerine.

Sugar.—Use less candy and sweet drinks. Use less sugar in tea and coffee. Use honey, maple sirup, and dark sirups for hot cakes and waffles without butter or sugar. Do not frost or ice cakes. Do not stint the use of sugar in putting up fruits and jams. They may be used in place of butter.

Vegetables and fruits.—We have a superabundance of vegetables. Double the use of vegetables. They take the place of part of the wheat and meat, and, at the same time, are healthy. Use potatoes abundantly. Store potatoes and roots properly and they will keep. Use fruits generously.

Fuel.—Coal comes from a distance, and our railway facilities are needed for war purposes. Burn fewer fires. If you can get wood, use it.

GENERAL SUGGESTION.

Buy less; cook no more than necessary; serve smaller portions.

Use local and seasonable supplies.

Patronize your local producers and lessen the need of transportation.

Preach and practice the "gospel of the clean plate."

We do not ask the American people to starve themselves. Eat plenty, but wisely, and without waste.

Do not limit the plain food of growing children.

Do not eat between meals.

Watch out for the waste in the community.

You can yourself devise other methods of saving to the ends we wish to accomplish. Under various circumstances and with varying conditions you can vary the methods of economizing.

FIND OUT WHAT YOUR NEIGHBOR IS PLANNING.

Of course you know what schemes your own church is undertaking for the coming year, but do you know what other churches and denominations are planning? Perhaps they have some new ideas that would be very well worth your while to hear about or even imitate. In the November issue of MEN AND MISSIONS there is an illuminating survey of Inspiring Denominational Programs, telling in a brief way the striking features of interest. Other timely articles in this issue of the "Men's Magazine" are about the Luther celebration; an exceptionally illuminating article on Mexico by Dr. S. B. Winton, who probably knows as much about the facts in the case as any other living man, for he has spent many years in the country as an editor and missionary and is today acting secretary of the American Committee on Co-operation in Latin America; the latest news from the Near East concerning the Armenians and Syrians, for whom President Wilson has just issued an appeal for help.

TOO CHEAP.

A collier came to me at the close of one of my meetings and said, "I would like to be a Christian, but I cannot receive what you said tonight."

I asked him why not.

He replied: "I would give anything to believe that God would forgive my sins, but I cannot believe that He will forgive them if I just turn to Him. It is too cheap."

I looked at him and said: "My dear friend, have you been working today?"

He looked at me slightly astonished, and said: "Yes, I was down in the pit, as usual."

"How did you get out o fthe pit?" I asked.

"The way I usually do. I got into the cage and was pulled to the top."

"How much did you pay to come out of the pit?"

He looked at me astonished, and said: "Pay? Of course I didn't pay anything."

I asked him: "Were you not afraid to trust yourself in the cage? Was it not too cheap?"

"Oh, no!" he said. "It was cheap for me, but it cost the company a lot of money to sink that shaft."

And without another word the truth of that admission broke in on him, and he saw if he could have salvation without money and without price, it had cost the infinite God a great price to sink that shaft and rescue lost men.—Selected.

To provide food, clothing and other necessities of life during the winter months for 2,140,000 destitute survivors (latest reports indicate more nearly 3,000,000) in western Asia requires a minimum total of $30,000,000.00. Of this amount the carefully computed proportionate share that normally should be contributed from Greensboro is $5,525.00.

The above apportionment may seem large. But should every city and town in the United States contribute its full share as suggested the total would give to each dependent man, woman and child a pittance of less than eight cents per day to meet the winter's needs at famine prices. Every dollar lacking means untold suffering and possible death which it is within our power to prevent.

NOW FOR A GOOD FINISH.

These are anxious days, and busy ones, too, for pastors and people. Just two more weeks and the record of another Conference year will be made. The spiritual part of the work is largely done, and pastor and people are now turning their attention to the financial side. On many fields no doubt much yet remains to be done in this particular. The deficit in the Annual and General Conference Budgets is to be raised, besides the balance yet due on pastor's salary. The time is short in which to do this, yet enough remains in which to do a great deal toward raising these claims. Let us see to it that they are paid—and paid in full. You do not want your pastor to go to Conference unpaid, neither do you want your delegate embarrassed by financial obligations unmet.

God expects us to do our best in this particular, and if we will ask him, he will lead us to see what our best is. This has been a year of great financial prosperity; business is prosperous and the people have an abundance of money. Let's give God his share of it, and glorify him by paying every cent of every assessment.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of our Children's Home it was unanimously decided that we put forth every effort to induce every member of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina to contribute, between now and Thanksgiving, at least one day's salary or one day's income for the purpose of wiping out the remainder of the debt on the Home and we sincerely trust that every friend of this Home will make himself or herself a Committee of one to see that this resolution is carried out.

We now have forty-one children in the Home and it is most important that this debt be paid during this year thereby placing us in position to use the money that we are now paying for interest to take care of other helpless and homeless children.

It should not be considered a burden on any one to comply with this request but on the other hand should be considered a privilege; think what it means if every one will do this. We have over twenty-two thousand members in North Carolina, a majority having an income of some kind or at least able to do something on this Thanksgiving to aid suffering humanity.

If we would only stop and think for a moment of the blessings we have and the prosperity in this land of ours and compare this with the destitution of other countries, Belgium for instance, we would not hesitate a moment about making this donation.

We appeal to the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and Sunday school teachers to take this up at once and arrange committees, make the collections without waiting until Thanksgiving Day and send it to Capt. A. M. Rankin, Treasurer, High Point, N. C.

Respectfully,

J. M. Millikan,
Chmn. Board of Trustees.

"Oh, matchless honor, all unsought,
High privilege surpassing thought,
That Thou shouldst call me, O Lord, to be Linked in such work, O God, with Thee!
To carry out Thy wondrous plan
To bear Thy message unto man;
In trust with Christ's own word of grace,
To each soul of the human race."

What Food Saving Involves

Sign the pledge and enroll as a member of the United States Food Administration, and you will be asked to do these things:

Eat plenty, but wisely, and without waste.

Buy less; cook no more than necessary; serve smaller portions.

Preach and practice the "gospel of the clean plate."

Use local and seasonable supplies;—watch out for waste.

Whenever possible use poultry, game and sea foods in place of beef, mutton and pork.

Use potatoes and other vegetables freely.

Save wheat by substituting, in part, corn meal and other cereal flours for wheat flour.

Save butter and lard. Use butter on the table, but substitute vegetable oils for cooking.

Save sugar. Use less candy and sweet drinks and less sugar in tea and coffee.

"This is a duty of necessity, humanity and honor. As a free people we have elected to discharge this duty, not under autocratic decree, but without other restraint than the guidance of individual conscience."

—Herbert Hoover.

PLEDGE CARD FOR UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION

If you have already signed, pass this on to a friend.

TO THE FOOD ADMINISTRATOR:

I am glad to join you in the service of food conservation for our nation and I hereby accept membership in the United States Food Administration, pledging myself to carry out the directions and advice of the Food Administrator in my home, insofar as my circumstances permit.

Name ....

Street ....

City .... State ....

There are no fees or dues to be paid. The Food Administration wishes to have as members all of those actually handling food in the home.

Anyone may have the Home Card of Instruction, but only those signing pledges are entitled to Membership Window Card, which will be delivered upon receipt of the signed pledge.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

A resolution passed by the last Annual Conference requires that all persons expecting entertainment shall give notice to the church entertaining the Conference at least two weeks previous to the assembling of the Conference. This time limit expires tomorrow—Nov. 7th. We feel now that we shall be able to home all who have given us this timely notice.

Trains.

Persons coming from the west can reach Mebane at 9: 35 A. M., Wednesday morning. This will be in good time for the opening of Conference. A train from the west arrives at 5: 15 P. M. and one at 2 A. M. which no one will wish to use, because of the hour.

Trains from the east arrive at 4:57 A. M. and at 10: 51 A. M. and 5: 58 P. M.

A Special Request.

We hope that our own people can care for all those who must come on Tuesday, either in the A. M. or P. M. until Wednesday morning. Therefore we request that all who must come on Tuesday will drop us a postal card in good time. Do it now, won't you? Cordially yours, Committee on Entertainment.

A REASONABLE APPEAL.

The people of North Carolina have never failed to tread the path of duty open to them. To each and every call to service, in the interest of home and country, they have responded with liberality and cheerfulness. Her young men are covering themselves with glory by evidences of devotion to the flag, in word and action, and will give a splendid account ofthemselves at every turn of the way towards a lasting peace. Her captains of industry and her sons of toil have opened their hearts to the Liberty Loan, the Red Cross, and the cause espoused by the Young Men's Christian Association. Her noble women have dedicated themselves to the service of their country and are showing to the world a love for human freedom that is beautiful to contemplate. The cries of heartbroken mothers, starving children, outraged daughters, and tortured fathers, in unspeakable need beyond the ocean wave, have fallen upon sympathetic ears throughout our Christian land, and the spirit of service here in North Carolina shows that, with our people, the first consideration is the honor of the flag, the safety of the Nation, and peace to all the world. And it is well, for without self-sacrifice true happiness may not be attained in this world.

But while the measure of the Nation's honor and the Nation's heart is being taken, in relation to world conditions of today, let us not overlook the urgent needs of fatherless and motherless waifs at our own doors. For after all, charity begins at home. Let us not overlook the hundreds of dependent children whom the orphanages of our State are training for individual efficiency and good citizenship. Every one of these institutions needs better equipment and larger support, and every one of them is besieged with applications for admission which must be denied for lack of means. Their capacity must be increased, or else hundreds of children now wandering the highways and byways, subject to every evil temptation the world has to offer, will be neglected and probably irretrievably lost. We cannot—we will not—forget, for the Master says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto Me." We are admonished to conserve the products of the farm, the forest, the factory, and the mine. Is it not equally— aye, vastly more—important to conserve the future manhood and womanhood of North Carolina? Shall the orphaned children of this glorious old commonwealth be handicapped for life because, in their tender years, they did not have the sheltering care and culture of an orphan home?

The North Carolina Orphan Association again calls upon every man, woman, and child in the State to contribute on, or near, Thanksgiving Day at least one day's income (more if they will; less if they can do no better) to the orphanage of his or her choice. The need for such a call was never more urgent than now. Expense necessary to the maintenance of every orphan home in the State has increased, while the responsibilities have multiplied. So, let not the day pass without making a thank-offering to your Master, by denying yourself some pleasure, some luxury, even some necessity, to help the helpless become what their God and your God intended they should attain in this life and in the life to come.

This is a reasonable request, for any one can share with the orphans the earnings of one day out of three hundred and sixty-five. It is practicable, for rich and poor alike can participate in it. The business and professional man, the farmer, the landlord, the money-lender, the wage earner, the salaried worker, the housewife, the news and messenger boys—EVERYBODY, old and young, of all creeds and classes, may unite in beautiful co-operation for the support of a needed civic and Christian philanthropy. Let North Carolina make the approaching Thanksgiving a day of historic importance; a day on which the hearts of the people were opened to the little ones whom our splendid orphan homes are endeavoring to save from degeneracy and oblivion.

To this end we call upon the editors of our papers, daily and weekly, secular and religious, to give the widest possible publicity to this movement, which is philantropic in purpose and State-wide in extent; we call upon all church leaders of all denominations, including pastors, Sunday school superintendents, women workers, and others of influence, to urge the giving of a day's income to some one of our orphanages; we call upon the officers of the various fraternal orders to bring this appeal to the attention of each man in their membership and enlist his support of this modest offering; we respectfully request all superintendents and teachers of secular schools, colleges, and universities to induce their students and friends to unite with them in giving a day's work or wages to the needy orphans of North Carolina. We invoke the co-operation of doctors, merchants, public officials, and all others with local following to pass the word along, with the Divine injunction: "Even so, it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones shall perish." Actions speak louder than words.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

In making out Financial Report to Conference Treas., disregard the items specified on the envelope, as Home Mis., Foreign Mis., &c., and after the words, "General Conference Budget," and "Annual Conference Budget," write, in figures, the amounts enclosed for these respective causes.

(See Journal, pg. 79, for items included in each of these budgets.)

If you enclose special offering, for either the General or Annual Conference Budget, write the amount in figures opposite the word "Special."

By observing this direction you will greatly simplify the work for the Conference Treasurer, and also for yourselves.

S. W. Taylor, Conf. Treas.

P. S.—Enclose all receipts.

—Please heed the request of the Entertainment Committee at Mebane if it concerns you. It concerns every member of the Faculty and every one to come before that body. It will cost you two cents, but that is less than a hotel fare. Besides, the hotels of Mebane may be overflowing, and the weather is too cold to sleep out of doors.

WORK AMONG THE LUMBER JACKS.

This is a brief report of recent work in the lumber camps by Congregational missionaries. There are several thousand men working in the forests of Washington, about 50 per cent. of whom are Swedes. Dressed as real lumbermen, carrying our bed and necessary baggage on our backs, we visited five camps in Snohomish and Kings counties. We were well received in all of the camps but one. At five-thirty the men came to the camp from their working places. After supper a meeting was announced and the service began by the ringing of a bell, the guitar serving that purpose. Preaching was in English and Swedish—the latter greatly enjoyed by the Scandinavians. At some of the camps the service could hardly be brought to a close as the men wanted to keep on singing.

There are all kinds of men among the lumbermen, educated and uneducated, young and old, men with good characters and men who are low down, those who are Christian and those who are not. Therefore the missionary who goes to them with with a heart-to heart gospel shall receive blessings and be himself a blessing.

Lumber Camps of Minnesota.

One cannot travel about northern Minnesota without seeing the wonderful transformation in all stages of its progress. There is still lumbering in the state but the days when Minnesota was a veritable Eldorado to the lumberman are passing. But the lumber camps are by no means a thing of the past, and the lumber jack, one of the most picturesque figures of northern Minnesota is still in existence. He makes a bright and attractive figure on the back ground of a pine forest, and he is interesting not only to see but to hear, for like nature, he speaks in a various language. He has faults, and they are grievous ones, but he is as a rule kind hearted and generous. It is because of his environment, as well as his human need that a religious and brotherly interest has been taken in the lumberjack. It has not been easy to furnish lumber camps with religious services because of their remoteness; Congregational work has been largely confined to the villages and towns along the railroads where the greatest number of people could be reached, but in many instances, and wherever opportunity has offered and conditions have made it possible, missionaries are visiting remote camps in Minnesota and finding a hearty welcome and a respectful hearing.

THE ANTHRACITE MINER.

During the pioneer period in mining the operators provided rough homes for their workmen. There are only a few of these remaining now. English speaking people including Welsh and English, Scotch and Irish, occupied such homes forty or fifty years ago, but a large percentage of them now own their homes, others rent better houses, and a few of the old houses are rented by the foreign element.

When the Welsh and English came to Pennsylvania some seventy-five or more years ago, they brought their religious customs with them. One of the first things they did was to organize Sunday-schools, prayer meetings and preaching services. They stood in no need of evangelists inasmuch as they were zealous Christians. The large number of people who have come to this state in recent years have materially changed conditions in the coal fields. In truth the district has become a mission field, and as we find openings we offer to these people such as we have.—Missionary Review, Selected by Chas. H. Beck, Secretary.

"OVER THE TOP" WITH THE YEAR BOOK.

Crates S. Johnson, Secretary Forward Movement Commission.

In a few weeks the first edition of the Methodist Protestant Year Book will be ready for distribution, the 1918 edition. The service of many is engaged in its preparation, and all the conferences are to be represented in a way to reflect their past and present activities. We are endeavoring to gather the latest statistical reports and, since many of the conferences do not hold their annual sessions till late in the fall, quick work will be required to obtain these facts for publication at the time we must go to press, and yet this is what we are attempting and it can be done with the help of all who are asked to help.

Just now many are being asked to do their bit. If you receive a communcation from the editor answer it by return mail if you can. Now is the time to send in your order. Make it for as many as you can sell in your locality or give away. They will make appropriate Christmas souvenirs or New Years' greetings to be given out by Sunday schools. Rev. Daniel F. Myers of Bryant, Indiana, orders fifty copies for this purpose. Send your order in now to either of our Publishing Houses, at Pittsburgh or Baltimore, or to the Secretary of the Forward Movement Commission, 24 15th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, who is editor.

A large variety of subjects will be included, such as the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor topics for 1916, the 1918 Calendar, the names and location of our churches, and pastoral charges, the name and address of our ministers and preachers, directories of Sunday school superintendents and presidents of Missionary and Christian Endeavor Societies, reviews of the work of our educational and missionary operations, statistical tables, illustrations, parcel post rates, a perpetual calendar, and a thousand and one facts of importance to Methodist Protestants. The motive that prompts this publication as directed by General Conference entitles it to your appreciation and acceptance. The price is nominal and every preacher should take an ample supply for his people. Satisfactory terms of payment may be arranged. Just now let us have your order.

The price is as follows:

100 copies, express extra	$15.00
50 copies, express extra	9.00
25 copies, express extra	5.00
10 copies, express extra	2.50
5 copies, postage extra	1.50
Single copy. post paid	.30

Now we are accustomed to registering for military service and food conservation and the right of franchise, why not go a step further and have our churches register for co-operation in the Forward Movement. Many of our stronger churches have not been heard from. We are listening. Are you with us? Then say you are. Let us tell you about it.

"WHAT OF THE NIGHT."

We refuse to think of this appalling war in any other terms than those of the faith that believes that at the heart of the universe the Eternal Goodness lives and reigns. Without any solution for the mysteries that perplex us when face to face with the unutterable sufferings that the war has caused and is causing, its waste, its ruin, we are forced to hold that out of this night of impenetrable gloom a nobler day will dawn. This he must maintain who has not abandoned his faith in God. There is an invisible kingdom whose foundations have been laid in this earth of ours, a kingdom of truth and love and righteousness, and against this no gates of hell shall ever prevail.—Our Dumb Animals.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev F C Klein, Sec.

"CARRY ON."

Horace Bushnell said "One more revival, only one more is needed, the revival of Christian Stewardship, and when that revival comes the Kingdom of God will come in a day."

It is generally accepted that the great world war will develop the spirit of sacrifice, that it will be easier to give after such sacrificial giving as marks the progress of the unparalleled conflict.

People having caught the true American spirit, the true war spirit battling for freedom of all lands from military domination will become disposed to give to Foreign Missions for world conquest by the Christ "to destroy the works of the devil," and usher in an era of righteousness, peace and prosperity.

Then too may we not expect that people, after their sacrifices, hardships and sufferings, will return to more simplicity, grasp seriously the serious realities of life and get their true value and relationships, and will manifest it even in less embellished churches, and thus have more to give to real Christian work.

In practically every city of our land, great, costly church buildings have been abandoned, sold at a sacrifice, because of business encroachment, etc., and much money has been thereby lost which, if it had been conserved by less costly structures, would have added greatly to the working forces of Christ's Kingdom.

Can we not assume that the original projectors and contributors to those churches would have hesitated to make such gifts and sacrifices if they had known that in so short a time conditions would have developed as they have.

The motto of the British churches is "Carry on! go forward to possess the land," will not be intimidated, not think of retrenchment in God's cause, but "carry on" Christian work as you carry on the great war, give your sons to the ministry, your daughters to be Christian workers at home and abroad, give your money for religious work as you unflinchingly give it for war, and make similar sacrifices in order to give it.

"Carry on" this holy warfare against sin and all human misery, because God commands it, the world needs it above all else, and every Christian vowed at the altars of his church to do it, to support it "as God gives me ability."

Despite all the drain on the manhood and treasure of England, the British Missionary Societies have not suffered any deficit in their treasuries, and the same holds true in Canada, I understand.

One says of Canada "in spite of the war we are more prosperous than ever before." Another fact is noted: "All the student volunteers in Canada have gone to the front. Many other Christian students who will come back will be anxious to put their lives where they will count for the most. There is a soberness and seriousness amongst our people which is going to be for the good of Christian Missions in the future."

What is true of England and Canada ought to be true of the United States, and every one of us has his or her part to perform to bring it to pass.

War's demands upon us are multiplying and now that our soldiers are in the trenches of France, with all involved therein, our nation will respond loyally to all their needs to end victoriously the war, and surely our churches will see to it that the Foreign Missionary work with the Home work will not suffer.

You can, brother pastor, render the help now needed by sending every month one-twelfth of the general Budget to the General Treasurer, Rev. C. H. Beck, in Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE LAW OF SACRIFICE.

"Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood. And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time."—1 Kings 18: 33-34.

Some people think that there must have been a spring on the top of Carmel. else there could not have been so much water obtained at this time of sore drought as was poured again and again upon the sacrifice. However, we believe that something deeper is implied in this lavish and seeming prodigal use of water, when it was so scarce and no doubt very costly. We believe that this extravagance was nothing less than a mark of faith to everyone who helped to furnish the large supply. The multitude there gathered had treasured the water like gold. But the faithful Israelites who were present among that great company so believed God and His prophet that they willingly sacrificed their all, though it were but a scant supply. And very many united their portion to make the abundance that was needed for the sacrifice. It probably seemed impossible, except to faith, to secure so much as the first four barrels of water. But this did not suffice. He tested them the second time for four barrels more. And again the people offered their store. He asked the third time. And still the faith and generosity of the people responded. God was honored by the sacrifice of the people and by these acts, Israel had a share in the mighty miracle that was wrought by both the fire and afterward the rains from heaven which broke the three and a half years of drought. The pouring out of the water was more than to show there was no concealed fire. It was a libation to God. It was offered at the proper hour. And it was accepted by Him.

It requires the sacrifice of water to bring water from heaven. It takes the sacrifice of wheat sown to make the harvest. It takes the sacrifice of souls to win souls. The sacrifice of our best brings God's best from heaven in showers of blessing. This is the great law of sacrifice. Like brings forth like. Consecration begets consecration. There is no good lost. The best can only flourish when the best is offered. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse . . . and prove me now herewith, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3: 10.

FAMOUS BOYS.

A woman fell off the dock in Italy. She was fat and frightened. No one of the crowd of men dared to jump in after her, but a boy struck the water as soon as she, and managed to keep her up until stronger arms got hold of her. Every body said the boy was very daring, very kind, very quick, but also very reckless, for he might have been drowned. The boy was Garibaldi, and if you will read his life, you will find these were his traits all the way through—that he was so alert that nobody could tell when he would make an attack with his red-shirted soldiers, so indiscreet sometimes as to make his fellow patriots wish he was in Guinea, but also so brave and magnanimous that all the world except tyrants, loved to hear and talk about him.

A boy used to crush the flowers to get their color, and painted the white side of his father's cottage in Tyrol with all sorts of pictures, which the mountaineer gazed at as wonderful. He was the great artist Titian.

An old painter watched a little fellow who amused himself making drawings of his pit and brushes, easel and stool, and said, "That boy will beat me some day." So he did, for he was Michael Angelo.

A German boy was reading a blood-and-thunder novel. Right in the midst of it he said to himself: now this will never do. I get too much excited over it, I can't study so well after it. So here goes!" And he flung the book out into the river. He was Fichte, the great German philosopher.—Our Dumb Animals.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

WHEN DON FORGAVE.

“Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.”

Don came from school one day crying as though his heart would break.

“Why Don, what is the matter?” asked his mother, “what has happened?”

He was not a boy who let the tears come easily, but a manly little fellow who generally met bumps and bruises and all his little trials with a brave smile, so mamma felt a bit alarmed.

Don could not speak for a few minutes, then sobbed: “The teacher said I cheated when I didn't, and I'll never forgive her for saying it before the whole school.”

“Why did she say it?” asked his mother who could not believe her boy guilty of such an act.

“Well, you know,” Don said, the teacher has always told us whatever else we do, never to deceive her, and we have all tried to show how we can be trusted. Today we had some extra hard examples, and instead of giving us answers, she said when we had them all done she would call off the answers, and let us mark our own papers. So, when we had finished, she read the answers, and if we had the example right, we raised our hands, but if it was wrong we marked it so. Now, mamma, you know how hard arithmetic is for me, and how hard I've tried, especially lately, because”—and he hesitated a moment—“since I gave myself to Jesus I've wanted to please Him; and I always ask Him to help me now. I did this morning and tried so hard to have a perfect paper, and I was so pleased when I could raise my hand to every example.

“By and by the teacher stopped, then called an answer. I was the only one who had it right. She did not say anything then, but when she had finished all the others—and I put my hand up every time—she said again:

“ ‘Who had the ninth example right?’ and I was the only one. Then she said: ‘Now I'm going to tell you a secret. I didn't give you the right answer for I wanted to test you.’ Then she gave another answer, just one number different from the one she had given before, and the one I had! I was feeling so sorry because I knew my rank would not be perfect, when she began to talk about how pleased she was that so many had been honest, and not raised their hands, and then, oh, mamma, she said I had put up my hand when I ought not to. That I wanted to get perfect rank so badly I had tried to deceive I was so angry, and told her I did have the answer she called, but she just wouldn't believe me, and I'll never, never forgive her.”

Mamma did not say anything for a few moments after Don had finished the story, then spoke quietly.

“Well, Don, I think it will come out all right. I know you did not deceive her, and God knows, so we will trust Him to make it right, won't we? But what makes me feel badly is because my boy has such anger in his heart. I know he will not let the naughty thoughts stay there.”

“I just can't help it, mamma,” he answered, “when I think of her saying that before the whole school, I feel so hot and angry inside, and it seems as though I can never forgive her.”

“Listen while I tell you a story,” said mamma. “Long, long ago some fishermen went out on the sea, and with them was a very dear Friend. After awhile He grew weary, and lying down in a boat fell asleep. I think His friends all moved softly and talked in low tones, that they might not awake Him, for they knew how tired He was. But by and by it grew dark, the wind blew, and soon a great storm was raging. The waves were high and strong and their boat was so tossed about that even those brave fishermen, used to the sea, grew frightened, as they saw they were in danger. They knew their Friend was one who could do wonderful things, they wished, oh, so much, that He would wake up, for though they did not know just what He would do, they were sure He would not let any harm come to them for He loved them very much. And because they loved Him too, and knew how much He needed rest, they hesitated to call Him.

“ ‘How strange it is,’ they said, ‘that He sleeps through all this dreadful storm! How tired He must be! And then, as the boat nearly turned over, and the wind blew the sea into enormous waves, they called in terror to their Friend:

“ ‘Master, carest thou not that we perish?’

“Then I think their own hearts must have been stilled and comforted, as the waves quieted and the wind ceased to blow ill, the sea was calm as the Master rose and spoke in tones of power: ‘Peace, be still;’ and then turning to His friends asked why they had not trusted Him, because they must have known He would take care of them. How sorry they must have been that even for a moment they were afraid, and how they must have loved Him as they realized His wonderful power.

“When after awhile this same Friend was suffering cruelly as wicked men drove nails into His hands and feet, these fishermen, who were standing by with broken hearts, heard Him whisper, ‘Father, forgive them,’ and they wondered at the love that could forgive such awful sin, and forget self in the thought of others when He was in such agony. And I'm sure that always after, when some one had wronged them, they thought of their Master, and found it easy to forgive as they remembered.”

Don was quiet for a moment as his mother finished, then he whispered:

“Mamma, you know every night I say, ‘Our Father,’ and I've been wondering how I can tonight, because of the forgiving part.”

“Do you want the unforgiving spirit to go away?” asked mamma.

“I'm quite sure I do,” Don answered slowly, “but somehow I can not seem to make it.”

“If you ask Him, the One who stilled the waters on the sea of Galilee so long ago will say, ‘Peace, be still,’ to the storm in your heart,” said Don's mother, “and though the teacher may never find out she was wrong in doubting you, and make it right, no matter if only when God looks into your heart, He sees not even a speck of anger toward her, He will be pleased. Don't you want Him to do this, Don?”

“Yes,” Don said, “I'm sure if it makes Him sorry to see naughtiness in my heart I'll ask Him to take it away. It's a good thing,” he added, isn't it mamma, that God never says He will not forgive people? Because, you see, if He did, He might say it to us sometimes. I think we ought to love Him a great deal, don't you?”

The next morning when the morning exercises were over, Don's teacher rose and said:

“In looking carefully at Don's paper I find I was mistaken in what I said yesterday, and I wish to apologise. I am sure he never has and never will deceive me in any way.”

Don's feet were not slow that noon, as he hurried home to tell his mother the story, saying as he finished: “I'm so glad I asked Jesus last night to take the anger out of my heart; and I didn't speak to teacher about it, as I wanted to.”—Selected.

GREELEY THE SPELLER.

No champion of the old-time spelling-matches, perhaps, ever excelled Horace Greeley. He was, in fact, a spelling prodigy. What would the boys and girls of today, who grumble over their daily stint of twenty words, think of a child not yet six years old who could actually spell every word in the English language! That is what young Horace is said to have been able to do.

His schooling began in his fourth year, and the art of spelling at once became a passion with him. In school and out, he kept incessantly at its study. Hour after hour he would lie on the floor, spelling over all the difficult words he could find in the few books that the family owned.

The fame of his prowess spread. Naturally, Horace was the first one chosen at spelling-matches. He had a lisping, whining voice, and spelled his words with the utmost confidence. Sometimes in winter, when the snowdrifts were so deep that one of the big boys had to take him to the school house on his back, the little white-haired fellow would drop asleep between turns. When his word came around, his neighbor would nudge him anxiously; he would wake, spell his words, and drop asleep at once.

So great was this boy's reputation as a student of unusual powers that the selectmen of a neighboring town, in passing a rule forbidding the attendance at the local school of any pupil from outside the township honored him by adding the clause, "Excepting Horace Greeley." —Presbyterian Banner.

HALF-WILLIE.

There was once a boy whose name was Half-Willie. Could you guess why he was called this? Because he was not faithful. I am sure you would not want such a name. He had a habit of doing only half of what he was to do. The wood-box he filled anly half full, the row of potatoes he was to dig in the garden was only half dug and many small potatoes were scattered about, and so on. One day he wanted very much to go on an excursion.

"But I am afraid 'twould be a waste of money," said his father. "I'm afraid you would only get half of the pleasure of the trip. You know—"

"If you'll let me go, papa," interrupted Willie, "I'll never do anything by halves again—never."

His father promised to let him go. The day of the excursion came. In the morning his father sent Willie to oil the carriage, and then he drove him down to the station. Half a mile from the station one of the wheels gave a dismal sound and wouldn't turn. His father turned and looked at Willie.

"I—I didn't oil that wheel. I was in such a hurry."

"Run to the next house and borrow a wrench and oil-can. You'll have to hurry!"

When they had oiled the wheel so that it would turn they drove as fast as they could, but when they came in sight of the station they saw the train starting. Willie thought of the ocean, the rowing, and the clam-bake that he had missed, and he could hardly keep back the tears.

"Now, Willie, what do you say?" asked his father.

"I'll never be a 'does-half' boy again, pappa—really and truly."

And Willie was faithful after that.—Sunday School Times.

"BETTER THAN LEMONADE."

A pink bow appeared over the top of the high board fence, then a mop of sunny brown curls and a pair of bright brown eyes.

"Janie! Ja-a-ne-eee!"

A little rosy-cheeked girl in a plaid gingham dress scrambled up from the floor of the back porch, and the tower she was building with a-b-c blocks fell with a crash. Baby Louise crowed with delight.

"Here I am," answered Janie, leaning over the rail. "What do you want?"

"Come over and play croquet. It's all shady on that side of the yard, and Mary and Constance are coming, and mother may make lemonade," called Rena Snow, in a shrill, excited voice.

"I'll ask mother," said Janie Wood, eagerly. She took the baby's fat hand and led her into the back hall.

"Is that you, Janie?" came from the sitting room. "I was just going to call you."

"Yes'm. I was just going to find you."

She opened the door and went in. Mrs. Wood was tying up a bundle in brown paper. "Will you do an errand for me, Janie?" she asked. "I want you to carry some roses to Mrs. Southerland."

Janie stood quite still. Mrs. Southerland lived at the other end of the village; it would be almost supper time when one had walked to her house and back.

"I am very anxious for her to have the roses," said Mrs. Wood. "I will stay here and keep baby, for I don't feel well enough to take the long walk."

"I will go, mother," said Janie, and swallowed a big lump in her throat. There would be no croquet for her, she knew, and no lemonade.

"Thank you, my dear little girl." Janie's mother leaned over and kissed her. "Now put on your clean blue gingham and your tan sandals. By the time you are dressed I will have the roses in a basket all ready for you to carry."

It was a very sober little girl who trudged down the dusty street half an hour later. But the roses in the basket were very lovely, and the pleased expression on her mother's face was pleasant to remember. If only the children in the yard next door had not seemed to be having such a merry time when Janie passed! Tears came to her eyes when she thought of it, and once a bright drop fell into the dust and rolled over and over like a little ball. But at last the big, fine house was reached, and Mrs. Southerland was seen sitting on the front porch. Janie smoothed back her hair and wondered if there were any tear stains on her cheeks.

As she went up the stone steps Mrs. Southerland came to meet her. She seemed very glad to see Janie, and made her sit in a big rocking chair while she went to take the roses out of the basket. She stayed away a long time, Janie thought. The shadows were growing long; soon the children would stop playing croquet. There might be rain tomorrow—perhaps a whole week—and there could be no croquet. Janie leaned back in the chair and closed her eyes.

"Janie," called Mrs. Southerland, "come into the house. I have something to tell you." Janie obeyed, and followed Mrs. Southerland into a large, beautifully furnished bedroom.

"My little niece from the city is here for a few days," she said, "and I am going to have a surprise supper for her tonight. There are to be twelve little girls here, and you are to be one of them. I have just telephoned to your mother and she says you may stay if you wish. Do you?"

Janie was so surprised she could hardly speak. Her face grew crimson, and she hung her head a little. At last she managed to stammer out a timid "Yes'm."

"Then you shall stay," said Mrs. Southerland.

"Maybe I'd better—not," said Janie, looking down at her plain gingham dress and brown sandals.

"Yes, I want you to stay," said the sweet lady, smiling. "I asked your mother if I might draw you in one of my little niece's white dresses, and she said I might. And she has some white slippers which would fit you, I know. And would you like a pink sash or a blue one?"

"Blue!" cried Janie, her eyes shining.

"Then I am going to dress you right away, for Doris will be home soon. I sent her to a neighbor's, so she would not know about the surprise supper."

As Janie went into the beautiful tiled bathroom to wash her face she could not help clapping her hands softly. She was thinking of three things: of the choquet game she missed, of the surprise supper, and the ride home in the Southerland's big automobile; and last of all, of the smile on her mother's tired face when she had agreed so willingly to carry the roses.

"Better than lemonade!" She whispered to herself as she splashed her hands in the water.—The Child's Gem.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Cleveland Ct.—Dear Bro. Holmes: Our special meetings were about as usual especially at three of the churches. The membership was revived and a few reclaimed. Except a few who it seems are "given over to hardness of heart and reprobacy of mind" there is but little material outside the four walls of the church. Pathetic and grave-yard stories will bring people within the church but few if any to Christ. Once members of the church it is almost impossible, it seems, for the gospel to reach them. Our meeting at Mt. Moriah was about the best I was ever in. The church was revived the deepest and most thoroughly it had been in thirty years. There were fifteen conversions and reclamations with eight or ten additions to the church. Thanks to Bro. Ivester for three plain gospel sermons preached at Pleasant Hill. Thanks to Bro. Warlick for a good sermon at Kistlers. Bro. Reed, at the earnest request of the pastor, preached one good sermon for us at Kistlers also. I suppose I am one of the pastors Bro. Reynolds referred to who would not let him or Bro. Reed come to their work. That is altogether a mistake so far as the writer is concerned. Since cotton is the money crop, in this part of the country, and it yet in the boll, also in the wake of the flood that washed away the corn and it an unheard-of price—in the face of these facts I wanted Bro. Reed to postpone his visit until it would be worth while but this he would not do. Having had some experience in church building I was sure they needed all the money they could get. I was not only sorry but hurt over the matter as our people are usually liberal when they have the wherewithal at hand. He got only a very small amount but it can't be helped. W. C. Lassiter.

Ebenezer, Greensville Ct.—Our pastor was with us yesterday and gave us another good sermon as usual. I feel that we were benefited by it. We also had our Sunday school with fairly good attendance, but our school is not doing what we would like for it to do, so many that don't come out to take a part in it, but I trust that there will be more lobarers for the Lord. We also have our cottage prayer meeting with right good attendance. We were glad to have Bro. J. M. Morgan with us in our prayer meeting last second Sunday night and also in our home; hope he will come again. We are sorry to say that Miss Lillie Moore is very sick, but we trust she will recover soon, for we miss her so much at Sunday school. We also had Bro. A. P. Tomson from South Emporia the first Sunday to preach for us; he gave us an able sermon. His text was Jonah 1:3: "So he paid the fare". He gave us words that will be long remembered. We hope he will soon come again.

We are also sorry to say that Mr. P. L. Bradley was taken quite ill yesterady.

I will close with much love to Herald and its readers and desire the prayers of all Christian people.

Mrs. Myrtle Clements.

Barley, Va., Oct. 29.

Uwharrie Ct.—Will you please allow me space in your most noble paper to say a few things about this field of work? It has been some three or four months since I have written up a report for this field of labor, not because we haven't had anything to write up, but because I have been too busy to take up this particular line of work, and dispose of it.

This is a large circuit, and the churches here are pretty well scattered through two counties, and I have been very busy filling my regular appointments, and holding our protracted meetings, which are now over for this year. I did most of the preaching in my special meetings here this year. Bro. W. D. Reed came over from Denton to Canaan, preached four very helpful sermons for us, which were enjoyed by pastor and people, and appreciated by all.

Bro. Atlas Ridge, a local preacher belonging to this circuit, did a great deal to assist the pastor, by preaching five or six sermons at Cid, and Piny Grove; also by taking the pastor back and forth in his auto. Bro. Ridge preaches well for his chance. We wish to thank him for his kindness to us during the sickness of our children. We also thank Sister Iva Wicks for her kindness during the sickness of our baby, while the pastor had to be at Cid in his special meeting.

The special meetings have been good, especially so. where the people were willing to lay aside everything else, and have a meeting. We had seventy-nine conversions, and reclamations and twenty-nine accessions.

I filled my last appointment for the year at Mount Pleasant church last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock A. M. and received four very acceptable members at that time. After my year's work was finished at Mount Pleasant church last Sunday morning, the stewards came forward and paid every dollar of every claim at Mount Pleasant church. This church will be the first to go on the Honor Roll of churches for Uwharrie Circuit, nevertheless the other churches say they are going to pay every dollar of every claim.

This Circuit has paid for all claims, as follows:

A. C. B.	$ 50.00
G. C. B.	63.00
Pastor's salary	411.16
Total paid to Oct. 31	$524.16

With best wishes to all the brethren in our conference and hoping to see you all soon, Sincerely yours, D. M. Loy.

Creswell.—Our conference is drawing near and we are trying to close the year's work as best we can. Crops are short in this section owing to the continued rains during the summer. Yesterday we filled the last appointments at Mt. Hermon and Woodley's Chapel. Mt. Hermon paid up in full all claims. Besides they have bought an organ and are now building an elevated choir and platform around the pulpit. Woodley's Chapel has put brick pillars under the church. Mt. Elma has been painted—two coats on the inside and one on the outside and they hope to put the other coat on the outside before long. Rehoboth has bought an organ this year and made other improvements. The parsonage debt has been reduced to a small amount.

During this year we have had Rev. D. A. Braswell, Rev. S. W. Taylor, Dr. F. T. Tagg, Dr. H. L. Elderdice and Dr. Fred C. Klein to visit this charge. We were glad to have them. Rev. G. W. Holmes, our conference president, visited the work in Oct. and we enjoyed his fine sermons.

Our last quarterly conference will meet in our Creswell church Friday night, Nov. 9th. We hope it will be a good conference. J. H. Abernethy.

Nov. 5th.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Ct.—We have been so busy doing other things we have failed to report several things that should have been reported.

We held our last special meeting for this charge at Mt. Zion, beginning the fourth Sunday in September and closing the fifth Sunday. The pastor had no pulpit help. The attendance in the day was not what it should have been. At night the attendance was good. The results of the meeting were good. At the close of the last service the people showed their appreciation of the pastor's efforts by presenting to him ten or twelve dollars cash, which was greatly appreciated.

Last Saturday we held our fourth quarterly conference at Pilot Church. All the churches were represented. Reports showed that we were behind some. Shoals reported pastor paid in full. I think this church will pay off all claims in full. On Sunday Pilot paid balance on pastor's claim, but they are badly behind with other claims. I hope every member will take notice and try to raise every claim in full. I am sure the report for this charge this year will be better than it was last year, but let us not stop till all claims are raised in full.

We greatly appreciate the tokens or kindness we have received from these good people. May the Lord bless each one, and may we all strive to do greater things in the future. Edw.Suits.

Rockingham Ct.—The fourtth quarterly conference met at Pee Dee church Nov. 3d with good attendance. We had a nice conference. All the business was transacted in a spirit of brotherly love. I want to say Pee Dee church started out the first of the year to do its best and I am glad today it has done it. So far as we know all our claims have been paid and in addition Pee Dee paid about $40.00 to help pay indebtedness on Children's Home. We are having a good Sunday school. We have not missed a Sunday in four years. Our school is self-supported. We pay cash for all of our literature. Our school is planning for a good Christmas tree. I am glad to say that we have a faithful set of teachers who are always found at their post of duty.

Pray for us and our work.

J. H. Collins.

Graham.—Another change of program at Sunday-school yesterday; the Jr. Baraca Booster Bible Boys Class had charge, and the President of this class. Mr. Wade Fogleman, made a dandy superintendent. He had some special ''nuggets'' gathered up on the temperance lesson and they were presented by Hoyt Core, Hal Anglin, Dalice Noah, and Tom Epell. Glen Anglin gave us some special selections on the violin. Closed the school by singing the following by the tune of Tipperary.

''It's a long way to prohibition,
  But the right way to go.
It's a long way to prohibition,
  For the fairest land I know.
But it's good-bye, liquor business,
  High license we'll forswear.
It's been a long, long way to prohibition,
  But we're almost there.''

The report of the secretary showed that 127 were present and $5.65 was collected for the Children's Home.

The church services were well attended, and our pastor handed us one of his good sermons as usual, from the text, ''My meat is to do the will of Him who sent me,'' and we are beginning to find out what His will is and then do it. Many of us just take it out in thinking about it but if you listen to Mr. R. S. Troxler a few sermons he will show you how you should not only think about it but DO it.

Our C. E. Society met strictly at 3:30 Sunday afternoon and the best thing about our meeting was that we had quite a number of visitors from the Bethel Society from southern Alamance who know how to handle a topic, and we were very much benefited after about one hour's discussion on ''Perseverance.'' We would not have considered our rally complete had Mr. C. B. Way of Burlington not been with us, as he is the father of our society and makes us all feel good when the ''old man'' comes around and hooks us up to a bigger load. Chas. is ready to help any society out in every way and if there is a church around these ''diggings'' who want to go into this fine work only have to hint it to him and he will be on the job.

And by the way Miss Lola Ezell from the Normal was with us, and only wish could hand you just what she said verbatim as it was too good to print in parts, but it was along the line of perseverance and will tell the balance, only that she was with Mr. Way. Miss Gladys Amick who attended the C. E. Convention at Mt. Airy reported some of the fine things undertaken up there and the society voted that same be published in your paper, so we will boil it down and hand to you in next report.

The Jr. Baraca Booster Bible Boys shouldered up axes and saws and marched into the woods Saturday afternoon to cut wood for some families in town that do not have anything to burn! They made a good showing, and you will hear from this class later. They have nearly finished their school room back of church out of rough lumber at a cost of about $100.00.

Last meeting of stewards showed that we are behind about $30.00 and we are sure that by Annual Conference we can come up with a clear slate as usual.

The Ladies' Aid is sowing grass seed on church yard, and when you visit our church next spring please notice the sign ''Keep off the grass'' and if you should want to know how we made our last drive on our piano debt ask the Ladies' Aid; they do not take it out in thinking about His will, but they know fully the meaning of that little word in text ''D-O.'' Yours very truly,

Phil Dixon.

Tabernacle Circuit.—Tabernacle church is feeling good over having in sight sufficient funds to finish paying the fifty cents per member asked for at the Greensboro Conference for the Children's Home, Julian having gone on the Honor Roll among the first churches, and Moriah some time later. Julian church has worked the every-member canvass and the envelope-collection so well that every thing is paid in full and one more service yet to hold. The other three churches have each had a degree of success with the new system. The canvass is now in progress for next year, and Tabernacle is laying plans by which it is believed the working of the new system will be well-nigh perfected in a year or two. Each church will, of course, pay every cent this year as they have been doing. The new Junior Christian Endeavor Society is a valuable addition at Tabernacle. The Rally Day service in the Tabernacle Sunday-school added interest. The Home Missionary Society by the Shiloh and Julian churches jointly adds a new activity of interest in that locality; this as result of Mrs. Robinson's visit. T. M. Johnson.

Halifax Ct.—Our fourth quarterly conference met at Bethesda Church last Friday. We had the pleasure of having Bro. Bethea with us there, and he also went to Hollister, Eden, and Harmony, while on the circuit. All of the churches reported paid in full except Eden, but it paid all claims yesterday, had money left in the treasury, and then one brother came up and made me a present of $10.00, and it was the second time this year that he had done that. It is now 16 days until Conference meets, but all claims are paid in full, and checks have been sent to pay A. C. budget, G. C. budget, Old Folks' Home, and Journal Fund. It seems good to have a little time to get your breath before Conference, instead of having a great rush at the last moment as some charges have. This Ct. is very considerate of the pastor, and it has been a pleasure to serve them. Recently one man gave me a 19-lb. ham, some flour and other goods amounting to over $10.00. He had given me more than that amount once before during this year. I have also received two tanks of gasoline, fresh fish, sausage, and canned fruit. Never were a people more generous. Our entire family has spent three happy, healthful years. It is an honor to have the pleasure of serving such a people. May God's richest blessings rest upon them. R. A. Swaringen.

Fairview Circuit. — The fourth quarterly conference of this circuit met at Gibsonville on Nov. 4th at 2:30 P. M. The conference was well attended, the best, I think, since I have been on the work. The spirit of the conference was fine. The reports were reasonably good. Two of the churches have paid out on pastor's salary, one overpaid, and are really out on benevolences. The other two I think are in good shape. Our church at Gibsonville is nearing completion. The work on this church consists of the addition of six Sunday school rooms, a tower sixteen by sixteen ft. and about 60 feet high, and a remodeling of the entire structure. When completed the church will be a credit to the town and to our denomination.

J. H. Bowman.

Reidsville Charge.—Bethany Church.—The pastor filled his last regular appointment at Bethany the 4th Sunday afternoon, though he will preach there the 3rd Sunday night at 7: 30. This church paid all claims in full three weeks before the time for Annual Conference to meet. The every-member canvass has been conducted at this place. The amount pledged exceeded this year's budget by thirty or more dollars, but does not cover next year's budget. The canvass is not yet complete, so that we are hoping to cover the entire budget before the year is out. Bethany Church has a great opportunity before her. It remains to be seen whether our M. P. men will shoulder their whole duty and stand by their pastor and by the Annual Conference and all the enterprises of our church. If they will, that church will be a wonderful power in the community where it is located.

Reidsville.—Since last writing one new member has been received at Reidsville—Mrs. H. H. Holt, from Mt. Hermon Church, Mt. Hermon Ct. The every-member canvass has been made at Reidsville also. The budget was almost covered notwithstanding the fact that it is nearly $175 more than last year. The entire budget will be covered by the time the out of town members and a few in town are heard from.

Fourth Sunday was observed as Rally Day at Reidsville. An offering amounting to $4.00 was taken for the Young People's work.

The young people continue to show a great deal of interest in the C. E. Society.

Sunday school officers were elected last Sunday. Prof. J. H. Allen, City Superintendent of school, was elected superintendent, with former Supt. J. H. Turner, assistant, and Bro. McCollum secretary.

The 4th quarterly conference met at Reidsville Monday, Nov. 5th. The usual business was attended to. The conference voted to discontinue the Sandy Cross appointment subject to the approval of the Annual Conference. The conference also made a substantial raise in pastor's salary for next year.

The preacher has sowed the turnip patch and made the every-member canvass as Bro. Bethea advised, and he is trying to do all he can to make everything pleasant for next year's pastor.

L. W. Gerringer, Pas.

P. S.—On Oct. 23rd Mrs. Eva C. Robinson delivered an inspiring address to the women of the Reidsville Church after which she organized a Woman's Home Missionary Society with nine active and six honorary members.

Haw River Ct.—The 4th quarterly conference met with the church at Mizpah Saturday, Nov. 3, 1917. A large number of the officials attended. The business of the conference was transacted in a brotherly manner. The pastor's report showed a net increase in members of 24 during the year. The stewards' report showed general interests to be somewhat behind. We are still hoping to pay all claims. Fair Grove has practically pledged the balance of her claims. Mizpah had done likewise. Friendship has been paying out. We are not expecting her to do less this year. Think Midway will pay out next Sunday. So the pastor and delegate hope to go to Conference with all claims paid.

This, the pastor's first year in the ministry, has been a very pleasant one to him. Haw River is a good circuit to serve. The kindness of the people has won the heart of the pastor. May God's richest blessings rest upon them.

B. M. Williams.

Whereas, God, since we last met, has seen proper to call to their reward two of the members of this Conference, Bros. J. M. Jones and J. D. McCollum;

And whereas, This conference deeply feels the loss of these brethren:

Be it resolved:—

First, that we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Second, that we extend our sympathies to the bereaved families.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our conference records.

Fourth, that a copy be sent to the M. P. Herald for publication.

Written in compliance with a motion passed by the 4th quarterly conference of Haw River Circuit, in session at Mizpah Church, Nov. 3, 1917.

B. M. Williams.

Burlington.—Fairly good attendance at Sunday school and preaching services last Sunday.

The Sr. Philathea Class observed "Philathea Day," and had charge of the Sunday school exercises. Special music and a short talk by Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., of the Christian Church, constituted the program.

The morning church service was very interesting and delightful. It was threefold in its purpose—communion service, reception of new members and installation of officers. In the communion service the pastor spoke briefly on "Receiving and Believing Christ." An unusually large number of people participated in the Lord's Supper. Six new members were received into the church—Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Allbright, by letter from Graham M. P. Church, and three children. Lois, Lester, and George, on profession. Bro. Herbert Kidd, by letter from M. E. Church at High Point. We are very glad to receive Bro. Allbright and his good family and Bro. Kidd as members of our church. With the reception of these, there have 51 new members received during the present Conference year, and 139 during the present pastorate.

There were the usual C. E. meetings at 4 and 6: 30 P. M. with the usual interest and attendance.

The evening church service was notable for its special music and splendid sermon on "Meditation," the text being Ps. 1: 2.

The canvass for our church papers was made last week by Bro. Pritchard, assisted by the writer. Practically every home connected with our church was visited and the result of the campaign is as follows: 61 subscriptions for the Methodist Protestant Herald and 10 subscriptions to The Methodist Protestant. We now have 90 subscribers to the Herald, a net gain of 59 this year.

Our fourth quarterly conference is to be held on Tuesday night of this week.

In last week's report we promised to give a list of our new church officials in this week's report. We have reconsidered the matter, and because the list is considerably large, it is omitted. Twenty-three of the forty-three officers were present and installed last Sunday morning.

Two more Sundays till the Annual Conference meets. We can hardly realize that another conference year is closing. Our church is still hopeful of making a clean report to the Conference with all claims paid.

The regular services will be held in our church next Sunday. C. B. Way, Rep.

Yadkin College Circuit.—Our fourth quarterly conference was held on the 27th of Oct., as reported by Bro. Yokley, and all reports and work done by the conference indicated progress, and there was harmony and interest taken in all the subjects we brought before the conference, and especially the consideration of making an effort to purchase a lot in Lexington and building a church near the center of the town. The matter is ordered by the quarterly conference to be brought before the Annual Conference, and I am calling attention of the members of the Conference so they may have time to think the matter over before going to Conference.

In my judgment there is no place in the N. C. District we need an up-to-date church more than in Lexington, N. C. I am not saying this because I am pastor on Yadkin College Circuit, but because we remain mum and try to hold our people in the little church "west of Lexington." A few more years we will wake up to the fact we will have the little church house with no membership. Whereas if we will as a Conference and the membership of Yadkin College Ct. will come to the rescue of the Methodist Protestants in Lexington we can build a church and have a membership in a short while we all will be proud of and it means life and growth to the Yadkin College Circuit.

We ought to be able to organize with a church uptown with at least fifty good substantial members and some say seventy-five, and then we have good territory all around Lexington to draw from. So, brethren, think over the situation and be able at Conference to say what we are to do. It's move or die: which will we do?

We are having splendid congregations in closing up our year's work, and we are expecting the largest the third Sunday at Shiloh of any appointment on the circuit, as we expect to have two services with dinner on the grounds, and the membership from all the other churches is invited. We are hoping, praying and working to bring up every cent of all the assessments, and close up the biggest year in the history of the circuit. Some may think this boasting; but think as you like, when I can get my people to help me do a good year's work, I am going to tell of it, if the edtior will publish it.

Let the stewards see all delinquents and bring your reports to Shiloh the 3rd Sunday. Thanks to all on the circuit who have remembered us with good things for the table. My best wishes for every member on the circuit. The editor is invited to be at Shiloh. Truly,

C. A. Cecil.

Pastor's Quarterly Report.

(Sent for publication by A. H. Evans at the request of the fourth quarterly conference of Yadkin College Circuit.

Dear Brethren and Sisters of the Conference and Church: This is our fourth quarterly conference for 1917, and the other three conferences were pleasant, profitable, interesting and helpful, and I trust this one will be none the less so. This quarter has been a very busy one. All appointments have been filled, four special meetings have been held, with 66 conversions not counting those reclaimed, 55 accessions, and the ordinances have been administered. One hundred and ninety-three pastoral visits have been made, held five funerals, one marriage, have secured 10 subscribers to M. P. Herald and had several personal interviews with persons on the subject of religion, and have tried to interest all the membership on the circuit in the local as well as the general church, and our church attendance, S. S. work, prayer meetings and the financial interests all point in the direction of progress, and this has been accomplished only by the faithful co-operation of all the active membership with the pastor, and I thank all for their assistance during the past eleven months. there have been to date 103 conversions, 76 accessions, 493 visits and 36 subscribers to M. P. Herald.

Union Grove has paid all claims and $3.50 over. Shiloh has all claims in hand and the other churches are somewhat behind but laboring heroically to come up with every cent of all claims, and I think they will do so in the final windup. The every- member canvass is on, and we expect a good report from the chairmen of the committees from each church today. I am pleased with the work done in the churches where the committees made an effort to carry out the plans as outlined and ordered by the first quarterly conference, and all of the churches have made some progress by coming or being in contact with those churches that have met their obligations promptly each month, and today let every one present decide they will go back to their respective churches and put forth a strong effort to bring up all interests in full each month during the incoming year.

Now I will say in closing my meager report, I am profoundly grateful for the universal co-operation given by every member on the circuit, and I will say frankly no such success could have been possible but for the universal effort of all; but we could have done better. I confess to you, my fellow-laborers, I had fears and misgivings when I entered your field of labor as to whether I could fit in and carry forward the work as you would expect me to do; but I thank God He has given me access to your hearts and homes, and judgment, ability, and tact to reach the 4th quarterly conference without a riffle or any kind of trouble in so far as I know, and will say to this conference and to the membership of the circuit, if my work as a pastor, preacher and executive is not satisfactory, all that is necessary is for this quarterly conference to say so, and our present and very pleasant relations to me can be changed. The chairmen of all boards should be able to give a report of the work done by his board for the quarter. You are to fix pastor's salary for the ensuing year, and you will please take into consideration the high price of everything and make it what you can. It becomes your duty to instruct your delegate as to a choice of pastor for next year, and I will say to you it is not my custom to vacate the chair or leave the room when this is being done; instruct as your better judgment may suggest and it will be all right with me.

Some Suggestions.—1. That you hold business meetings in the week. We have too much business on Sunday. 2. Elect persons who will attend the quarterly conference. 3. Consideration of Lexington Church. My very kindest regards.

C. A. Cecil,, Pastor.

Matthew's Chapel, Greensville Circuit. —Matthews is still on the move; had S. S. and preaching yesterday as usual.

Bro. Morgan always comes with something good for us, so I need not tell you of his good sermon. The conference year is rapidly drawing to a close and Bro. Morgan will not be with us but one more Sunday, yet we hope Conference will see fit to send him back to us again, as he has done two years of faithful work here and we hope to have him many more. But if he is sent to another charge, our prayers and best wishes go with him.

Bro. N. G. Bethea was with us on Wednesday night, Oct. 31st; as we expected, his talk on Forward Movement was very interesting, and all present seemed to enjoy it.

Bro. Bethea was somewhat like Bro. McCulloch,—seemed surprised at my appearance; he said he expected to see an old maid with glasses on. Yet I appreciate the fact that I looked much younger than he expected. Come again, Bro. Bethea, we enjoyed having you with us.

Arthur Taylor, of Camp Lee, one of our S. S. boys, was present at S. S. 5th Sunday. We are glad to learn he does not forget his place in S. S. Will close as news forbids a long report.

Lottie Edwards, Rep.

Brunswick, Va., Nov. 5, 1917.

—Weak things united become strong.

New Hope, Vance Ct.—Our pastor, though suffering with a very lame foot, drove through the cold and filled his regular appointment here yesterday at eleven o'clock. He preached a splendid sermon from the text, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Wish that more of our people had been present.

Annual Conference is almost here, and we are hoping that we will get Bro. Hunter back for another year. He has done so much for the church, we feel that we cannot give him up.

Our church is a little back on finances yet, but before Conference we expect to have all claims paid up in full.

We are hoping to have our church painted some time in the near future, which is needed very much.

We were glad to have Miss Myrtis Paschall of Henderson worship with us Sunday. Much success to the Herald and its readers. Sincerely,

Clara B. Paschall, Rep.

—Thomasville.— On last Sunday we had two good services at morning and at night. At the morning service we appointed a nominating committee to nominate church officers for next year. This committee will make their report at the church business meeting Wednesday night.

Sunday afternoon we began our Every-Member Canvass.

All members of the Thomasville charge please take note that the fourth quarterly conference convenes at Thomasville Saturday before the third Sunday in this month at 2 P. M. All members of the conference are earnestly requested to be present.

Next Sunday Rev. Geo. L. Reynolds will preach at both services. He will hold communion service at the morning hour.

DIED.

Mrs. Annie Rich.

Mrs. Annie Rich, nee Crowson, was born Aug. 7, 1879, and departed this life Nov. 3, 1917.

In girlhood Sister Rich professed faith in Jesus and united with the Methodist Protestant Church at Charlotte church, Randolph County. In 1906 she moved her membership to the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church, of which she remained a faithful member.

On the third of September, 1902, she was united in marriage with O. W. Rich. To this union three children were born, two of whom preceded her to the better land.

Sister Rich was a devoted wife and mother, a zealous and faithful Christian, and a loyal church member. All her neighbors praise her.

One of her leading characteristics was self-forgetfulness, and thoughtfulness for others, and this she retained to the last.

For several months she suffered from tumor of the throat, this finally causing her death. Her sufferings at times were distressing. She would struggle for breath, while it seemed that every breath must be the last, but even then she forgot self and thought of others.

She was always cheerful and never suffered too much to receive her friends with a bright smile.

During her months of suffering her Christian fortitude was an inspiration. I never heard of a word of impatience.

She will be sorely missed and, outside the circle of her immediate family, by none more than by her pastor.

Her funeral was conducted in the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church by her pastor and she was laid to rest at Charlottte church to await the resurrection.

Just before she went she said that she was so tired.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord;
Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest."

BURLINGTON TO THE FRONT.

The advance movement reported from Burlington puts that church in the front rank as patrons of our church papers. Never before have we received in one week so many new subscriptions from one church.

How did it happen? do you ask? Well, there is no secret about it. Bro. Pritchard had a conviction that his people ought to read the church papers, and he went about the matter of inducing them to become subscribers in an earnest, deliberate way. He asked Rev. T. M. Johnson to come and deliver his splendid address on church literature. Then he announced from the pulpit that the following week a canvass would be made for subscriptions. He called the reporter to his assistance, and the two made a thorough and systematic canvass in the homes. His people were kindly responsive and the results were as stated by the Burlington reporter.

We thank most heartily Bro. Pritchard, Bro. Way, and every one who has through their solicitation entered our circle of readers. We hope to have a good year together.

NEITHER DEAD OR NIBBLING.

Bro. Layman, I am happy to inform you that you will have to guess again as to who the writer is. I am not the fellow who sat on your porch and "butted all our good preachers" and then went to the church and preached a fine sermon on brotherly love. I have ever preached on that subject. Perhaps I ought to have done so but never have. As to the "fine sermon" I am innocent on that point also. I have been called a plain preacher but never accused of preaching a fine sermon so far as I know. My silence perhaps led you to believe your guess was right but you were wide of the mark. Say, Bro., you criticized a number of us preachers for not obeying some of the laws of the Conference but just as soon as we endeavored to increase the superannuate fund, which is according to said law, you break out in a new place with a new song. I scarcely know where to find you. Yes, Bro., the circuit as a body, through their representatives, promise the pastor a certain amount and as a body are responsible for said amount. The honor roll means a dishonor roll until the pastor is paid. A second thought will convince any one that it is a mistake. He was on the job all the while, besides it was means of support.

Your friend and well wisher,

Jacob Grasshopper.

—There are now approximately 3,000 dogs in the various departments of the German army. They have been trained by the German Red Cross Dog Society. These war dogs have learned to obey commands given both by word of mouth and by pistol shots. They act as camp guards, trench sentries, scouts, and aids to Red Cross workers recovering the wounded on the battlefields. The stronger are used for hauling.

The French use many dogs for these same purposes. They also found the dogs of the greatest service for drawing sleighs carrying supplies through the mountain snows of the Vosges when there seemed no other method of transportation. After the snow melts the dogs draw heavy loads up the steep grades on a narrow gauge light railway.

Some of these war dogs have been so trained that in traversing a field after a battle they wholly ignore a dead soldier but bark loudly when they discover one wounded, returning to their kennels for assistance and leading the way back to the injured man. Surgeons and stretcher-bearers follow them back.

—A bill has been introduced in the U. S. Senate providing for the training of a thousand dogs for war service in France.

WHO IS SHE?

I know the dearest little girl,
About as big as you;
Her eyes are black or brown or gray,
Or maybe they are blue;
But, anyway, her hands are clean;
Her teeth are white as snow;
Her little dress is always neat;
This little girl—I love her well,
And see her often, too—
If I today her name should tell—
She—might—be—you.—Little Folks.

BOILS—WHAT CAUSES THEM AND WHAT TO DO FOR THEM.

Boils are due to bacteria on the skin. Under normal conditions the body does not suffer from these bacteria on the skin but when the vitality becomes lowered and the bacteria enter through scratches or other abrasions, they multiply, produce pus and cause inflammation, swelling and pain.

The best way to prevent boils is to clean the skin thoroughly and keep it clean. Persons with boils should take a bath in hot water and soap twice a day—morning and night. The skin should be scrubbed with a coarse wash-cloth, and even the scalp should come in for a good cleansing. After the bath, the patient should be dressed in clean clothing which should be changed daily, especially all that touches the skin. If there are boils on the neck, face and hands, that part of the bed linen touched by them should also be changed daily.

One who is subject to boils should build up his resistance by simple living—cold bathing, out-of-door life, day and night, the disuse of much meat and heavy food. The diet should consist chiefly of fruits and vegetables. The bowels should be made to move once or twice daily.

The best treatment for a boil that has become painful is the application of moist heat. This may be done through soft poulticing. The kind of poultice is immaterial as its only valuable properties are warmth and moisture.

WILLIAM'S WAY.

There was something mysterious about William Martin. In the Virginia college from which he was graduated several years ago his popularity puzzled everybody.

Some college boys are so handsome and so graceful as to be able to make friends without effort. Homely, awkward William Martin was universally admired.

Some boys are popular because they dress elegantly and spend their money freely. William Martin dressed neatly but inexpensively and had no money except for necessities, but William Martin was highly esteemed by everybody.

Some boys have numerous friends because of the wealth and social standing of parents. The Martins lived on a poor little farm so far back in the country that they were practically unknown, but everybody liked "Billy."

Some boys stand high with their fellow students because of splendid athletic records or because they can sing. William Martin had a deformed ankle, and he couldn't sing a note; but all the boys loved him.

Some college boys are popular with their teachers because they make high grades in their studies. William Martin never recited brilliantly, no matter how hard he studied; but all his teachers spoke well of him.

Numbers of times young Martin's friends almost embarrassed him by inquiring how he made himself so popular. He would always dismiss the matter playfully: "O, it's just a little secret."

The universal popularity of homely, awkward, poor, lame, unmusical, plodding William Martin was the subject of many discussions among his college mates when he was not present. Finally they began to watch him closely in a vain effort to discover his valuable secret.

On commencement day, after the diplomas had been delivered and when William and his roommate were strapping their trunks preparatory to leaving for their respective homes, the roommate inquired:—"Billy, I must know your secret. Out with it."

"Why," he replied in a matter-of-fact way, "I just speak to everybody as if they were in trouble.—Wightman F. Melton.

TO MAKE A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

No $2.00 that you can spend in Christmas-present giving will go further than a subscription for The Youth's Companion. Look over your long list and see how few things on it are certain to be as eagerly treasured during every one of the fifty-two weeks of 1918. Acquaintance with it soon ripens into lasting friendship, for it has that rare and priceless quality among periodicals,—character,—and the character of The Youth's Companion has made fast friends for it all round the world.

The Companion alone is $2.00, but the publishers make an Extraordinary Double Offer—The Youth's Companion and McCall's Magazine together for $2.25.

Our two-at-one-price offer includes:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues of 1918.
2. All the remaining issues of 1917.
3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1918.

Southern Railway System

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

An Ambition and a Record

THE needs of the South are identical with the needs of the Southern Railway: the growth and success of one means the upbuilding of the other.

The Southern Railway asks no favors—no special privilege not accorded to others.

The ambition of the Southern Railway Company is to see that unity of interest that is born of co-operation between the public and the railroads; to see perfected that fair and frank policy in the management of railroads which invites the confidence of governmental agencies; to realize that liberality of treatment which will enable it to obtain the additional capital needed for the acquisition of better and enlarged facilities incident to the demand for increased and better service; and, finally—

To take its niche in the body politic of the South alongside of other great industries, with no more, but with equal liberties, equal rights and equal opportunities.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Energy, life, movement are expressed in it. You feel that the day's work in that house swings along merrily. You feel that it is done thoroughly, done systematically, done happily.

And all this is no mere fancy. The voice is expressive of the mental state; and the mental state of the dominant member of the family does affect the home atmosphere. A woman may wonder why her home does not seem bright and happy. She may be conscientiously trying to manage it right, and yet all the time she may be affecting it by this voice of her inner self.

Listen, some time, to your voice as if it were the voice of a stranger, and criticise it just as impartially. You may be surprised at what it tells you. And if you discover that it is not all it might be, try the effect of making it cheery, hearty, alert. The family will come up under it like wilted flowers in summer months.—The Pacific.

NEW MULTIPLICATION RULE.

I wonder if it is in your arithmetic? It is one of the best rules in the world, but it is not in all the books. You know the old rule, of course, but this is a great deal more fun. To think of fun in arithmetic! It is a multiplication by division. Does that puzzle you? Perhaps you are saying: "When you multiply, you get more; but when you divide, you get less. How, then, can you get more by making less?"

I will tell you the rule if you will promise two things: To try it and then to explain it to somebody. Of course you will try it. For of what use is a good rule if you don't use it? And when you have seen it work, I know you will want to share it. Let me explain the rule by an example, as the books do.

Suppose you have something that is very nice—O, so nice! To multiply by this rule just divide it. Give some of it to somebody. Then you will certainly have more than you had before—not more of the thing you divide, but more of something which is far better. For it is a peculiar thing about this rule that it not only multiplies, but it changes the kind. Under the old rule, if you multiply two oranges by two, you have four; but they are only oranges. When you multiply by dividing, you have an orange and the pleasure of sharing which is certainly much more than just oranges. You get not more orange, but more pleasure. And, after all, it is not things that make us happy. Is it not a good bargain to exchange things, just things, for real pleasure? Who would not be glad to have less orange and more fun?—Christian Guardian.

SHE DIDN'T PLAY BRIDGE.

She was a bright, graceful, fashionably gowned city woman, and the friend at whose town home she was visiting had given a little "thimble party" in her honor; all who received invitations were delighted to come.

The afternoon was perfect, the easy chairs grouped under the wide spreading trees on the lawn looked very inviting, and soon every one was chatting gaily, while fingers busied themselves with dainty bits of nedlework.

The city woman was so charming and had so many interesting subjects to talk about that she was the center of the group.

"Read them your questions," the hostess said, when there was a little lull in the conversation, and the city woman smiled and drew a paper from her workbag.

"Certainly," she said, "if you care to hear them. You see, ladies, I don't play bridge; there are a dozen or more of us at home who don't care for it, either, and we have formed ourselves into a little interrogation club. We spend an afternoon together once a fortnight, taking turns in entertaining and in preparing a list of questions on all kinds of topics. We write our answers, a simple prize being given the one who gives the greatest number of correct answers. Simple refreshments are served, and a half hour is spent in discussing topics in an informal way. We have good times, and always go home wiser than when we came. It is my turn to prepare the questions; here they are: tell me what you think of them. I shall be glad to have suggestions. "What is ambergris?"

The questioner paused and glanced at the earnest, puzzled faces. No one knew exactly, so she told them that it is a hard, white substance procured from the whale, and used in making perfumes. As only one whale in a thousand contains any ambergris, it is a scarce article and very expensive. A fortunate fisherman recently captured a whale containing a lump or ambergris weighing thirty pounds which sold for $150,000. "For what are the following cities noted: Dresden, Ottawa, Pittsburgh, Rome, Venice?"

And so the questions went on, twenty-five in all. Some were readily answered, others provoked animated discussion, and so interesting did they prove that everyone was amazed when the town clock proclaimed the hour of six.—Baptist Courier.

THE FARMER WHO FOUND.

A farmer lost a five-pound note in the barn. He was not a wealthy man, and the loss of this note was a serious matter to him. He resolved to turn over every straw until he found it. After some days' search he discovered the precious bank note, and went home greatly rejoicing. A little later he was brought under deep conviction of sin, and said to his wife, "I wish I could believe in the Saviour, but, alas! I cannot find him." She replied, "If you look for him as you looked for that note in the barn, you will find him." Acting upon that advice, he was soon rejoicing in the possession of Christ. We must strive to enter in by the narrow door.—Selected.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

The nature of God: "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." 1 John 4:16.

A great love: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

A wonderful love: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." 1 John 3:1.

The love of Christ: "And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us." Eph. 5:2.

A personal love: "Then Jesus beholding him loved him." Mark 10:21. "Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus." John 11:5. "Who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2:20.

An unceasing love: "Jesus . . . having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." John 13:1.

The measure of love: "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love." John 15:9

A purifying love: "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood." Rev. 1:5.

A conquering love: "In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Rom. 8:37.

A constraining love: "For the love of Christ constraineth us." 2 Cor. 5:14.

An abiding love: "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. 8:38, 39.

An everlasting love: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." Jer. 31:3.

A proof of love: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." 1 John 5:3.

The gifts of love: "He doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment." Deut. 10:18.

Love of righteousness: "For the righteous Lord loveth righteousness." Ps. 11: 7.

Loves the cheerful giver: "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9: 7.

Love of correction: "For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth." Prov. 3:12.

Love of the church: "The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob." Ps. 87: 2. "Even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." Eph. 5:25.—Word of Life.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

THE NEW FARM.

My heart has been made glad by the action of the Trustees of the Children's Home. It was a wise move to buy that farm back of the Home; it was necessary, and it will prove to be one of the most economical transactions the trustees have made. Those of our people who follow the progress made by Supt. Garrett have been aware of the need of this farm for some time. It is needed to help supply the Home with the products of such a farm; it is needed to give our boys in the Home a place to labor and learn how to earn their daily bread when they leave the Home.

But this land is not paid for. Chairman Millikan gave us a financial statement in a previous issue of the Herald, and we can by that see just what is needed. We need a bunch of men and women who will give from $250 down to a dime to take part in this transaction, thus showing their approval of the action of the trustees. Fifty people giving one hundred dollars each, or one hundred giving fifty dollars each, with a few quarters, dimes and nickels here and there would bring us out, but more of our people ought to contribute than one or two hundred. At least one thousand of our members in N. C. ought to contribute to this debt.

I hope that there will appear in the Herald from week to week a list of the contributors. But it ought not to be necessary for any one to have to solicit your pledge. Let's try a freewill contribution—every man, woman and child who is proud of the splendid record made by the Home should seek to be the first to contribute, then let those who are not so fortunate as to know of the work done come in later. But we ALL should have a part in paying for this farm. I have been over the farm, have seen the buildings, and am delighted with what has been done.

A RECORD TO BE PROUD OF.

During the past twenty years we have built two parsonages for every one we had in 1897; we have increased the value of our church property one hundred per cent. and last year we contributed $98,000 more for all causes than we did in 1897 and the grand total paid to our pastors was more than we promised them. That is a fine record, good as the best. And we cannot afford to do less this year.

I feel encouraged to expect at least 90 percent. of all our charges to pay every cent of every assessment this year, and believe that every charge will pay its pastor in full unless some unforeseen hindrances get in the way. Many of the churches are yet making an effort to get on the honor roll of churches which paid fifty cents per member on the Children's Home debt. Come along, beloved; the water is fine, going is good out where those who have paid this amount stay. We all will welcome you.

Siler City Charge, Rev. Paul S. Kennett, Pastor.

I held the second quarterly conference of this charge at Hope Church, the Bonlee church. It was not a largely attended conference, but the fact that it was at one end of the charge, and the roads were bad, and the trains did not run right for such a meeting, had much to do with the smallness of the attendance, no doubt. The reports indicated an interest in the work; the financial showing was not bad for that charge. One church on the charge, Liberty, had paid up all claims to that date. A good example which should have more followers.

Bonlee Church is an old building made over, but not yet completed. When completed it will make quite an attractive appearance and will be a credit to our people there. But much remains to be done to complete this. The membership is not so weak as their works would seem to imply. The quarterly conference showed a willing mind to help them, and Bro. Tally has had a willing mind for quite a while, and we believe that this year will see this church take on new life, as well as the church building receive a coat of paint on the outside and a nice job from the paper hanger on the inside.

I spoke at Hickory Grove and Liberty churches on Sunday. Liberty is in need of a new church. The folks there know this and have talked it among themselves some, I was told. The Sunday school has outgrown its quarters and will find it difficult to grow much more without additional class rooms. We are hoping to hear that the people there have fallen upon a plan which appeals to all the people and that by the close of the year there will be essentially a new building on the grounds.

I saw an unusual sight in the Sunday school: Bro. R. A. Patterson, superintendent; Rev. W. C. Kennett teaching a class; Brothers Hardin and Causey looking after the class records; Rev. D. A. Highfill acting as janitor. It was a great pleasure for me to sit in the class of Brother Kennett and hear him teach the lesson. One so ripe in experience and well preserved in body and mind makes a most capable teacher for those who, like myself, have many of the lessons of life yet to fully comprehend.

Dr. Osler and Andrew Carnegie might have preferred younger men to man a S. S., but to my mind Supt. Patterson with his corps of matured officers run a school just as well as many another school I have seen officered by younger men.

The churches which constitute Siler City charge present a problem to the boundary committee of our Conference unless the present arrangement shall prove to be or continue to be satisfactory. So far as I heard there was a feeling that the present arrangement or grouping of churches was as good or better than any grouping tried out in quite awhile. There was a spirit of hopefulness in all I talked with.

Brother Kennett is a young man in the ministry; he was ordained last year: but he is well equipped, aggressive, deeply interested in the cause and is getting on nicely with the work. The churches ought to prosper under his leadership and we believe with a hearty co-operation on the part of the membership they will greatly prosper this year. R. M. Andrews.

MINISTERS INVITED TO ATTEND.

The N. C. Branch Woman's Home Missions will meet in Burlington April 24-25. It is earnestly hoped that all societies will be represented and that each church will send a delegate. Ministers are also invited to attend the meeting and co-operate with us in making plans for future work. Mrs. Eva C. Robinson, Field Secretary for the Woman's Board of Home Missions, was in the state last fall and organized twenty-four new societies. It is earnestly hoped that a representative from each will be present to answer to the roll call and Mrs. J. M. Millikan will extend words of welcome to them. The meeting promises to be the best in our ten years' existence. Let every Methodist Protestant woman use her influence to have a large attendance. The Burlington Church extends a cordial welcome to all who will attend and will furnish entertainment. Names of delegates should be sent to Miss Swanna Patterson, Burlington, N. C. Pray and work for a successful meeting.

Almost half of our children are kept from attending Sunday school on account of whooping cough.

LeRoy Sykes, our second boy to leave the Home, who has been a student at Elon College, has answered the call to the colors and is now a member of Hospital Unit 65 Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga.

We all rejoice when our children go out and write back telling of their appreciation of what the Home has meant to them.

H. A. Garrett.

Hobbs Chapel, Greensville Ct—It was our delight to have our president, Brother Andrews, with us Easter Sunday P. M. We enjoyed his discourse very much. Our impression is, he is the right man in the right place. We appreciate the information he gave us concerning what we are doing as the M. P. denomination. Said we were small in size compared with some other denominations but we were going forward in many ways. Also that he thought it better to remain M. P.'s than to unite with other Methodists and abide by their laws. (I beg Bro. Andrews' pardon if I misunderstood here, as this is the way I feel about it.) He said also that there was as much room for the little man as for the big one; meaning, of course, that it is possible for us to accomplish good as others. This is true in the church also; sometimes if the membership is small you find greater workers: they feel the responsibility more, it seems.

Our Sabbath school closed during the winter months as the weather was extremely bad; then, too, Hobbs is unfortunately situated on rough roads. Trust we have not been idle all the while. "Quiet hours are excellent for plans and prayers."

We reorganized last Sunday; we pray for more workers especially among the older people. Surely they can't realize how their presence and help would encourage us younger folks. Our attendance is regular but not as large as we wish. We have some workers, though. If some of you readers could hear us sing our S. S. hymn, "We'll never say Fail," you'd think we meant business.

From now on we will have all day preaching on the fourth Sunday in each month instead of two half-day services. Come, bring your lunch, and worship with us. Bro. Morgan is a good speaker; he just spreads himself when he has a large audience to listen. I'm sure you'll not be disappointed. Yours in the Master's service.

LIVING LINK SERMONS.

In preparing his people to enroll in the Forward Movement, Rev. W. L. Morton, Pleasantville, New Jersey, preached a series of sermons under the following outline:

1. Our Church a Living Link. 2. Our Objective. 3. Our Program of Action. 4. How to Reach Definite Goals. 5. The Methodist Protestant Church in Christian Democracy. 6. The M. P. Church in Education. 7. The M. P. Church in Evangelism.

At the close of the last service the congregation endorsed the Forward Movement and authorized the Forward Committee. Fifteen copies of the Year Book were distributed. The committee is enthusiastic and will put the church to the front.

May 5, the annual Founder's Day, is an opportunity that should not be lost in enrolling many Living Link Churches.

—We should bear in mind what is going on in Europe. The most gigantic battle of history and perhaps the most momentous is being fought. The Germans by power of superior numbers have regained much of the territory from which they were driven months ago. The English and French are making a stout resistance and seem hopeful of keeping their lines unbroken. But what a dreadful scene it is! God grant that it may soon pass away never more to be reenacted!

CHILDREN'S HOME.

Report of Financial Secretary.

Mr H. Gibbs and Wife, Ivy Ct. ..	$ 2.00
T. T. Hicks' S. S. Class, Henderson	145.83
	$147.83

I want to congratulate Bro. Hicks and his splendid S. S. class for being the first S. S. class to pay for an acre of the splendid 60 acre farm adjoining the Home. Who will be the next to pay for an acre or who will join the Randolph friend's club just started? I know of a good friend who has a family who will join soon. Now is the time. Interest will have to be paid until the debt is liquidated. I want you to read Bro. Hicks' letter and be governed accordingly. Very truly yours, A. M. Rankin, Treas.

Dear Bro. Rankin: The Sunday class of which I am a member decided today to pay for one acre of the sixty recently purchased for the Orphanage. We took up the collection thinking perhaps you might get each of sixty churches to pay for one acre $145.85 per acre. Contributors of class: J. H. Cawthorn, H. O. Faulkner, J. W. Gibson, T. J. Garrett, L. R. Gooch, T. H. Hight, W. C. Hight, J. E. Hight, J. W. Hayes, G. B. Harris, A. J. Harris, T. T. Hicks, W. H. Roberson, Walter Roberson and R. R. Satterwhite. Yours truly, T. T. Hicks.

FOR CHILDREN'S HOME DEBT.

Spontaneous Pledges.

1. Trustees of Home	$1600.00
2. Randolph Friend	50.00
3. J. F. McCulloch	50.00

Herald: I was delighted to see the start made by a Randolph citizen to raise the money to pay for the land recently bought for our Children's Home, and I am glad to report the following pledges made without solicitation:

3. T. A. Hunter, Greensboro ..	$250.00
4. J. C. Penny, Greensboro	2.50.00
5. Rev. C. W. Bates, Greensboro	50.00
6. Home Miss. Soc., Greensboro	150.00

I am proud of this report. I want to call special attention to the last named pledge.

It's grand of these good women, but it is no surprise when we remember it was the women that conceived the idea of having a home for our fatherless and motherless children.

Greensboro will be heard from again on the subject. Now, won't it be grand if the entire amount is pledged without soliciting any one?

I suggest that the pledges be made payable on or before Thanksgiving.

Respectfully, J. M. Millikan,
Chmn. Board of Trustees.

Bro. S. R. Harris Visits Halifax.

Mr. Editor: I am just back from a very enjoyable trip to Brinkleyville and Hollister. I can assure you that Bro. Bethea's account of the pounding was no exaggeration. I really think he ought to have said more if his words were to equal their deeds. They all think he is a great preacher, too. I wonder how he fooled them, for they certainly are a very intelligent people. One thing struck me very forcibly at both places—they are a reverent people and very worshipful and they love the church and the Sabbath and they seem to hold very sweet communion in all their worship. After the strife and turmoil of a whole week it is good to get into such an atmosphere where love and friendship reign and all seemed to be full of holy aspirations. After I had spoken to them they seemed so full of appreciation that I was not surprised to hear of Bro. Bethea's greatness. I noticed that the cemetery is growing, too. There was a new-made grave and beautiful flowers completely covering it, showing loving hands and tender ministrations. The remains of Mrs. Norman await there the call of the resurrection and her spirit freed from the limitations of her clay has entered into the joys of the Lord.

After a sumptuous dinner with Brother Harrison and a very happy afternoon spent with his family the honk of a horn summoned us and Sam Bethea was sitting under the wheel and Mrs. Bethea and little Louis beside him with Miss Mary Wills to be my companion on the back seat. That Ford was panting to go, that Ford with a Packard equipment that "touch the button and the machine will do the rest" kind. After quick goodbyes and warm words of appreciation were said we were off over the hills and around the curves, flashing by a beautiful country home here and there and then through the woods with thousands of dogwood blossoms and over a steel bridge with a lazy stream flowing below, and I found that Henderson's five-inch snow had only painted their housetops and decorated their wood piles. We hustled by four houses and churches and in about the time it takes to write it we were in Hollister, beautiful Hollister, a little city dropped down there in the country. The first thing we heard when arrived was that Mrs. Wagner's father had been very, very close to Heaven's gate, they thought the gates had opened, in fact, and that he of indomitable energy and will had gone in; but he got only a vision this time; and the doctor and the friends say next time he will go in. He is also Mrs. Schlichter's father. She by the way was in a hospital in Norfolk for treatment. Earnest prayers ascended for her. She is a great lover of nature and her flowers and birds with their houses about her home attest it.

Monday morning I was awakened by the chirp of the sparrows, the twittering of martins, the scolding of jays, the joyous matins of the robin and the triumphant song of the lark with blue birds and green canaries filling in the chorus. I want to go there and live and stay and stay and live. I'm sure God made that community and I'm also sure He had the very efficient help of Bro. A. B. Schlichter. A city without a loafer—a city in which a man has got to be a man—no hard labor but on the job, on the job. They handle God's law to do their work and as nature does not stop, neither do they. A man presses a lever and the machine takes up a log, tosses it on the carriage, the clamp strikes and the saw strikes it about the same time and about as quick as an ordinary wood saw would saw up a stick of wood the log is in planks and you can hardly tell the difference in the time of another log taking its place and going through its process. The machinery automatically assorts the lumber and picks out a plank here and there and starts it off in another direction until it makes 14 grades of size and quality. One looks at it all until he feels like the whole mammoth establishment is alive and pulsing with mind and discrimination. The saw dust and slabs are automatically mixed and cut together and automatically fed into the furnaces in the right proportion and in the right quantity so there is no waste of men or material. I never saw a place that seemed more fit for a man. The community spirit was really inspiring. It was in fact a community and not just a neighborhood. The corporation with a soul in it furnished electricity, ten 25-Watt lamps and without limitation for $1.00 per month—more lights of course were cheaper. One couldn't tell whether the folks belonged to the church or the church belonged to the people. They were all so kind and so considerate that they seemed to enjoy my speech and I really felt glad I was living. I wish I were a preacher and had that for my pastorate. I would tell you about a collection; but let Bro. Bethea tell that. It would be better even than a pounding.

With apologies for so long a letter except that I couldn't write less, I am Very sincerely, S. R. Harris.

—A madman is not cured by another running mad also.—Antisthines.

ched to a fairly large congregation that seemed to be hungry for His word and it seemed that God came in His power and touched every heart, both saint and sinner, and it was a good service because of His presence. Then after a good dinner with Bro. and Sister J. B. Henley, Brother Henley and Bros. J. M. Trogdon, G. B. Ferree and myself started for Charlotte Church: we made our way through the pleasure-seekers and soon found ourselves at the church where we had appointed an old-time class meeting. Finding a fairly good congregation we soon entered into the service with Sisters J. H. Redding and Sam. Henley as class leaders, and we soon found that God was there to bless those that were there and we had a good service because of His presence. How can people spend the Sabbath in pleasure-seeking and revelry and church members at that and such a cloud of gloom hanging over us? May God awake the church and He will, but He only knows what it will cost, but I fear it will cost many of the lives of our noble young men; but if they must fall to save Israel, may the mighty arm of King Immanuel be beneath them and may they be shrouded with his blood-stained garment, and though they fall in France, O God, may they somehow be raised in Heaven, and may the fathers and mothers left behind meet them there.

Yours for victory. Joel B. Trogdon.

Concord Church.—Our S. S. attendance last Sunday was 187. Our special meeting began Sunday morning. Our pastor is doing the preaching, and he is preaching with great earnestness and we feel sure that if we will only do our part, we will have a great meeting. We had large congregations at both services, and much interest is being manifested so far. Christian people, pray for us, that God will give us a glorious meeting.

Miss Edith Earnhardt is still confined to her bed; we had hoped she would be able to be with us at church by this time, but she took worse again.

Mr. L. H. Sides of our church and Mr. J. W. Kiser of Fairview are the nominess for delegate to Annual Conference. Rep.

Cid Church, Uwharrie Ct.—As there has not been any report from this place for some time I will say that there are some that are not spiritually dead yet, as we all have been enjoying some unusually good sermons from our pastor, D. M. Loy, and on yesterday he preached a most forcible sermon on the immortality of the Soul. I truly hope it will be as seed sown on good ground and may it bring forth fruit meet for repentance to some lukewarm church members. There was a right good congregation out. But as there was some sickness in the neighborhood, that hindered several.

Little Miss Ola Wright is right sick from having a tooth extracted. I hope she will soon be well.

We were so glad to have some of the Piny Grove people worship with us Sunday. Come again.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Harris of Denton spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Lanier.

The second quarterly meeting will convene at Mt. Zion Church on Saturday before the 4th Sunday inst. Hope for a good attendance of the official members.

Mrs. A. B. Gillington is teaching a singing school at Cid which is adding a lot of improvement to the choir. She is to be congratulated on her devoted efforts, and may they be crowned with success to the glory of God.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hedrick, a newly married couple, have moved to the C. A. McGehee place now owned by A. J. Beck. We welcome these young people as they are church-going people.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers, as ever a worker for the Lord. Mrs. N. W. Lanier.

P. S.—Say! Mrs. J. B. Trogdon, what has become of you? I never see any of your writing in the good old Herald that brings us so much glad news from other churches. There is a fond remembrance within me that we have spent many happy hours togther. I hope sometime to meet again on earth; if not, in Heaven.

Quarterly Conference.

The official members and any others who may be interested, of Halifax Circuit, will not forget the second quarterly conference at Ringwood, Friday, April 26th, 2 P. M. Important meeting. Come!

N. G. Bethea.

Stony Knoll, West Forsyth Ct.—Our Sunday school met and organized April 7, 1918, with a good attendance.

Our aim is to have a better Sunday-school in the year 1918 than ever before.

Rev. Mr. Ridenhour filled his regular appointment in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. An interesting sermon was preached and was listened to by a very large congregation.

Our quarterly conference will be held at Tabernacle on Saturday before the third Sunday in this month. Asking the prayers of the people for our Sunday school, I will close. Blanche Henning, Rep.

Union Hill, West Forsyth Ct.—We organized S. S. April 6th with a large attendance; enrolled about 65 and hope we will be successful enough to have a greater attendance. I think more of the older people should come and take interest in the Sunday school work, as it is one of the greatest things they could engage in.

Mr. Ridenhour (our pastor) delivered an excellent sermon Sunday to a large audience.

Mrs. N. L. Fulk is spending the week-end with her son at Friendship.

Mrs. N. A. Poindexter has been ill for several days, but is much improved at present, we are glad to note.

We are having real spring weather now.

Several of the Baltimore people attended church here Sunday.

Best wishes to all readers.

Ozelle Poindexter, Reporter.

Charlotte Church.—We are not asleep over here, it's just the new reporter that's getting broke in. Glad to say we are still awake and growing.

Miss Annie L. Forrest's lecture some weeks ago put lots of inspiration in the ladies of our church toward organizing a foreign missionary society. We have about twelve members on roll. Hope I'll be able to give full details of our society in my next write-up.

Our Easter morning service was just fine. The whole program was carried out by the children of our Sunday school.

Their speeches and singing showed that they had been trained. We also han an extra large congregation out to enjoy the program. We have to give our beloved pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Stubbins, all the credit for getting up the program.

Our congregations as well as the membership roll are still growing. That's one of the things our good pastor is doing for his church, his people and his community.

We had Miss Neva Hunter of the M. P. Church of Greensboro to join with us Sunday. We are real proud of her and we feel that she will make us a useful member. We had a large congregation out Sunday night to hear Captain Banterse who has charge of the Salvation Army work in Winston-Salem. Sister Banterse sang us two beautiful solos which were greatly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. F. C. Richardson, Rep.

Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant Ct.—Our second quarterly conference was held at Pleasant Union Saturday before the second Sunday. It was well attended.

Bro. Shelton filled his regular appointment Sunday, preaching to a large and attentive congregation. His sermon was soul-stirring and helpful. May his words be as good seed sown on good ground.

Our Sunday school is improving altho' the epidemic of mumps is still with us and is some hindrance. [illegible] would not forget our faithful superintendent, Bro. M. [illegible] Sometimes we wish that he could know what a blessing he is, and has been these many years to our Sunday school. How prone we are to leave unsaid the good things, the appreciation we feel, until our friends are gone from us. How much better it would be to say them now, and help each other along the toilsome journey of life, when we are ofttimes weary and fainthearted.

Let's not forget to pray for our soldiers in the trenches that they may trust implicitly in Him who notes the sparrow's fall and may they remember they are of more value than many sparrows. How grieved our Heavenly Father must be over this great world conflict?

Bertine Shepard, Reporter.

Bethesda,. Yadkin College Ct.—Health of this community is good. Our S. S. is getting on all right. Attendance last Sunday was 108. A collection was taken for Children's Home, $2.95. Rev. C. A. Cecil was there on time for school, fast time. Our church moved up to the new time. Sunday school at ten and preaching at 11 by fast time, or Sunday school at 9 and preaching at 10 o'clock by old time. Our preacher, Bro. Cecil, filled his appointment at eleven o'clock with a good sermon. After preaching Rev. and Mrs. Cecil and the larger part of the congregation went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Wagner to surprise him with a birthday dinner. Mr. Wagner knew his children were coming, but did not know so many were to be there. The crowd numbered 150. They fixed up a table about 50 feet long and it was quickly filled with good things to eat, and after prayer services conducted by Pastor all partook freely. Mr. Wagner is 71 years old and seems to be in good health. He received several gifts; the one he seemed to appreciate most was a nice umbrella given by Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, of High Point. Mr. Wagner has been blessed with a large family; 12 children living, 16 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. His children are J. B. Wagner, who lives near, Sam[illegible]. Misses Bessie, Minnie; Jesse, Roy, and Rennie living at the old home; Ellis and Thomas in High Point; Roby in Winston-Salem, and Everett in Chester, S. C.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wagner, Mr. Roby Zimmerman, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Miller and family, Mr. James Miller and Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Adams and children, of Winston-Salem; Mrs. Clarence Wood, of Roanoke, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hayworth and Miss Ermer Rothrack, of Lexington; Mr. and Mrs. Horney, Misses Mary Gordy, Mittie Moton and Montrose Malard, of High Point.

C. M. Yokley, Reporter.

Thomasville.—Our rally day 5th Sunday in March was a great success. In addition to the splendid program rendered by the children, made possible by the untiring efforts of Mrs. C. F. Finch, we had 8 splendid additions to our church. These are already making themselves felt among us. The prospect is good for other additions soon.

Our Sunday school is beginning to grow. This is due largely to the untiring energy and enthusiasm of Bro. D. R. Connell, Supt. I doubt if the N. C. Conference has a more consecrated superintendent. Too, we have a body of loyal teachers that are putting effort into their work; that is telling in its effect. With these evidences of progress we take courage and feel hopeful for the future.

The church here has installed free telephone service for us for which we are grateful. Our table is made richer by frequent visits of the fruits of Mrs. Dickens' splendid garden. It's a prize winner in the town.

Pastor.

Haw River Circuit.—The 2nd quarterly conference will meet at Midway Church Saturday before the 4th Sunday in April. Preaching at 11 o'clock. Quarterly conference after dinner. A full attendance is desired. Come, officials, and let's transact the Lord's business. Be thinking about candidates to represent this work in the next Annual Conference.

Yesterday was another beautiful day. Good congregations at Fair Grove, Midway and Brown Summit. We were glad to have Rev. L. W. Gerringer preach for us yesterday at Midway. He gave us a good Forward Movement sermon.

B. M. Williams.

April 15, 1918.

Roseneath, Roanoke Ct.—Bro. Edwards filled his regular appointment the second Sunday. He preached a most interesting and inspiring sermon to a small but attentive congregation. We are always glad when the second Sunday comes. We enjoy Bro. Edwards' sermons so much. We are glad to report that Bro. Kefrs Strickland has returned from Baltimore where he underwent two operations and is getting along nicely. Hope he will soon be out with us again.

Let us always remember our soldier boys in our prayers. Sincerely.

H. C. Neal.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.— We were pleased to have Rev. R. M. Andrews, our president, with us Sunday afternoon. He preached an interesting and helpful sermon. Wish that more of our people had been present. The remainder of the evening was spent practising singing.

We had the pleasure of having our pastor in our home last month.

Hope our Sunday school will increase in attendance and interest as spring is approaching.

There has been some sickness in this community, but everybody is improving, we are glad to say.

Reporter.

Oak Ridge Circuit—The pastor has found a good people to serve. Since the rough weather of the winter has gone the congregations have been larger.

Pine Grove and Ai churches held Easter exercises which were enjoyed by good congregations.

Our second quarterly conference will be held on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in April, at Pine Grove Church. Our president, Bro. Andrews, will preach for us at 1 P. M. by the new time; and will hold the conference at 2 P. M. We hope for a good attendance.

Many kindnesses have been shown us, for which we are thankful.

The Ladies' Aid has taken the improvement of Parsonage in hand, and have done much to add to the appearance of it besides its renovation.

We are hoping and praying for a successful year's work. With this splendid people united in prayers and work, the church should go forward.

A. O. Lindley.

Forsyth Circuit.—Spring seems to be getting the upper hand, though winter turns loose reluctantly. The first Sunday unusually large congregations were present at both Maple Springs and Hickory Ridge.

Sunday schools at both are now moving on nicely. I believe the enrollment at Maple Springs is larger now than since I have been their pastor, and the attendance is very good.

At Mt. Carmel the average attendance through the unfavorable weather of the first quarter was only one-third of a pupil less than the first quarter of last year and the average offering about 30 per cent. greater.

This school also had a very successful Easter service, and Easter Monday Mrs. J. W. Brinkley's class enjoyed an egg hunt on the lawn at her home that afternoon.

Friends continue to remember us in a material way; potatoes, milk, kraut. If I had the ground to plant and time to cultivate all the seed corn, beans and squash etc. that they give me I could to a considerable extent solve the H. C. L. However, we have several little patches of various kinds of truck, some of which is already up and looking well.

I think some of our young people from Forsyth Circuit will be at the convention. C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Spring Church Circuit.—We have again been remembered by our friends. Mrs. Rosa Crew, Mrs. J. T Williams, Mrs. Norman Jordan, Mrs. Florence Morgan and Mrs. Nina Watkins have kept us in salad. Mrs. J. M. Dunham supplied our garden with early cabbage plants. Mrs. May Camp gave us butter. Some time ago we were visiting at Bro. W. W. Grant's. On our leaving Sister Grant asked us to go with her to the smokehouse and look at her meat. It was a nice lot of meat and we do like to look at good meat, but Sister Grant knew that looking would not supply our needs, so she reached up and took down a nice shoulder and gave it to us and said, "Sample this and see if it is good."

Monday, April 8, we met Bro. G. F. Jestes near Spring Church, who stopped us and said, "Will you take it now or shall I leave it at the parsonage?" It was a nice ham and we took it then and there.

We have been stopped on the public highway many times since we run a machine but never before were we waved down with a ham. This stunt works well, for a ham looks good and will surely make a man stop. Mr. Paul Stephenson is furnishing us a mule to do our plowing. May the good Lord richly bless these kind people and enable us to render helpful service. J. B. O'Briant.

Haw River Sunday School.—We have not increased in our attendance since our last report. Our attendance Sunday was 67. The interest is increasing and we feel sure the attendance will increase just as soon as some of our members recover from the grippe. I would like to see more of our fathers come. Some of them stay at home or stand around and talk while their children come.

We had our Easter service on fifth Sunday night. We had a nice program rendered by the children. The offering for home missions was about $6.00.

Our pastor preached us two wonderful sermons Sunday. They were full of the good things of Christ given unto us thru faith. His subject for the morning service wac God near us, or in other words, God all around us.

The two sermons preached here by our pastor yesterday to my mind were preached by Jesus Christ through our pastor. People, you who were not there certainly ought to have been and got these two messages. D. I. Garner.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Ct.—Since spring opened up the people have taken much interest in Sunday school here. Our school is gradually moving forward. The faithful workers are trying hard to make it good, better, best.

Last Sunday the weather was beautiful and we had an usual attendance at S. S. More were present after S. S. to hear the strong and helpful sermon delivered by our faithful pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan. In his message he urged us to prepare for the place prepared for all. I am sure we were all benefited by that splendid sermon.

It was a pleasure to have the pastor in the writer's home after services.

Success to the Herald and its readers.
M. M. Bowen.
Cholsonville, Va.

Al, Oak Ridge Ct.—Our Sunday school has been running all winter except 3 or 4 bad Sundays and our attendance was good considering the weather. We had a Xmas tree and entertainment.

We are all liking our new pastor, Mr. Lindley, fine. He failed to fill his last appointment on the fourth Sunday, but was with us Easter morning instead. We also had our Easter entertainment in the afternoon. Our exercise was fairly good, considering the time we had to practise.

Our collection was $2.10.

We are having prayer meeting once a week the year round and the young people are taking a great deal of interest in it.

There was a committee elected to appoint the ones to go to the Young People's Convention. I think it is very nice and helpful; hope every church will be represented. Wish them much success. Reporter.

Vance Circuit.—This people is loyal and patriotic. The pastor has not been taken by any mob violence but they have come single handed and in this quiet way have done much to lessen the burdens of their pastor and family. The people of Flat Rock and good neighbors are daily remembering us. New Hope came in last Sunday. I spent the night with Bro. R. D. Paschall and on starting away found a nice box of honey in my buggy to bring home. We took dinner with Bro. Hugh Paschall and when starting, this good man put into my buggy a bushel of nice sweet potato seed, the Nancy Hall variety. These are selling here at $3.50 per bushel; then brought out a ham weighing thirty and a quarter pounds. This brother has a noble son at Western Maryland College, studying for the ministry. Bro. Ed Paschall, five gallons of nice syrup We came on feeling good and thanking God for such people and kindness and saw Mrs. Ruth Fletcher standing by the roadside with canned goods. This was the second time for her. Many of you don't know her, but God knows her. The market value of the above articles here would be $21.50.

The pastor and his family feel profoundly grateful for such kindness and pray the blessings of God upon each of them, their families, and their church. May God make us a channel of blessings to them. H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Bethel Auxiliary, Alamance Ct.—Our annual thankoffering meeting was held at Bethel Church Sunday, April 7th. Miss [illegible]nie Forrest was with us and gave us a very interesting and instructive lecture which could not fail to touch the hearts of the people. We were glad to have her with us. She was an inspiration to our society. We feel encouraged and hope to press forward with renewed energy and zeal in our missionary work. May God help us. Our thankoffering was $26.60. Dues collected during the year, $48.53.

Total collection for the year, $75.13.

We are going to hold our monthly meetings at Bethel Church every 4th Sunday evening at 3 o'clock. We desire a full attendance of our members, and extend a cordial welcome to all others, especially the young people.

DECEASED.

Woodburn.—David Nelson Woodburn, having served his day and generation, entered into rest April 6, 1918; aged over 84 years, as he was born March 10, 1834. At the age of 15 he was converted and joined Alamance Presbyterian Church of which he remained a loyal member until death. Mr. Woodburn was a man of quiet demeanor, steady-going and industrious throughout his life. He was a farmer and followed the plough in the ploughing season almost to the end of his life.

He was married April 7, 1864, to Charlotte Fields. Nine children were born to them: five sons and four daughters; viz., John, Roddy, Roy, Eugene, Cleophas, Dora, Susan, Ida, and Daisy. Eugene died in young manhood about twenty years ago. Susan, who was the wife of Everett McCulloch, died in the summer of 1916. The others with the now aged wife and 20 grandchildren and one great-grandchild are left to mourn their loss. May they profit by the good influence of his life and so live as to meet him in the land of everlasting peace.

The funeral and burial were at Tabernacle M. P. Church near his home. Rev. Mr. Murray, pastor of Alamance Church, delivered a fitting discourse and Revs. G. F. Millaway and J. F. McCulloch took parts in the service, which was largely attended.

"Far from affliction, toil and care,
  The happy soul is fled;
The breathless clay shall slumber here,
  Among the silent dead.

"But we are hastening to the tomb:
  O may we ready stand:
Thou, blessed Lord, receive us home,
  To dwell at thy right hand."

Mrss Enoch Ludford—A Condensed Account of Her Life.

On May the 20th, 1829, Miss Ellen Brabble was born in Currituck County, North Carolina. There she lived for a while and then moved to Tyrrell County. There she was married to Mr. Joseph Norman about 1850. They lived near Albemarle Church in Tyrrell County until Mr. Norman's death which occurred on November 8th, 1870. She was married to Mr. Enoch Ludford September 11th, 1873. They were happy and devoted to each other until separated by her death on Sunday morning, February 17th, 1918. Her health and memory were remarkably good for one of her age until a short time before her departure. For years she and Mr. Ludford had made their home in Plymouth, N. C. The funeral service was conducted at the home in Plymouth by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Abernethy, of Creswell, N. C., assisted by Rev. E. N. Harrison, pastor of the Southern M. E. Church, and Rev. B. O. Myers, pastor of the Baptist church in Plymouth. The interment was in the cemetery at Edenton, one of the beautiful and historic towns of eastern North Carolina. The grave was most exquisitely covered with a bank of flowers, thus showing the high esteem in which she was held by her friends.

In early life Mrs. Ludford united with the Methodist Protestant Church at Albemarle in Tyrrell County. She remained a member of the same denomination during her life. Her husband was a Baptist, and she made possible the building of the new Baptist Church in Plymouth.

Many Methodist Protestant ministers found a welcome in her home which was always a home for them. She was loyal to her church but possessed a broad Christian spirit that was ever ready to help others whenever possible. Her life was a devoted Christian life; her example one of worth; her influence far-reaching in its effects. She is gone, but not forgotten.

The deceased is survived by her husband, Mr. Enoch Ludford, of Plymouth; and by the following children: C. J. Norman, Chairman of the Washington Co. Board of Education, and of the Local Exemption Board of Plymouth; C. V. Norman, of Plymouth; Mrs. Josephine Tarkenton, of Plymouth, L. W. Norman, banker, of Hertford; and E. S. Norman, ex-Sheriff of Chowan County, Edenton. Besides these she leaves to lament her going from them twenty-two grand-children, twenty-two great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren.

She had a large acquaintance and a host of friends who are sad over their loss, but who feel that earth's loss is heaven's gain. J. H. Abernethy.

William Benjamin Hester.

The subject of this sketch was born Oct. 4, 1879. On June 13, 1896, he was married to Susan Morgan. This union was blessed with four children, three of whom survive. Brother Hester had suffered for some time with tuberculosis. The death angel called his spirit home on March 23rd. For the past nine or ten years he has been a member of the M. P. Church at Oak Ridge. His funeral services were conducted by his pastor at Pine Grove Church on March 24th in the presence of a large concourse of people where his body was laid to rest by the Jr. O. U. A. M. Lodge of Kernersville. The attendance of this order was great enough and also the number of other people present to attest the respect with which he was held.

May a kind Providence sustain the bereaved wife and children. A. O. Lindley.

Guyer.—Martha A. Guyer passed from this world to her heavenly home March 1, 1918. The Lord blessed her with long life, permitting her to live 87 years here in this world. In early life she accepted Christ and joined the Methodist Protestant Church. She remained loyal to her church and faithful to her Savior till the end. The deceased was the widow of Solomon Guyer who is remembered by many on Guilford Ct. Sister Guyer spent her last days with her children who will miss her greatly. She was always ready to counsel them and help them in any way she could. Children, the Lord permitted her to stay with you many years, but now she has passed out of the house of clay to a new home. A home where she will meet husband and friends who have gone on before. May her children and grandchildren follow her as she followed Christ. The funeral was conducted at Spring Hill Church by the writer assisted by Rev. C. A. Cecil, after which her body was laid to rest by the side of her husband who preceded her just a few years.

BRIEF HISTORY OF GRACE CHURCH.

At the Conference held in Henderson in 1888, Rev. J. R. Ball was appointed a missionary to lead in the work of building a Methodist Protestant Church in Greensboro. He entered into the work, and continued until the church was built, though the time now seems long. It was not until the Spring of 1891 that the building was begun, and it was not completed till 1892.

A Sunday school was organized in a hall in the first Sunday in April with 36 present. (The present Sunday school numbers about 400, with an average attendance of about 300.)

GRACE M. P. CHURCH, SEAT OF CONFERENCE.

In April, 1892, the first pastor, Rev. W. F. Ohrum, of Maryland, entered upon his work. The auditorium was completed in the autumn, and was formally opened with a special service, Rev. T. J. Ogburn then pastor in Henderson, preaching the sermon. The pastor died of typhoid fever soon afterward, and in June, 1893, Rev. J. S. Williams, just out of college, was secured as pastor, and continued the work for three and a half years.

At the Conference of 1896, the church was left unsupplied, and afterward an arrangement was made with the editor of the church paper to occupy the pulpit once each Sunday.

The next year, 1897, Rev. T. M. Johnson came as pastor and remained five years, to 1902.

Then Rev. R. M. Andrews served five years, to 1907.

Rev. T. J. Ogburn succeeded and served for five years, to 1912.

Rev. R. M. Andrews then came, and has served to the present.

The church has had four Sunday-school superintendents: Bros. J. Norman Wills, J. S. Hunter, R. H. Brooks, and T. A. Hunter.

It has been fortunate in the musical talent that has been available. Its choir is one of the best in the city.

It has never had any men of great wealth in its membership, but has had the generous support of a number of substantial people.

The membership at first was 28, now it is 354.

Nearly ten years ago, the building first occupied was sold to the Moravians, the property of the First Baptist Church more centrally located having been acquired by purchase. This has been much improved and an important addition made to it in the Building of the Elizabeth Norman Philathea Class Room by the Wills brothers.

A parsonage has been purchased in easy reach of the church, and more Sunday-school rooms are in contemplation.

This is the third session of the Annual Conference in Greensboro since Grace Church was organized, and this year for the first time the church is undertaking to entertain the Conference without asking for outside help, though some outside have kindly asked to be permitted to help entertain.

Our church deals involved us in a considerable debt, but this is now in process of liquidation, through the self-denying efforts of members. We hope soon to be free of debt and able to do larger service.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Our good ladies of Grace Church Aid Society some time ago asked permission to put a new carpet in the church, which was readily granted. The Annual Conference will have the first use of it.

—The weather promises to be fine, as far as the weather ever commits itself to making promises.

—Visitors in unusually large number are expected.

—Bro. Ferree Ross came over from Asheboro on Tuesday to attend a meeting of the finance committee.

—Rev. G. W. Holmes was elected president of the Annual Conference on the second ballot. Rev. A. G. Dixon received nine votes less.

—Rev. C. W. Bates was elected Secretary.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil and Bro. L. L. Wrenn, of Siler City, were chosen for Stationing Committee.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard was elected press reporter.

LIFE'S LITANY OF GRATITUDE.

Thanksgiving Sermon by Rev. F. T. Tagg.

"That the life of Jesus might be made manifest in your mortal body." 2 Cor. 4: 10.

Those who are fond of alliteration as a method of theological expression, take pleasure in saying that the best form of thanksgiving is thanksliving. To men who are spiritual and devout, this is far more than a pleasing jingle of words. It comprehends a devout life of faithful service, as far better than polite conduct; occasional deeds of benevolence, or acts of spasmodic service.

The life of Jesus was an unbroken continuation of obedient service in the interest of humanity. He came to save. To seek and to save the lost was not only a service to be rendered, but it was just as much a part of His character, as the deity which made Him Immanuel. The glory which God gave Him, He gave to humanity, that men might be one in Him, as He was one with the Father. His exalted ideals, His entire consecration to His work, His utter unselfishness, His unimpeachable conduct in every sphere, His unchanging purpose to carry sacrifice to the utmost limit to accomplish His mission not only brings into conspicuous view the noble qualities of His immaculate life, but it furnishes a supreme example that invites men to the purest virtues and the most exalted character. It is impossible to adequately describe His great life except in superlatives. Such a life is musical with praise. It is a divine litany translated into an every-day service. It is not specially the utterances of grateful sentiments, but the life incarnation of a grateful spirit. What else can it mean to glorify God than to make the whole life a symphony of praise?

When, therefore, a man is always bearing about the dying of the Lord Jesus, what is it but the transferred life manifested in mortal flesh?

At the grave of Lazarus Jesus lifted up His eyes, and said, "Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard me", but that gratitude cast a backward gaze, on all His wonderful career, when He added "And I knew that Thou heardest me always." It was also a foretoken of that other great word, "I have glorified Thee on the earth I have finished the work thou gavest me to do." The joy of that completed life was a doxology of grateful praise, whose notes were more melodious and more beautiful than an oratorio of music. Our loftiest praise is not so much for what God gives us, as for the divinely appointed service He enables us to accomplish and the divinely regulated life He gives us grace to live. His was not a sentiment of song, but a divine Hosanna of sublime and unaffected service.

Jesus made ample provision for the transfusion of this life with all that it carries with it into mortal flesh, and He distinctly declares that men may have this life abundantly. When men become the temples of the Holy Ghost they shall receive power to live that life, and work out an efficient service, and such a life automatically renders itself into anthems of grateful praise.

On an occasion like this it is the custom to remind ourselves of the gracious providences of God that have made us comfortable or prosperous in the material blessings of life, and if there was nothing more than the fact that we are the beneficiaries of God's bounties we could not render our gratitude in adequate terms of praise. The noble sentiments of the ancient prophets, lofty as they are, seem tame and empty when contrasted with the unspeakable mercies of God. "I will mention the loving kindness of God, and the praise of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed upon us and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which He hath bestowed on them according to the multitude of His loving kindness. O that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men." One is surprised at the straining for adequate words, the fact is that words are always inadequate; only a life praise can satisfy the truly regenerate soul. It is not so much the blessings we receive but the blessings we rightly use that express the truest and the loftiest praise. The Psalmist caught the idea, "I will praise the Lord with uprightness of heart," surely the righteous shall give thanks unto Thee: the upright shall dwell in Thy presence.

Righteousness and gratitude are inseparable. In the days of the apostles they referred to men who received the grace of God in vain. They received grace they made no use of. Does not such an act express an inexcusable ingratitude? If you aid a man in need, he may express his gratitude in the most extravagant terms but if he uses your kindness to indulge greater recklessness of debauchery, you can have little respect for his wordy pretensions. But if he uses your kindness laudably, and leaves no opportunity unused to do you a kind turn, you know that he is grateful even though he does not utter a word. His gratitude has passed beyond the sound of pleasing words into the realm of indisputable actions. He lives his gratitude.

When a man seeks regeneration until he has a real experience of forgiveness and salvation, he may shout in praise of his new-found peace, and if his after-life sustains and supplements his praise, he validates himself before God and man—but if he weakens and backslides, most men will believe that his shouts of praise were but the effervescings of an ungainly hypocrite, or a self-deceived enthusiast.

When the life of Christ is manifest in the flesh, it is an unalterable alliance with Christ, and with Christ's work, and that work is to save the world. He claims us for His friends only when we do what He commands us. He says plainly, "I have chosen and ordained you that ye should bring forth fruit. The bird may warble its song of praise with the rising sun but the vine has no way to express its gratitude but by bearing fruit.

The word "to glorify" means to acknowledge the excellence of, to render homage, to magnify in worship, to adore. Does not that mean that our lives are to be a Te Deum of praise. To eat a turkey dinner it not specially an act of praise. But to add to your faith virtue and knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness and charity is. Many will sit down to a feast to-day without that kind of gratitude, but to furnish another with a dinner, who would otherwise go hungry is brotherly kindness, and it is that sort that shall prevent you from being barren or unfruitful and so it becomes a definite act of praise, for Jesus said, "Inasmuch," etc.

Would you accept either the piety or the gratitude of a man as genuine, who hoarded his gold and gave none of it to help Christ to save men, or to provide for them when they are destitute. You would rather call it hypocrisy. When the life of Jesus entered the mortal flesh of Zaccheus, he decided at once to return four-fold to any he had wronged and divide half of the remainder among the poor. What an act of potential gratitude, luminous with the love of God!

When a man opposes missions, or refuses to give his aid in the recovery of the heathen world he proves his disobedience and his ingratitude in one act. He refuses to recognize the authority of his Lord, and he is ungrateful for the missionary that rescued his forefathers and himself from the awful doom of heathenism. God gave His son the heathen for His inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for His possession, and He bids us go into all the world and preach His gospel to every creature. Can we claim a single element of gratitude if we fail to do it? Lowell once said, "The only proof of a man's sincerity and thankfulness, is that he give himself for a principle." Words, money, all things else are comparatively easy to give away: but when a man makes a gift of his daily life and practise, it is plain that the truth, whatever it may be, has gripped his life. That is the testimony that the world demands of those who claim to be Christians. Church membership is respectable, contributions are easy, public prayers and professions may mean little, but the faithfulness of the daily life is the music of the soul.

Behind every foreground of action lies the background of character on which the action rests and from which it gets its life and meaning, and permeating every Christian character is the transferred life of Jesus. Arnold sang,

"The greatest sermon I ever preach
Is the sermon of things I do;
The greatest blessing I can be
Is to live like Christ for you.

"The greatest battle I must fight
Is to live clean and kind and true;
The greatest task I undertake
Is to live like Him for you.

"The greatest challenge I ever get
Is this message that comes to me,
'Tis God himself who speaks and says
'Reveal my Son in thee.'

"The highest privilege of my life
Is to have His grace in me,
So to live that those around
His life in mine may see.

"The highest power I'll ever have
Is the power of His life in me;
My highest hope that some sweet day
My life like His may be.

"The noblest song I'll ever sing
Is a grateful melody
For the holy life transferred to mine
That my whole life is lived for thee."

Christianity is a religion of joy, but joy comes by imparting it. It is the only religion that implants the spirit of praise and thanksgiving to the people. Personal salvation and the spirit of praise always go together. Christianity is also the religion of happiness, but happiness without a corresponding goodness is impossible. That is one reason why the true follower of Christ is happy. His religion makes him good. Joy and happiness are two primary ingredients of a thankful spirit and they grow out of goodness and godliness and these come when the life of Jesus is manifested in your mortal bodies.

There is nothing apart from the life of Jesus Christ that can ever fill this world with the spirit and voice of thanksgiving and praise. There is no real music in the voice of gladness except that which directly or indirectly proceeds from the joy of the Lord. Jesus said, "These things have I spoken unto you that my joy might remain in you and that your joy might be full." What things? What did He say? Why, it was a whole lesson about fruit bearing. "He that abideth in me and I in him bringeth forth much fruit." "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in His love."

REV. W. F. OHRUM.
Grace's First Pastor.

Do you now think that I have chosen a far-fetched text for a thanksgiving sermon? Are not praise and service found in an inviolable alliance? Are not the joy, the happiness, the praise, of a grateful heart a symphony in three parts with the Christ-life as the key note of it all?

Some one has said that an hour of praises is worth a day of fasting and mourning. But the Psalmist had a far deeper experience. He could sing, "Be glad in the Lord and rejoice, ye righteous; and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart, for praise is comely for the upright." In this the Psalmist indicates that God sets a high value on the voice of praise when it is the prompting of a true life.

The followers of Christ are the happy witnesses of his transferred life. The joy and gladness of faith unto salvation need no command to speak the praises of Christ formed within the hope of glory. The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Why should we be thankful? We have had abundant harvests, happy homes, fine schools of learning, a government of freedom. We have had no wars, no national epidemics, no pinching poverty. We are too prone to look for incidentals. Our chief joy must be that we have God, not simply that we have his gifts, but Him. Our loving Father, who is unceasingly interested in our welfare. And we have the old Bible, not the emasculated thing of the critics, but the Word of God which endureth forever. And we have a Savior, whose vicarious atonement makes us the happy children of His grace and candidates for immortality and heaven.

And we have the Holy Spirit, whose office is to prepare us for the Christ life of truth and service by which we may manifest Him in our mortal flesh.

WHEN DANGER BECKONED.

"But it is such a dangerous trade," Frank Layfield's home folk had protested when first he announced his choice. Father Layfield was a druggist, and could not imagine from anything in his personal experience where lay the fascination in the work of his son's choice. Mother Layfield came from a family whose men folk had been doctors and preachers and bookish men. She wondered a little plaintively where Frank had learned such queer tastes and notions. Sister Ethel had wanted Frank to be "something intellectual and gentlemanly," and was bitterly disappointed in him, although she was as sweet and lovely over it as over all things. Only little Paul had approved and looked on Frank with more worshipful love and admiration than ever, if that were possible. But then little Paul's ideas and ideals were still in a crude and immature state, and he would no doubt have rejoiced if Frank had gone on the police force or become a gaudily liveried driver of a band wagon.

To all the protests and objections Frank had only one answer. He stretched out his long arms, spread out his big, sinewy hand and squared his broad shoulders when he gave that answer.

"Yes, but just look at me, a great strong hulk of a fellow, and try to imagine me helping father behind that little counter, or making a living writing poetry, or law papers, or prescriptions. It would be a wicked waste of all this energy," and he opened and closed his lean, muscular fingers with a power that could do great work in its own way. "I'm built to do manual work, and my whole school career showed that I am not fitted for the intellectual laurels that you would have me win. So, my dear, shocked folks, with your consent and your blessings, or without, I'm going to help build things, to do things real and hard and dangerous and altogether delightful." Then he tossed little Paul to one brawny shoulder, caught Ethel in the circle of the other brawny arm, and waltzed them gaily around the room and back to their places, while Father Layfield and Mother Layfield exchanged glances and smiles and sighed a little and gave their consent and their blessings where nothing else was accepted.

J. S. HUNTER.
Grace's First Treasurer.

So Frank learned his trade and became a first-class structural iron worker. All day long, day after day, he worked amid the sounds of riveting and hoisting and placing the great beams and girds and rafters of metal that made the farmework of many-storied buildings. High in the air he could walk the narrow iron beams, where space yawned menacing on either side of his slender foothold.

"Afraid of falling?" He laughed back the anxious motherly question when Mrs. Layfield put it to him, then shook his head smilingly. "Not a bit of it am I afraid, and you must not be putting the notion into my head. It's the man who's afraid, who thinks of falling, who really turns the trick some day. I'm safe enough, as safe aloft as on the fround where some careless creature might drop a girder on me or some reckless motor car run over me," and he laughed light-heartedly until her fears were calmed for the time. Yet her big, capable boy never went forth to his work without a tender little motherly prayer going with him, that he might be kept safe from harm for the day. She would have had her boy ask divine protection for himself. But though he smiled down at her with real love and boyish tenderness in his eyes when she whispered this in his ear at the start for his work, he had put her lightly off without the promise. He was a good boy, a dear son, but he had not yet learned to look to a stronger power than his own for safe keeping and guidance in all the things of life.

J. NORMAN WILLS.
Grace's First S. S. Superintendent.

"I'm making more money every day than most of my preacher, teacher, doctor uncles can make in a week," he exulted, "and thriving on the hard work." So for the time he was content.

But there came a day, a beautiful, sunshiny, spring day, when Frank learned his lesson at last. It was a day when just to be alive seemed joy enough. As he walked to the car that took him within a short distance of his present job he felt the keen delight of the crisp air, the brilliant sunshine and the glow of health and strength in every fiber of his being.

"We ought to get along fine with the work to-day. It's just the sort of day for hustling, and that's what we'll have to do to-day and a good many to-morrows," he thought, as he strode along. There had been a good bit of bad weather and considerable lost time in other delays since work had been started on this present contract. It was a big office building being put up in the heart of the business section. Like all such contracts, this contract had a time limit within which the work must be completed. Failing this completioon there would be a heavy cash forfeit for every day that the work went on over time until it was done.

"I can't blame the boss for pushing us all he can," Frank had said only yesterday to a grumbling fellow-worker. "If we stood to lose a few thousands on this job and had the chance to save them by hustling, I guess we'd hustle all right without any pushing." And, seeing it in that light, the man agreed, though somewhat grumbly. It is not conducive to cheerful work or workmen to have the constant strain of hard driving in the very air.

Neither is it conducive to the caution and exactness that are necessary in work of this kind in order to keep the accident list down to the smallest limits. With the best of care accidents would happen now and then, and a man would be sent to the hospital or go home with slighter hurts. Only yesterday some one had made a mistake in placing a beam, and it had crashed down four stories, dealing destruction in its fall, but happily striking no one.

Frank thought of this as he went aloft, and he looked keenly about him to see that all was right. A little frown of impatient protest came between his eyes as he heard the tensely nervous tones of the foreman, shouting directions at some one with a great deal more vehemence than was needed.

"I really think he'd get more done in a day, if he wouldn't get so worked up over it—if he'd just go along smooth and steady," Frank was thinking, half irritably. At the moment he was riding a heavy iron girder to its position in the big framework. He had done the same thing many times before in safety. It was a part of his work. But it was a part of some other man's work to make that ride a safe one by making the fastenings secure, and this time the man below had blundered. When the big piece of iron was still ten feet from the wall Frank felt it slipping from its fastenings. He clutched at it with both hands as if he would steady by his one-man strength that huge mass that many men could not so much as move without the aid of their powerful engines and hoisting apparatus. Slowly, steadily, the machinery was doing its part, but long before it had the beam in place it would slip from its slack fastenings and go crashing down, as that one yesterday had crashed down, eighty feet to the concrete basement floor; only yesterday the girder had held no rider. Frank's brown face paled and his steady head reeled as the sickening vision flashed upon him of the downward plunge.

He gave a swift, almost hopeless glance about him for some possible loophole of escape, but the girder had not been hoisted high enough for him to reach any other beam and draw himself to safety. He was half way between two stories and there was nothing within his grasp—nothing but—

His heart quickened at the thought and sight of the one chance open to him. It was a slight one; it might end in the very plunge he would avoid; but at least it was a bare chance and he could only try it and leave the rest. Through heart and mind leaped the words whispered in his ear only a few days before. He had put them lightly aside, unanswered, then. He answered them—obeyed them now.

"God—help me make it—and live to tell mother," his white lips framed soundlessly, as he balanced himself on the swaying, slipping, tilting beam. Then he leaped—outward, downward, straight for the top of the brick wall, only a little less than ten feet away, as the beam tilted toward it.

He never could tell how he did it. There had been no time for plan or calculation of distance and direction; but somehow the next instant he felt the rough bricks cutting his fingers and heard the cheer of the men who looked on helplessly, overwhelmed by the crash of the fallen girder. His feet had missed the wall, but his hands had caught the top and clung there with the strength that was his saving now.

Swiftly a big crane swung round to him, and in another minute or two landed him on the ground. The color came back to his face in the short ride, however, and the men who crowded around him saw little signs of his experience save a rather puzzled light in the eyes that met theirs. The foreman was shaking with the reaction from what had seemed only a few minutes before so inevitable. Frank was the quietest, calmest member of the group.

"Hereafter we'll take time to make things safe if this job is never done," the foreman decreed, sternly—a sternness half for the men, half for his own guilty conscience.

"That was a close shave," commented one of the men, feelingly. Frank glanced at him with a little smile. His voice was quite steady as he answered:

"Yes, but I'm safe and sound and ready to go up again, thank God," and in the face of the averted peril, the reverence of the words and the tone and the new light in his eyes awakened answering chords in their own hearts, and more than one of the workmen answered, "Amen."—Christian Observer.

USING ONE TALENT.

If a Christian man has but a little means or time or strength, it is all the more credit to him if he manages that little well, and doubles the one talent. The greatest genius is shown by an ability to do big things with trifling resources. He is a good wagoner, some one has remarked who can turn in a little space. If we are straitened in our local circumstances, or in our personal qualities, we are not straitened in God. Even one loaf may feed a multitude when the bread is placed in the Master's hand, and a coarse net may enclose a great number of fishes when it is cast in the right place, in obedience to the Lord's command. No man is small unless he wants to be, and any man can do wonders if he is only willing to become a co-worker with God.—Zion's Herald.

NAMES AND THEIR MEANING.

"Abi," or "Ab," at the beginning of a Hebrew name signifies "father"; as Abi-dan, "father of a judge." Can you find out the names in the Bible of which the meanings are here given?

1. Father of peace. This man caused his family great trouble, and was killed when fighting against his own father.

2. Father of light. This man was a brave soldier, and when he died the King and all the people wept for him.

3. Father of a great multitude. This man's faith was greatly tried, but he "believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness."

4. Father of pleasantness. This man's son was a soldier, who lost the honor of a great victory through his cowardice before the battle.

5. Father of the King. This man slew all his brothers but the youngest, and "reigned three years over Israel."

6. Father of plenty. This man joined in a plot to take the throne from a young King, and was banished to his "own fields."

7. Father of a gift. This man saved the life of a King who was attacked by a giant during a battle.—Sunday Reading.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING.

Lincolnton, N. C., Nov. 15, 1915.

Whereas, our kind Father above has blessed us with peace and plenty, and in recognition of this, the President of the United States and the Governor of North Carolina have set apart Thursday, November 25th, 1915, as a National Thanksgiving Day: I, Zadok Paris, President of the North Carolina Orphans' Association, do respectfully ask every citizen of North Carolina, irrespective of color, politics or religion, to set apart one day's earnings to be sent on Thanksgiving Day, to the Orphanage of his choice, or some needy Orphan in his community.

Z. Paris, President.

WAS, IS, CAN BE.

The conditions of peoples in non-Christian lands to-day duplicate those of centuries ago, because missionaries and the Bible did not reach their ancestors, but repressing, shackling heathen faiths have continued to dominate them.

The nations called Christian owe their unparalleled heritage and phenomenal development to the increasing sway of Christianity made known centuries ago to their savage, pagan ancestry.

It is evident, therefore, that the religion of a people determines their character, since nothing has so influenced and molded, retarded or advanced men, and their character necessarily determines their progress and achievements.

The fact that the Bible still transforms cannibals and savages into intelligent, developing people who give assurance of ultimately attaining equal standing with the foremost of earth, who themselves came from pagan origin, proves that God's plan is all that is required.

Hence Gladstone well said, "My only hope of the race is to bring the human mind into touch with the divine revelation." There can be no hope for the race without the Bible, and there can be no hope for Christianity, in the largest sense, unless its followers work at God's plan—preaching the Gospel to every creature.

The highest spiritual realizations, the most service to men have only been attained when Christians, the churches, were aflame with the passion to save men, the world in God's way and by His agencies.

How perilous to the soul, how deadening to the church, how arrogantly rebellious is the indifference, inaction, opposition of those who neither favor nor help Foreign Missions—God's own plan for His church.

In consideration of what we have inherited through foreign missions, of what the Christ expects of us, of what we promised in our church membership vow, of the great needs of non-Christian peoples, and of our successful work in Japan, and in the light of the Day of Judgment, how can this attitude and course be longer adhered to?

The times are fraught with possibilities for the weal or the woe of nations, the non-Christian part of the world is sobered and concerned, the church at home looks on appalled, and seemingly forgets that now as never before her peaceful conquest must be heroically waged, and that her own existence is conditioned on her obedience to her Lord's commands.

Our own church must awake, and strive to do her full share. Pastors, we appeal to you to sound the call for a forward movement in our foreign missionary work.

Enlist some helpers, and start one or more Foreign Mission Study Classes, or Reading Circles. Introduce "Five Missionary Minutes" in your Sunday school, valuable information, striking incidents to be presented in few minutes from the book. Cost 50c.

QUARRELING IN THE HOME.

By Margaret E. Sangster, Jr., in Christian Herald.

"I was three minutes late for the train," said Dorothy, disconsolately.

"No," corrected her brother, firmly, "you were four minutes late."

A frown appeared on Dorothy's usually placid little face.

"Three minutes," she reiterated pointedly.

"I s'pose," said the brother angrily, "I s'pose I wasn't with you? I s'pose I don't know it was four minutes?" His fist banged heavily on the table.

The mother came out of her reverie. "Children," she remonstrated, "children, stop quarreling—you mustn't! It makes me very, very nervous to have you fuss about little things. I won't have it!" Her voice rose shrilly with excitement.

"That's right," said the brother, aggrievedly; "that's right! Side with Dorothy. You always do!"

"I don't, either," answered his mother. An angry beam shone from her usually mild eyes. "I wasn't siding with anybody. I merely wanted you to stop!"

Hurriedly the father pushed back his chair from the table.

"You don't seem to be helping much—" he remarked. "I guess I don't want any dessert. This eternal quarreling—"

The door slammed behind him.

This is the accurate—all too accurate—portrait of the scene that is enacted, with variations, in a vast number of American homes. I have known many unhappy families who might have been very happy instead if they had not been argumentative and quarrelsome; if they had been tactful with each other instead of thoughtless.

I once knew two elderly maiden sisters who lived together in perfect peace and tranquility, although they had nothing in common—no two traits alike. I knew for a fact that they differed in their ways of looking at things, differed completely in all of the important and unimportant issues of their lives. I often wondered how they managed to get along without ruffling their sea of happiness, and one day I gathered my courage in hand to ask them.

"So many homes," I said, "are ruined by quarreling over little matters I wonder how you manage to be so calm! So pleasant always?"

As I waited for my answer, the sisters looked at each other in silent understanding. Then suddenly they laughed together—laughed so heartily and infectiously that I, perforce, laughed, too. It was a moment before the older sister answered my question.

"It isn't a short story," she told me, "but I'm sure that you'll be interested.

"As you know, sister and I are very different—as different, almost, as two women could be. She is a suffragette, and I am an 'anti;' she likes light and laughter and music and gaiety, while I am content to stay at home with my books and my knitting. I remember, even as tiny girls, we used to quarrel, and, yes, come to blows, because we didn't want to play the same games, or go to the same places, or eat the same kind of food. It went on for years; sister and I used to fuss about our friends and our enemies and our amusements. We didn't strike each other, as we had when when we were children, but sometimes we couldn't think of mean enough things to say—and I remember distinctly throwing one of the best tea cups on the floor in a fit of rage against her.

"Then father and mother died, and we were left alone in the big house. We hadn't lived together long before I realized that the quarreling had to stop—that it was actually too much of a mental strain. One day I sat down opposite sister and we talked it all over. The upshot of the matter was that we decided on this plan of action:

"If one of us says something that the other doesn't agree with, instead of beginning to argue and disagree as we would have done years ago, we shut our mouths tight and count up to fifty, and after each number we say to ourselves—Is it worth it? like this—'One—is it worth it? Two—is it worth it? Three—is it worth it?'

"We do that all the way up to fifty (unless before that we see we have nothing to quarrel over), and if we decide by fifty that it is worth while to disagree, we do disagree. But," and the older sister laughed joyously at the happiness of life, "it's remarkable how seldom we find—afwent as far as the garden gate. There she sat upon a stone and pitied, not the sorrowing family, but herself. It was sad that she must run away. It was sad that Muriel's tears wet the brown paper diary, the only possession she was taking with her into the world.

Suddenly Richard's bright head popped into view. He was running down the garden path much excited. Aunt Katie had arrived and had brought him the big red balloon he was waving in the air.

''Merl,'' he called, ''tum home!''

''I will!'' responded Sister Muriel, who lived happily ever after—that is, after she destroyed the diary, which must never be seen by her grandchildren.—Frances Margaret Fox, in Christian Advocate.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Burlington.—We have been too busy to write a report for the Herald during the last two weeks, and are busy this week, but we desire to make our final report for this conference year. The few days preceding the annual conference are always busy ones with both pastor and people.

Last Sunday was a busy day with Burlington church and Sunday school. The day was crowded with services and meetings preparatory for the annual conference. The attendance at Sunday school and the preaching services was not as large as usual, owing to the rainy weather. The Sunday school decided to have a Thanksgiving service on the night of Thanksgiving Day. Contributions, both money and provisions, will be made for the Children's Home.

The fourth quarterly conference of our church was held on Tuesday night of last week. The report of the church treasurer showed a deficit on pastor's salary and general interests, but the stewards have been at work and the deficit has been greatly reduced since then. We are hopeful of sending a ''paid in full'' report up to Conference.

On Sunday morning immediately following the preaching service our church was surprised and shocked to hear the announcement of our pastor, Bro. Curry, that he had accepted a call from the M. P. church through the Board of Home Missions at Seattle, Wash., to be pastor of the church at that place. We are sorry to lose Bro. Curry, but wish him all the success possible in his new field. He will enter upon his new work Dec. 15th. A call meeting of the church was held after the morning service Sunday to instruct the delegate for a pastor for the coming year.

A memorial service in memory of our lamented brother, L. W. Holt, was conducted by the Baraca Class and the Christian Endeavor Society Sunday afternoon. Talks were made by different members of the class and the C. E. Society concerning the work of this good man who has gone to reap his great reward in heaven. The service was a very impressive one.

We were favored with a visit on Monday and Tuesday of Revs. N. G. Bethea and R. A. Swaringen, both of whom were en route to the Annual Conference. Rev. Mr. Swaringen spent the night with Bro. Curry, while Rev. Mr. Bethea visited his sister, Mrs. W. A. Shoffner, who lives near town.

This is our last report as official reporter for the Burlington church. We wish our successor the best of success in reporting the happenings of Burlington church and Sunday school the coming year.

Chas. B. Way, Reporter.

Anderson Ct.—Yesterday was our last appointment for Liberty Hill. It was a great day. Though the service began at 10:30 o'clock and lasted until one the pastor didn't get to preach. Prof. Faircloth, of Greenville, Prof. Lesley, of Easley, had charge of the music. Miss Blanch Centell, probably the sweetest singer in this country, accompnied by her sister and some friends of Greenville, added much to the musical program. Miss Earnestine Compton read an excellent paper on the blessed state of holiness; Miss Rosa Smith, a good paper on missions, followed by a stirring address from Rev. Mr. Davis. People sang and talked and paid their missions until the pastor had but little time to talk, but that made no difference, paying is in order now. Door of the church was opened, six received on profession of faith, one by letter.

Although the weather was very threatening we had a full house and not a dull moment seemed to find a place in the service. Stewards' meeting announced for ten o'clock this morning. A good congregation was present as well as the stewards. We had preaching. A number came forward for pardon and consecration, some were blessed.

As I was leaving, Mrs. W. P. Smith gave me $5.00, present to wife. I appreciate the fact, for the last two or three weeks people of different denominations have given me $50.00 in cash. I don't compromise to get these gifts. We have just got good people in this country.

Tuesday last service at Fairview. Some members to receive and a general winding up.

W. A. Lamar.

--Rev. C. L. Whitaker, chairman of the Examining Board, arrived Monday night.

Halifax Circuit.—Our fourth quarterly Conference was held yesterday. Bro. Edwards, of Littleton Circuit, preached a ''stirring'' sermon at 11:00 A. M. Thirty-eight official members and visitors took lunch at the parsonage at about 12:15 P. M. Those people didn't eat as much as we thought they would. There was more than plenty left, for I shall have to eat cold food and ''warmed overs'' until I start to the Annual Conference. At about 1:15 Bro. Davis conducted the devotional exercises at the church, and then the quarterly conference was called to order. Bethesda had 7 official members present and several visitors; Eden had 5 official members and 2 visitors; Lee's Chapel had 6 official members and 3 visitors; and Harmony, Union, and Ringwood had 2 official members each to answer to their names. Roanoke Circuit had 7 representatives and visitors present besides their pastor, and we discussed a division of the circuits, but Halifax Circuit finally decided that it was hardly ready to give up two as important churches as Eden and Harmony so it voted to remain as it is for the present at least. Then Halifax Circuit decided to increase pastor's salary so that their pastor could devote his full time to the work. I was really expecting this circuit to do that, if it decided that a division would be unwise, but I didn't think it would make such a large increase. Pastor's salary was increased $260.00 for next year, making next year's salary $1,000.00 besides Fosburgh Camp which pays $60.00 a year to the Halifax Pastor for a service a month at night. I was with Bro. Edwards recently in his quarterly conference on Littleton Circuit, and the pastor's salary for next year was increased from $700.00 to $800.00. I think that Littleton will soon be paying $1,000.00 a year to its pastor. Come on, Roanoke and make pastor's salary $1,000.00 for next year! You can do it. You circuits ''up the State'', come on if you are going to keep up with us ''Easterners!'' We were pleased to see High Point take the lead among stations and increase the salary to $1200.00 for next year—they could have made it $1500.00 easily, but it will not do to increase too much all at once! I hope that some of the other stations will follow the example of High Point, for it costs a great deal to live in town. Come on, circuits and stations, and pay your pastor enough so that he will not have to teach school or farm for a living! Pastors, give your official members a dinner and they will increase pastor's salary. No, I am not so sure that the dinner caused the great increase in salary here, for Bros. Richard Hunter and F. M. Taylor were two of the officials who strongly advocated the increase, and neither of them were with us at dinner.

Every church on the circuit reported all claims paid in full—two of them over paid—, and some of the churches had money left in the treasury. In addition to the assessment for Foreign Missions, this circuit paid $51.27 at the Children's Day offerings. Only one Easter offering was taken, resulting in $6.50 extra for Home Missions. The circuit reported a total of $214.40 paid to our Children's Home during the year. Bethesda Sunday Egg Club and S. S. paid $40.28, and the regular offering was $51.69, making a total of $91.97 for that church. Through the Missionary Society, Sunday Egg Club, and regular offering, Harmony paid $40.19. Through the Sunday Egg Club and offering, Eden paid $32.55. Through the Sunday Egg Club and offering, Lee's Chapel paid $26.98. Ringwood has no Sunday Egg Club, but the offering amounted to $22.71. Union has no Sunday Egg Club, and we were rained out at last appointment, so we took no offering there. Some of these churches averaged over $1.00 a member to our Children's Home. Bethesda Church sent the Asheville Church $21.24, paid the pastor's expenses to the Summer Conference, overpaid pastor's salary, and had money left in the treasury.

We had only 31 conversions and 24 accessions during the year, and we now have only 411 members, but we "can lay our hands on" nearly every one of them, and almost every one is showing an interest in the circuit. Some of our churches on this work "drop" all members who refuse to help bear the burden, unless a member should not be able to pay anything, and then we take an offering for such a member. I think that all members who are unable to help bear the financial burden of the church should receive assistance. We are hoping and praying for a pleasant and profitable Annual Conference, and the best reports that the N. C. Conference has ever had.

Pastor of Halifax Ct., and Member of Finance Com.
November 13th, 1915.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.—Our pastor, Mr. Bowman, filled his last appointment for the Conference year last Sunday and as usual gave us a splendid sermon. We feel that Mr. Bowman has done a great work on this circuit. May we be fortunate enough to obtain just the leadership we need for next year, whether it be in the return of the old or in the coming of the new; but we feel that we can not find anyone that will suit us as well as Mr. Bowman.

Our S. S. is still improving. We have been doing very good work the entire year, but let's put new life and a greater effort in the coming year.

A quiet wedding was solemnized Sunday morning at the home of the bride when Miss Lalah Daffron and Mr. Clay Thomas were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed by the bride's pastor, Mr. Bowman. Only a few close relatives of the contracting parties were present. They have the good wishes and congratulations of their many friends.

We are sorry to note the sickness of Mrs. Cad Allred; may she have a speedy recovery. Lellia Lemmons, Reporter.

Nov. 15, 1915.

Alleghany, Davidson Ct.—Our protracted meeting was held the first Sunday in November and ran till Wednesday night. There was a large crowd on Sunday and a right good one all the time.

Brother Morgan, of Denton, was Bro. Hulin's pulpit help. He did all the preaching except twice. He preached plainly and the people all seemed to like him. He is just starting out to preach and I wish him great success and that he may win many souls to Christ.

Bro. Bunch Surratt spoke once for us. He is just starting. We hope for him also great success. We hope that we may all take these words and put them to practice in the discharge of duty as never before.

Bro. Hulin preached once and we all enjoyed his preaching, for we all like Bro. Hulin. The meeting was not what we would love to see, but we hope that great good may yet grow out of it.

One bright little girl joined the church and I hope that she may make a useful member and be a great light in the church. May the Lord be her guide in life. May we all live so as to help her and all of the rest of the young to live aright, for they are watching us. If we do right they can see it, and if we do wrong they are sure to see it, and it hurts. We should not forget to be at the post of duty to help in whatever way we can. We should help the church. We should help our pastor. May we pray for them while they are at Conference. Bro. Hulin has been with us seven years and we do not want to give him up, for we all like him, for we feel that we have been greatly helped by his kind words and by his preaching. We will remember Bro. Hulin and hope that if it is the Lord's will that he will come back.

Bro. Hulin got all that our church promised to pay and some over, we are glad to say. Some of our members couldn't be with us in our meeting on account of sickness. We miss them very much, but Bro. Hulin visited them and they sent word back they were praying for the meeting and wanted our prayers, which did the church good.

Love to all the readers.

Abigail Coggin.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Ct.—We held our fourth quarterly conference at Bethel on last Saturday before the second Sunday in November. All the churches were represented except Union Grove, and the usual business was transacted. The reports were about like usual, not all paid up. Pastor's salary for the whole circuit was for this year $600, the whole circuit has paid only $400. Pastor's salary at our church was for this year $113. Paid up till now $87.75. We stewards are going to try and get the balance due our pastor, while he is away, if possible.

You see what dead members do, alive to nothing. Paid on finances $30.99.

The quarterly conference instructed our delegate, Bro. J. W. Cartner, for the return of our present pastor. Our beloved pastor filled his last appointment to-day, at our church for this Conference year. It was a strong sermon, I do hope long to be remembered by those that were present, especially the unsaved. Our pastor has surely been faithful and has done a good year's work. "The workman is worthy of his hire." One received into our church to-day by letter, Mr. Roy Julian; he came from the M. E. Church. One of our members is right sick, Mr. C. B. Boger. Mrs. Dr. Anderson and mother worshiped with us to-day. Come again, good ladies.

Officers for the coming year were elected to-day. We are still alive and moving on very nicely with our S. school, though not so large. It seems we cannot get many of the older people interested, especially the married ones. O may each one of us do our duty and do all the good we can for our church. We want to ask one thing of our people. Come out to hear our pastor each appointment and let's pay him up each quarter. Now we can show our appreciation of his service by so doing. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Mrs. J. B. Robertson, Rep.

Nov. 15, 1915.

Bethesda, Yadkin College Ct.—The Annual Conference will be in session by the time this reaches the Herald office. Our fourth quarterly conference convened at Mt. Carmel on Saturday the 6th; preaching at eleven o'clock by pastor Rev. H. L. Powell, dinner on the grounds, after which the business of the quarterly conference was transacted; some of the most important business was fixing pastor's salary for next year, hearing final report of stewards, advising of delegate to bring Rev. H. L. Powell back and Sunday school superintendent's report. Our pastor asked each S. S. superintendent on this circuit to make a report of his school as to the number enrolled, average attendance, collection for quarter, collection for Children's Home, kind of literature used, etc.

On last Saturday the members of Bethesda Church met for the purpose of revising the class book and electing the officers for 1916. The following officers were elected: Class leader, Bro. R. E. Leonard; stewards for pastor, Bro. A. R. Hinkle, Bro. Lee Wagner, and Dr. R. V. Yokley; stewards for general interests, Miss Sadie Wagner, Miss Alta Leonard and Mrs. R. L. Grubb; trustees, A. R. Hinkle, Alex. Evans, C. M. Yokley, I. Y. Clodfelter, D. S. Leonard; treasurer, C. M. Yokley; reporter to Herald, Mrs. C. M. Yokley. Our organist, Miss Bessie Wagner has gone to Southmont to take charge of the music and assist in the school work at that place. Success to the Herald.

Chas. M. Yokley.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—Rev. J. B. Trogdon filled his appointment at Cid Sunday and delivered a most excellent sermon. He warned the people of where they are drifting by their negligence in the church work. It was his farewell sermon for this year; and if he does not return to us again we bid him Godspeed in whatever field he goes to, for we all had learned to like him and his family and everybody seemed to hate to give him up, while we hope that the Conference will see fit to send us another good man. There are always a faithful few that have to bear the burden of the church. But those are the ones generally whose horns are filled with plenty.

Mrs. Molly Jenkins, of Denton, was with us Sunday, also some from Piney Grove. We are always glad to have them.

May God's richest blessings rest on the Annual Conference and all of its people everywhere for better work next year. Let us be thankful for what the Lord has done for us this year.

Yours as a worker for the Lord.

Reporter.

Spring Hill, Piedmont Ct.—Sunday was a good day with us at Spring Hill regardless of the bad weather, as it was the day our pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton, preached his last sermon of three years' work and we found that he brought the same true gospel to us that he brought to us three years ago when he came to Spring Hill and delivered to us a sweet message and that day will be long remembered by some of Spring Hill people. I disremember all of his text that day, but he used in it there is a great day coming, there is a great day coming to us all some time and, sinner friends, I beg you with all my heart and pray God that you all may heed the earnest warning and pleading that he has given you and may you turn from your path of sin to a path of righteousness that will lead you all to a better and happier world than this and there may we as Sunday school teachers, scholars and friends meet our pastor at the great white throne and clasp hands and sing God's praise in a sweet song forever. During his three years' stay with us we have learned to love him as a pastor; we will welcome and expect him back next year and will miss him if he doesn't come back. But if the Lord sees it best to send him to another field we wish him well wherever he may go and pray he be rewarded for the work he has done at Spring Hill and on Piedmont Ct. Should he not come back we will extend a warm welcome to the one that may come to fill his place.

One new member was received in the church Sunday, it being Bro. Gaither Sink, one of our Sunday school teachers. We were glad to receive him. All the officers were elected for next year; made a few changes in the board from last year which we hope was for the best. We had two Sunday school teachers and five scholars to marry during the last year, but we still welcome them at Sunday school. Parents, come and bring your children next Sunday. With love to the Herald.

A Teacher.

Welch Memorial S. S.—Our school is still growing. While we lose some, we try to keep the vacancy filled with new ones. Last Sunday we had 160 present and our collection amounted to $4.01. As usual the first Sunday is our orphans' day. A class from the orphans' Home took us by surprise and came in just before opening. They took charge of the music in opening which was fine. It was inspiring for our school to see the results of their efforts. It certainly was encouraging to us to see how those little children are being trained for service. We are always glad to have them with us. We want you to come again.

Bro. D. R. Williams filled the pulpit as usual and presented two fine sermons to his large audience, which we all could see had influence on the people and we hope that the seeds sown will bring forth fruit immediately. We feel that it was not seed sown in rock or thin soil.

We hope and trust that Conference will see fit to send Bro. D. R. Williams back to us again. Grover A. Kerr, Reporter.

cabbage plants, and pears: Miss Martha Parsons, pears.

Mrs. Kivett can supply you with very fine plants. She has 17 acres of the finest plants that I have ever seen.

We hope you have instructed your delegate to run up to High Point and see how things are getting along at the Home before he returns.

Let our prayers be that whatever may be done in the Annual Conference may be for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE W. F. M. S.

Are you aware of the fact that over half the year is gone, and we have received only a little more than $300.00 of the $1500.00 that we are expected to raise this year?

A letter from Mrs. East, our Executive Treasurer, some weeks ago brings the information that funds are very badly needed. She suggests that if we would pray more we could work better. Suppose we try it? At the last Board Meeting the waking hour in the morning was set as the time for prayer for our missionaries and mission work. Let each auxiliary member besome one of the Prayer Circle of which all our missionaries are members.

Won't every auxiliary member who has not done so pay her dues at once so that the treasurer can send the money in to me before Dec. 1st, as on that date all money on hand must be forwarded to Mrs. East?

At the last Branch Meeting the greater part of the $1500.00 was apportioned among the auxiliaries. We hope that none will fall short of their apportionment, and we should be glad to receive the payments quarterly. The N. C. Branch must not fail to meet her share of the budget if she is to take the honor place in the "Standard of Excellence" plan that was adopted at the last meeting.

With great anxiety for the work,

Velna McCulloch,
Treas. N. C. Branch.

HOW TO AVOID PNEUMONIA.

"I am an old man and much afraid of pneumonia. How can I avoid the disease this winter?"

Reply: Pneumonia is a germ disease and is usually brought on by the lodgment of the pneumococcus germs in the membranous tissues of the throat or lungs. If a person is well and strong these germs are not likely to hurt him seriously. A slight cold may be the result. But if he is run down, dissipated, or if he in any way has a weak constitution, his chances are not so slight.

It is not difficult to guard against pneumonia if one will avoid unreasonable exposure and at the same time will practice the rules of personal hygiene or right living.

Working too hard or excessive exercise with extreme exposure is a common factor in preparing the way for pneumonia.

Overeating, particularly if there is an excess of meat in the diet, is another thing which often injures the body and lowers its vital resistance to disease.

Alcohol, in whiskey, patent medicine or otherwise, is one of the most powerful allies of the pneumonia germ and even moderate drinkers show a much higher death rate from this disease than abstainers do.

But bad air is, of all bad influences, perhaps the most important in its effect on colds and pneumonia. People who live much in the open air, who never close the windows of their sleeping rooms in winter, and who bathe daily, almost never catch colds, or if they do, the colds are light ones and do not run into pneumonia.—N. C. State Board of Health.

THE HEATHEN CHILD TO THE AMERICAN CHILD.

If you had been born in a far-off land,
Far over the deep, wide sea,
And I in America had my home,
In America, land of the free,
If you were I, and I were you,
Do you know what I would do?

If you had been born with a swarthy skin,
And people looked on you with scorn,
While I knew nothing is black but sin
And the soul may be white as the lily at morn;
If I had a chance to uplift you,
Do you know what I would do?

If you were an orphan and homeless, too,
And never had heard of the Lord,
While I had been taught from earliest days
To love and obey His Word,
If I were poor and ignorant, too,
Do you know what I would do?

I would save my pennies and nickels and dimes,
And send them over the sea,
That you might be fed and clothed and taught
To worship the God who is dear to me!
If you were I, and I were you,
That is what I would do.

I'd tell all the boys and girls around
Just what I was working for, too,
And I'd never give up till I'd got them to help
Send the gospel to needy like you.
If you were I and I were you,
That is what I would do!

—Selected.

—The Moravian church, which is the spiritual representative of John Huss, the martyr, leads all Christian bodies in its devotion to missions. Though composed of poor people, its average per capita missionary gift is $17 a year. This church has about 40,000 members at home and 97,000 on the mission fields. If the 2,680,000 members of our Southern white churches should give an average of $17 per year each, would our members on the foreign fields soon be 6,5[illegible]7,500? We should certainly like to see it tried.

—The following beautiful prayer was written by Miss Fannie E. S. Heck on October 15, 1914, and read on the occasion of her funeral at Raleigh, N. C., on August 27, 1915:

"Lord, grant me if thou wilt
To slip away
As slips the night
Into the dawning day
So soft
That e'en the watchers, watching,
Cannot say
Here ends the night
And here begins the day,
But only know
The night's thy night,
The day, thy day."

ONE ON ST. PETER.

St. Peter settin' at the gate;
Nigger pasin' by—
St. Peter up and sez to him,
"How did you come to die?"

"Go ax de man whut helt de gun
A-pintin' at dat roos';
Go ax de dog whut helt my foot
An' wouldn't turn hit loose!"

"And so," St. Peter sez to him,
"You was kotched in de ac'?"
Dat nigger turnt an' looked at him
An' spon's: "H'it is a fac'!"

"Down in de deep den you mus' go,
Fer stealin' uf dat hen!"
The nigger schratch his haid right hard;
St. Peter had him den!

But 'deck'y liftin' up his arms
He flop 'em on his sides,
An 'zackly like a rooster crow
Three times out loud he cries.

St. Peter hung his haid wid shame—
He 'membered uv his sin—
An, grabbin' up a great big key,
He let dat nigger in!

CHURCH AND SUNDAY- SCHOOL PROBLEMS.

Nearly seven-eighths of all our people are country dwellers. If served and saved, they must be served and saved by the country church. . . . The country church is not a phase of church work—not merely a home mission matter; it is nearly nine-tenths of our entire church problem in North Carolina. . . . The city is the final challenge to Christianity; but the country church is the recruiting station for the warfare.—The Farm and Homestead.

The life and well-being of the church in the city depends upon the life and well-being of the church in the countryside. . . The cities cannot be relied on to furnish the Christian leaders of the future.—John R. Mott.

Five-sixths of the ministers and six-sevenths of the college professors of America were born and reared in the country.—J. O. Ashenhurst.

In most cases the country church is gradually, and in some cases swiftly, losing ground.—Warren H. Wilson.

Over three million white children in the South are outside the Sunday schools.—R. E. Magill.

A SKYLIGHT IN THE HEART.

Did you ever hear about the boy (or perhaps it was a girl) who said he had just put a skylight in his heart, so that God could look in and make it full of sunshine? Now, I think this is a good idea. You know that a plant will droop and wither if it has not sunshine and air. It won't look green, and it won't bear any flowers, and altogether it will be a very unhappy-looking thing. I think our hearts are like that, and unless we have the sunshine of God's help in them, they will look very much like the plant that grows in the dark. All sorts of queer aches and pains will be in that heart.

Did you ever hear of such things as "Don't-want-to-be aches," or "I-don't-want-to-give pains"? Well, there are such things, and boys and girls are suffering from them when they say, "Oh, my finger hurts!" or "I've got a dreadful pain in my foot!" when they are called on to run on an errand. They seem to be full of queer aches and pains when they are needed to help any one. Let us build little skylights in our hearts, so that the bright sun of God's favor may cure us of all these diseases.—Delaware Churchman.

Tibbie had been placed by her aunt in a situation as maid of all work in a family of three. At the end of a week the aunt "stepped along in" to see how Tibbie was getting on.

"Do you like your work?" asked the aunt.

"'Tis fair," said the laconic Tibbie.

"And are they making you feel at home?"

"Whiles they are, and whiles they aren't."

"Now what do you be meaning by that?" asked the aunt impatiently.

"Aweel," said Tibbie, "they have na' asked me to gang t' kirk wi' them yet, but last night they went on wi' a grand quarr'l they were having, all the three o' them, wi' me takking the dishes off o' the table, just as if I'd been one o' the family."—Deaconess Advocate.

MORE TROUBLE.

The number of toes I have stepped on, my! my! And every toe had a corn on it. How wicked I should feel, for every time I stepped on Jim's corn it hurt John. Jim has not said ouch! a single time. To endure such vicarious punishment would be noble if necessary. Another fellow in the last issue of the Herald has had his corn crushed and nose, with a boil on the end of it, pulled. Such suffering—all vicarious though. One admits the fact that we need a better educated ministry, but doesn't like the way I state the truth and most of all who it is that says so. He seems to have a standard and a half by which to judge—whole standard, who said it—half standard, what did he say? Say, brethren: in the midst of the smarting of your toes and nose you have missed the chief object the writer contends for—a better educated ministry on our borders that we as a denomination may be fairly judged by those who do not know us as a church. I still maintain that intelligent people will not be led into our church by an uneducated man. I mean one who knows nothing about grammar, at all, and is too indolent to try to improve his language, but would rather sit around stores or trot from place to place, than study and prepare himself for his pulpit. A preacher who has no higher idea of the importance of the Gospel deserves the name of ignoramus. We don't need such men in our Conference. "Whom do you mean?" You, if you are guilty.

MARRIED.

Dorsett-Julian and Lamb-Fogleman.

The M. P. parsonage, Randleman, is a very convenient place for the young to start the walk of life together. Two marriages were celebrated there last week. November 10 Mr. D. C. Dorsett of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Miss Laura Julian, of Millboro, N. C. After the marriage they boarded the train for Winston-Salem where they will make their future home.

The second, Mr. J. Orville Lamb and Miss Marjorie Fogleman, were married November 13, 8:45 P. M. The groom and bride are both of Randleman and will make their future home here. Both of these couples are popular and have many friends who wish for them a great future.

was received into Grace Church last Sunday. Also Mrs. Harris, formerly of La Grange, and her husband. We were glad to welcome them.

—When Rev. W. F. Kennett was pastor in Henderson, he was asked by Mrs. T. T. Hicks to preach a sermon on "Bringing Up Boys." He replied: "I would but for one thing: I have a boy of my own."

—Bro. J. M. Stone's Baraca Class kindly provided paper, envelopes, and stamps for the free use of members of Conference.

—Bro. Curry's going to Seattle not only causes surprise, but regret. Yet it is hoped that our loss will be justifying gain to our cause in the far West.

—Bro. J. S. Hunter, now deceased, whose picture appears in another column, was much more than the mere treasurer of Grace Chuch in its earliest years. He was the trusted financial adviser.

—Bro. J. Norman Wills' picture does not show him as he is now, but as he was then. He had been the "boy superintendent" at Moriah Church some time before Grace Church was organized, going out every Sunday the four miles.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

HYPHENATED CHURCH MEMBERS.

They exist, and are less satisfactory than are hyphenated-Americans as citizens. Their names are in the church, but they are in the world. The world holds them, has their heart, their life, their all. They spend money freely for worldly pleasure, but give but little and that grudgingly to the church. They enjoy places of worldly amusement of the baser sort, but find no pleasure in the house of God. They read that which ministers to sensual appetite, but have no taste for that which feeds the spirit that allies them to God. They are in a dreadful state, made worse perhaps by the fact that they have been accepted as members of the church. If they were wholly without the church, they might be appealed to on their own ground; but the church is embarrassed by the fact that they are in it and yet not of it.

THOSE LOST REPORTS.

Bro. Curry reported the loss last week. They ought to be found. Perhaps they have been. Will the finders report to the Herald, that the discovery may be announced next week? In case they are not found, a minister, an ex-president of the Annual Conference, suggests that the chairmen of the committees concerned reproduce the reports and send to Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Burlington, N. C., that the Journal may be made complete.

—Be guided by reason rather than by custom.

—Rev. T. E. Davis has withdrawn from our Conference and joined the Eastern Conference of the M. E. Church, South. He has been assigned to Four Oaks Ct. in the Raleigh District

—We hope our Denton people will be encouraged in their forward movement by the sympathy and help of our people.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson and family spend the school-days of the week at Bro. Samuel Coe's, to be near South Buffalo School.

—Bro. J. F. Whitaker, of Pinnacle, was among those who attended the State S. S. Convention at Salisbury.

—A drunk man in Canada cursed the king of England. He was arrested, charged with sedition, the penalty of which is death. In court, the man claimed to be a loyal citizen, and charged his seditious utterances to the whiskey sold in a governmen-licensed barroom. This plea saved his neck.

—The Hobson amendment would not interfere with the use of fermented wine in the sacrament, but the churches ought to be sufficiently abreast of the times to avoid its use without any compelling law. Surely the churches ought to lead in abstinence from that which is harmful.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett passed through going to his new charge at Mebane.

—Mr. and Mrs. Campbell recently joined Grace Church. We expect to find them valuable additions to our body.

—Congress convened Monday, and will for months to come divide time with the European war in the attention of the American people. There will probably be a protracted debate over the appropriation for the war department. President Wilson is advocating great preparation for national defense. Others do not see the need and think it would be an imposition on the American people to tax them for such an object. This is a matter of grave concern, as it involves not only immense expense, but may involve us in war in the future. Let us pray that our statesmen may have wisdom.

—Christ was an advocate of preparedness. "Be ye always ready," said He. But he also said, "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."

—One hundred and seven saloons in Minnesota have been closed by law. It took a great fight to do it, but it has been done.

—A bill providing for prohibition in the District of Columbia has been introduced in both the House and the Senate. A resolution for a prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States has also been introduced.

THE HOBSON AMENDMENT.

Aritcle ——

" Section 1. The sale, manufacture for sale, transportation for sale, importation for sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes in the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof and exportation thereof are forever prohibited.

" 'Section 2. The Congress or the states shall have power independently or concurrently to enforce this article by all needful legislation.' "

—The Methodist Protestant Church at Powersville, North Missouri Conference, was dedicated November 14, 1915.

—Rev. J. D. Williams and family passed through Greensboro last Friday on their way to Winston.

—Bro. Taylor has recovered health and will soon enter upon the work of his new field, if he has not already done so.

—Bro. Curry and family went to Asheboro last week to spend a few days before starting on their transcontinental journey.

—Rev. G. L. Curry and family started to Seattle yesterday. They went by way of Asheville.

—Bro. J. Norman Wills is in Baltimore at a meeting of the Board of Missions.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn is to serve Murphy station this year.

—Capt. A. M. Rankin, High Point, N. C., is the Treasurer of the Children's Home. Money for the debt on the building should be sent to him.

—Greensboro's Chamber of Commerce is taking on new life.

—Mr. E. O. Way, an overseer in the Aurora Cotton Mills, caught his arm in a machine and sustained serious injury. Fortunately no bone was broken.

—Mrs. Hughes, of Randleman, is a patient in St. Leo Hospital.

—The National Democratic Convention next summer is to be held in St. Louis.

—The Burlington Dispatch gives favorable notice of the beginning of Bro. Pritchard's ministry in its town.

HERE'S THE PROOF.

In last week's article, reference was made to the two committees that are to carry, among other things, the plans of the great Laymen's Missionary Conventions to the churches of Pitsburgh and Baltimore and adjacent territory. The essential things are the Every Member Canvass and the Duplex envelope, as part of Missionary Education and Christian service. As repeatedly explained in this column, there are no special difficulties in making such a canvass, and when made the Duplex Envelope is adopted naturally, because necessary and efficient.

An increasing number of our churches, and very many in other denominations have adopted the plan and not one failure has been reported, but the general verdict is that for practical benefits of various kinds, apart from all financial considerations, it is the very best which has yet been proposed for adoption by the churches.

Its good results are not restricted to the cities, but churches in small towns, and even in the country have been most successful in its use, and are loud in its praise.

Some folks act as if they think other denominations and local churches can do some things but we cannot. Self-depreciation is creditable neither to ourselves nor to our heritage, and tends to hamper progress in all directions. We must be wise enough to use any good plan which promises to help us do God's will and work better, in a larger way, and with greater results. The past proves that we have not measured up to the demands upon us, nor to the limit of our ability.

Here is proof of what our people can do, and also strong testimony in favor of making an Every Member Canvass and using the Duplex envelopes for all collection purposes including pastor's salary, local expenses, and the assessments of the Annual and General Conferences.

Here's the Proof.

Report on assessments at the end of first six months of year 1914-1915, thirty-eight churches out of eighty-seven reporting:

Number of churches using Duplex Envelopes, 10; six months' assessments, $1,701.95; raised, $1,473.20; 80 per cent.

Number of churches using single envelopes, 15; six months' assessments, $1,582.85; raised, $346.00; 20 per cent.

Number of churches using no envelopes, 13; six months' assessments, $824.19; $143.50; 17 per cent.

Average offering per church using Duplex envelopes, $147.32; average deficit, $22.87.

Average offering per church using single envelopes, $34.60; average deficit, $83.12.

Average offering per church using no envelopes, $14.35; average deficit, $52.36.

In six months thirteen churches raised nothing for assessments; 18 churches contributed less than half the required amount; and seven, all using the Duplex system, gave the full amount.

Ten churches using Duplex envelopes contributed three times more in six months than twenty-eight churches with other systems.

Fourteen churches using the Every Member Canvass contributed in six months $1,683.50, whereas the other twenty-four churches, with no Every Member Canvass, contributed only $279.20.

These figures prove that the Budget Plan, plus the Every Member Canvass, plus the Duplex Envelope, forms the most efficient method of modern church finance.

From President J. C. Broomfield's Annual Report. Some of the strongest churches were in the larger groups. It is a fair average.

Brother Pastor, you can't afford, as a wide-awake, efficient worker, to do without this plan. I will gladly help you in any way.

It's Coming Fast.

Christmas, I mean. Amid all your kind thoughts and proposed remembrances to others, do not forget what Christ would have you do. Would He not be pleased if you gave something for the success of His Kingdom among the heathen?

Your Sunday school is asked again to make a Christmas offering for our Japan work. You want to share in that. I feel sure.

When you see that fine poster on the wall of your school, remember the blood-red cross means Christ died to save you, and to have you help Him save the world.

What are you going to do with this special appeal? The help of every one in every school is needed as never before.

BRO. PICKETT WRITES INTERESTINGLY OF HIS TRIP.

Thinking that some of the readers of your interesting paper might be interested in a sketch of our trip from High Point, N. C., to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego, California,—we left home November 2nd, spent the night in Asheville in order to have a daylight trip down the French Broad River of which the scenery is as good as any we have seen, though not as extensive.

After going through Tennessee and Kentucky we arrived in Cincinnati, Ohio. Across the street from the Union Station I saw the sign of John H. McGowan, Pump Manfacturing Company, and remembering that this was the firm that we used to buy machinery from and also who furnished the large pump for High Point City water works, and wishing to renew our acquaintance, I went over to see him. Mr. McGowan told me that in the past two years they had more orders than they could fill. Not for pumps altogether, but for tools and machinery for making war implements. I found business generally good in Cincinnati.

Next stop was in St. Louis, Missouri. This is a hustling city of 800,000 inhabitants. They claim to have one of the finest water systems in the country, which is eighteen miles out. Being interested in this we went out to the plant. The sand filtering bed covers five acres. The water is pumped from the Mississippi River through two pipes which are 8 feet in diameter each. When the water is pumped in it is very muddy in the sand filters, but after passing through, it all settles without any alum to clarify it. But when the water enters the well that supplies the city it is perfectly clear. The city has just installed a new pumping plant at a cost of $2,500,000. The bonded debt for the water works and sewerage of St. Louis is $31,000,000.

We next visited the Henry Shaw Garden. This garden contains 125 acres and has 11,000 different shrubs and plants from all parts of the world. It requires 60 gardeners the year around to keep it up who are governed by a Board of Trustees, who all have nice homes on the grounds. This garden was donated to the city by Henry Shaw, an old bachelor who made his money in merchadise, real estate, banking, etc. The garden was endowed by Henry Shaw. Can't say too much in praise of this garden; it was perfectly beautiful. Wish some of our bachelors could come and see it and do likewise for our city.

After leaving St. Louis we passed through other interesting places in Missouri. Next we arrived in Kansas City, which has one of the finest Union Stations in the West. It cost $7,500,000. In this station there is a barber shop about the size of Jess Edmonson's that rents for $4,000 per year. The city is beautiful, population near 400,000; hundreds of miles paved streets; residence section upon a mountain, the business in the valley and opposite hill. We went out to the Methodist Protestant University in this city. This property was given by another old bachelor and others, among them Heinz, the "57 Variety" pickle man.

We met President Stevens, who showed us over the city after taking dinner with him. I have interviewed several business men and bankers and all report business good. Banks claim to have plenty of money to loan at 6 per cent. This city is the distributing point for High Point Furniture that goes to the States of Colorado, Nebraska and Montana and other Western States. After leaving Kansas City our next stop was Colorado Springs, Colorado. The section from Kansas City to Colorado Springs was mostly cattle ranches and prairies where they do not count land by the acre, but by the hundreds of acres. We passed by five ranches each of 25,000 acres with 30,000 head of cattle. The population of Colorado Springs is about 40,000 and under the shadow of Pike's Peak 14,000 feet or more high, which was all covered with snow. There is more wonderful scenery, in greater variety and easier of access in Colorado Springs and Manitou region than in any other equal area on the American Continent. The Colorado Springs in Manitou are noted for their mineral properties. At this place you will find the Cave of the Winds which is wonderful. This is well lighted by electricity. There are different rooms in this cave, one of which is called the "Old Maids' Chamber" and every one that visits there is requested to leave a hair pin and they will not pass another year in single blessedness. It is said there are thousands of hair pins left in the room.

Another one of Nature's Beauty Spots is Seven Falls and South Cheyenne Canyon. This is reached by carriage or auto. Up the canyon we find the seven falls flowing down the rocks from the mountain 14,000 feet into the canyon below. Climbing the stairway to the top of Seven Falls, there the canyon opens into a beautiful valley with numerous waterfalls. This enables us to view the scenery from above, especially Inspiration Point, just beyond the grave of Helen Hunt Jackson, author of Ramona.

Next visit was to Cripple Creek Gold Mines. I have never seen such a railroad, either for steepness or sinuosity. The train crawls slowly along ledges cut into the mountain sides, burrowing through an obstruction, creeping from one mountain to another, slipping out upon a sky-high terrace commanding a view of hundreds of square miles. Now after we cross these mountains we reach the Cripple Creek Gold Mines which are said to produce one-third of the gold in the United States. The mines were opened in 1901 and since that time have produced $350,000,000 and in October, 1915, they produced $1,500,000. The mines were discovered by a mountaineer who had never possessed any wealth. He sold the property to a syndicate for eleven million dollars. He died a year ago. Being a bachelor and having no relatives, he gave 2,500 acres of land and built a home on this land for all aged ladies and orphan children and endowed the same. Another example for our wealthy bachelors.

Glenwood Hot Springs, after going up the Rio Grande River for several hours, was our next stop. These springs are said to be 30 times stronger than the Hot Springs of Arkansas. Elevation of this place 6,000 or 7,000 feet. This is the home of Congressman Taylor. I called on him and had an interview with him on war preparedness. He seems to think we need some, but not so extensive. He showed me a letter which he had just received from our Congressman Kitchen. It is not necessary to say what this letter contains, for you all know how he stands on this.

After traveling 400 or 500 miles through mountains of Colorado and deserts of Utah, we reached Salt Lake City, one of the best planned and laid-off cities we have come through. The blocks are all 600 feet square, all streets running directly north and south, and east and west. Streets are all paved several miles in all directions. The Mormons claim they are 65 per cent. of the inhabitants, also claim their income to the church is $1,500,000 a year. Mining seems to be the leading industry and the copper mines seem to be prosperous at this time, as they are getting good prices for their copper. Business men claim business is about normal. We saw Brigham Young's grave in the plot of ground beside his old church. Two wives were buried by him. After this the town passed an ordinance that there should be no others buried there, so 17 others of his wives were laid to rest elsewhere. A great many tourists visit this place, all anxious to visit the Mormon Tabernacle which contains the largest organ in the country. It has 101 stops and five thousand pipes, ranging from ¼ of an inch to 32 feet. The organ cost to date $135,000. There are 500 voices in the choir. The illiteracy of Utah is only 2.5 percent. Eighty-six per cent. of the State tax revenue is used for educational purposes.

In coming out of Salt Lake City we crossed the Great Salt Lake of which the average length is 75 miles and the width 50 miles. The bridge we crossed was 30 miles long. After leaving Salt Lake City we had a run of about 800 miles across the Sierra Nevada Mountains and part of the fruit growing section of California. The Sierra Nevada is the most majestic mountain range in the United States, covering a length of 600 miles, with a breadth of 75 to 100 miles, and has long and gradual slopes on the west side cut by deep canyons. Mt. Whitney of this range is the highest peak this side of Alaska, rising 14,898 feet above sea level. In crossing the mountains we climbed around and up, having three large engines to pull us up. We traveled through forty miles of snow sheds which are made very substantial, the main post being 12 by 12 inches, the joist same size of the studding 6 by 10 inches, two feet apart and covered with two inch plank, and has a double track so trains can pass each other. The estimated cost of this shed per mile is $50,000. Between the summit and the highest point on the trip you can look down on Donner Lake which is three miles long and one-half mile wide and 200 feet deep. A melancholy interest in attached to Donner Lake by remembrance of the terrible fate of the Donner party, 34 of whom perished by starvation on the Donner shore. Where we crossed this mountain the snow was 22 inches deep. A party that came over with us said it was not uncommon to have snow from four to fourteen feet deep.

After crossing the mountains we came to the fruit growing valley of California noted for fine peaches. There are orchards for miles and miles on each side of the railroad. Then passing through Sacramento City, the capitol of California, of about 50,000 inhabitants and a very nice city—has many hotels and plenty of politicians. Then we arrived at San Francisco Bay. Our train consisted of eleven coaches all going into a ferry boat with five tracks in the boat. The Bay is six miles wide and the boat is said to be one of the largest in the world.

We landed at Tower of Welcome. There were thousands of electric lights glittering from bottom to top. Just to the left of this tower there is a flash light of 57 which represents Heinz's 57 varieties. We spent 8 days in San Francisco and four in San Diego expositions, of which I may write later.

You may be curious to know what I think of California. I am somewhat like the Western lady who was asked how she liked California. She replied, "I am not especially struck with the State. They do not raise anything but fruit and alpaca and have to irritate that." She meant alfalfa and irrigation. Had no rain since last April.

Yours truly,
W. P. Pickett.

OHIO AND THE DRY CLEANER.

There is no rejoicing among the the wets in Ohio. There is no joy among the wets in the United States. All the brewers and distillers and saloonkeepers and the raft of hangers-on were taxed heavily to defeat state-wide prohibition by a greater majority than last year. Barrels of money flowed into the state from all over the United States because brewers and distillers everywhere knew that the back of the liquor traffic would be broken should Ohio go dry.

The wets initiated an amendment to the state constitution, called falsely the stability amendment. Their purpose was to tie the hands of Ohio so the state could not vote again on prohibition for six years; and this they called stability! Stability, indeed! William Jennings Bryan said that it was the stability of vice, and that only. What the wets wanted to secure was immunity from prosecution for six years, no matter what kind of wickedness or lawlessness the saloon should engage in.

But the so-called stability amendment was buried so deep that its father, the liquor traffic, has not been able to find it. It was a magnificent triumph. The wets denied that a paternity case could be laid at their door; but their assertion already that they intended to try the same amendment next year is a confession of their fatherhood. Their asserted purpose to attempt the same tactics another year is but to throw dust in the eyes of the forces of righteousness.

But the prohibition vote was an overwhelming disappointment to the wets. The figures are not available at this writing, but the majority of last year, a little more than four thousand, was cut practically in two. If Cincinnati were eliminated, the state would be dry. Yet, even in Cincinnati, the drys made tremendous gains. Either there is a changing sentiment in this city, or the wet losses represented frauds of last year. Cleveland, Toledo, Dayton made great dry gains. Practically the whole countryside came along with great gains for the prohibition cause. Last year, seventy counties of the eighty-eight voted dry. This year, seventy-four of the eighty-eight voted dry. The greatest dry gains were made in counties made wet last year by the votes in Cincinnati and Cleveland. They did not seem to like home-rule saloons.

There is confusion and distress on the wet side. All is hope and anticipation on the dry side. The liquor men and top-rail politicians agree that liquordom was dealt a fearful blow. They agree, too, that the end is not far off. The drys are in hearty accord with this sentiment. They believe one more contest will put the state on the right side. The organization of the drys was good. In practically every city this organization will be maintained. We expect another contest in 1916, although that has not been decided. Certainly, the liquor forces will not welcome another test of strength. But the drys, as well as the wets, regard the overwhelming defeat of the stability amendment and the division in two of the wet majority of a year ago as a dry victory of immense significance.

Nearly every precinct in Dayton and Montgomery County told the same story of dry net gains. A few went backward owing to the class of people moving in. Dayton View, where a good many United Brethren have found it convenient to live went wetter, but not because they were there. The village of Oakwood, which joins up to Dayton, went wet ninety-two to sixty-two, and in this village some brewers live. A large part of the development in that community is from the estates of brewers. Notwithstanding this, the deeds to lots from such estates contain a clause against the establishment of a saloon. You could not put a saloon in Oakwood for love or money. Sure not! They would not have it there. The wets want to move away, clear away, from the saloon and all its influences; but they will go to the polls and vote wet, and inflict a curse upon the rest of the state from which they keep themselves free. If that is not hypocrisy double-dyed, steel-riveted, unalloyed, and unspotted, we would like to see a case of it.

Ohio needs more newspapers which will champion the cause of moral progress. It is rather wearisome to read heavy articles on the tint of autumn leaves and high-class community dances when one of the greatest of moral questions is before the electors. Dayton has three English daily papers, but not one of them, except through news items and paid advertising, supported the great moral issue. We know many connected with the papers, and esteem them highly as men; but a city of a hundred and twenty-five thousand people, which casts almost as many dry votes as wet ones, needs something in the newspaper line more positive than neutrality. This city must have a paper to champion the dry cause in 1916 if the saloon is made the defendant in another trial. With the handwriting on the wall, why should not every good paper in the state come out boldly on the side of right?

The gloomiest set of men on earth are the liquor men of Ohio. They have been taxed pretty nearly to death to keep up the battle. They have to pay for everything that they get. The drys can do six times as much work with the same money as the wets can because the drys work from principle, the wets from the sense of financial desire. The distillers are being assessed to death by the whiskey trust for money to fight prohibition. The saloonkeepers are in the same rank. They can not continue much longer, thank the Lord!—Religious Telescope.

BE EXAMINED.

"Be examined" is a new and popular health suggestion adopted especially for Tuberculosis Week this year. December 8th has been set apart as the particular day which physicians and people should give to this important health principle.

The plan adopted for observing this national medical examination day is a practical one. It does not suppose that a large number of people, not all who would, could be thoroughly examined in one day, but it does suppose that public interest can be so aroused as to set people to thinking seriously about the matter and finally to arrange for a medical examination at the convenience of their physician and themselves.

It has been suggested that institutions, schools, communities and factories observe this day by holding mass meetings or with special exercises in order that the full purpose and importance of the movement may be made known to their people. Another suggestion is that special arrangements be made beforehand with physicians to make examinations on this day, free of charge, for those unable to pay. In Michigan recently, at the request of the Governor, nearly 500 physicians participated in Tuberculosis Day, making a large number of examinations of Tuberculosis patients, free of charge.

This physical inventory is advocated by modern health workers as being as necessary to the business of warding off disease and keeping well as is taking stock in any other line of business. That insidious diseases can be detected in their approach and can be warded off is not a new and impractical theory. It is now regarded as the most efficient and at the same time the most intelligent means of fighting disease and prolonging life.—State Board of Health.

wanted to be a Christian. Her husband a heathen man working in Johannesburg, has at last consented that she "stand up in the church" on condition that it shall not prevent him from taking other wives We urged her to pray and we are praying also that he too may be converted and give up his polygamous ideas. Here we slept on the tables and benches of the little schoolhouse. The next night we had native mats on the earth floor of a humble Christian home. Here after an earnest conversation we left a card with the thoughtful, well-dressed young man who served us deliciously cooked chicken, and three days later he brought it signed to the service at Esidumbini. We count him one of the choicest fruits of the trip.

It was there at Ehlanzeni that we got our first sight of the Nazarethites, the new sect founded by a Zulu Dowie. In fact, the founder, Shembe, began his career as a Dowieite in Johannesburg. He has three wives, or had till one left him. He makes use of all the outward ceremonials, such as public immersion, foot-washing, etc. He and his followers have adopted a distinctive dress, a white robe and turban. He is said to diagnose the sins of his people by feeling the pulse in their legs at his foot-washings. After a recent "retreat" among the hills he is said to have returned with a great sheet which came down from heaven. This he throws over a group of people, and when he prays for them their diseases vanish with the removal of the sheet. The "Ark of the Testimony" is another reputed article of his equipment This "Ark" seems to have its gold inside instead of out, and its contents are said to possess some of the reproductive qualities of Aaron's rod that budded. Inquiries as to the Ark's contents are not encouraged. If native stories are to be believed, this prophet is no longer permitted to touch his feet to the water in crossing a stream, and a heap of cushions is ready for him whenever he would sit. down. With his paraphernalia and a judicious liberality in church discipline, he leads captive a goodly number of silly women and of those who find an ardor for baptism by immersion a pleasant substitute for harsh doctrines of total abstinence and stern morality.

A heathen crowd comes upon us as we are off-saddled by a little stream; and selecting a few slides, such as Hoffman's Head of the Master, Tissot's Scourging, and a striking view of the crucifixion, we manage by holding them up to the light to leave an appealing picture in the mind to clinch our little message. At such a time I wouldn't swap my knowledge of the Zulu tongue for a whole alphabet of learned letters and Latin abbreviations after my name.

At Umsunduze the only "undressed" woman in the room, with her little heathen boy, came up after the pictures and said: "I was afraid to stand up, the only undressed person among all these amakolwa, but I have seen with my eyes that Jesus suffered and died for me, and I want one of those cords and my little boy wants one too." They got them.

We must not pass by Umngeni, where Rev. Jwili Gumede's spirit lives on in a church which has built his young successor one of the best pastor's houses in our field. Our three weeks' tramp ends at Inanda. We have walked 115 miles, held thirty-three different services, showed the pictures eleven times, seen 114 young people line up on the side of Christ, and been close to the throbbing heart of the Zulu people A holiday to invigorate body, mind, and spirit.—Rev. Jas. D. Taylor, in Missionary Herald.

"WHAT WOULD JESUS DO?"

Of what use are Christian Sunday schools in Moslem Lands? A striking answer is given in a little incident related by an eye-witness to Mrs. Finney, one of the American missionaries in Alexandria.

An Australian soldier, who had been in the cafes and drink shops, was sauntering down the street when he was laid hold of by two gay and profligate women, one on each arm. Each was coaxing him. At that moment a bright Egyptian lad was coming from the opposite direction, and the soldier in an offhand way called out to him, "Boy, which one shall I go with?" The lad stopped a moment and then, looking straight up into his face, replied in clear, simple English, "What would Jesus do?" The soldier was so taken aback and so deeply touched that he flung himself loose, and running down the street disappeared from view.

The liquor manufacturers of the United States, having the output of their stills curtailed by the rapid growth of prohibition sentiment throughout the states, are seeking markets elsewhere. Africa, that has long been a good market for the rum traffickers, is now being flooded with spirituous liquors, acording to recent reports. A Boston paper commenting on this business, says,—"The business seems to be growing. Before we throw any more stones at England for her forcing of opium on China, we may well reflect on what the United States is doing by fortnightly shipments of rum to Africa."

Christian and United States flags with diretions for saluting, may be obtained at very reasonable prices from any mission board or Sunday school board, or by writing to the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. The saluting exercises give just the atmosphere of discipline and wide-awakeness so sorely needed in many a modern Sunday school.

THE CHRISTMAS PROBLEM SOLVED FOR CHURCHES.

This is the time of year when Sunday school and church committees from Maine to California are struggling with the annual question of a suitable Christmas program. As always, the aim is to find something which will be novel and at the same time easy to prepare without running up a large expense bill.

A program suggested in The Christmas Spirit combines all of these advantages. It consists of a series of the world's greatest paintings thrown by the stereopticon on a screen fringed with evergreen, so that the pitcture appears in a frame. Appropriate Bible readings, recitations, and carols develop the Christmas story. Room decorations may be largely dispensed with.

The Christmas Spirit may be obtained by Sending to the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. Twenty-three hand-colored slides are required for the exercise. These are not rented, but are sold. The price is $11.50 for the complete series. The slides are suitable for a permanent collection. Orders should be sent in early to the address given above.

This plan may be elaborated for the community Christmas celebrations which are becoming so popular. This, for example, was done last year in Asheville N. C., with signal success.

About every progressive church owns a stereopticon—and uses it. Where a lantern has not yet been installed, there could be no more appropriate time to put one in than at the Christmas season, making this exercise the occasion of its first public use. The Missionary Education Movement advises prospective lantern buyers without placing them under any obligation.

—The Southern Presbyterian Church has in Brazil thirty-five missionaries, eighty-eight preaching places, 3,252 Church members, and 4,355 adherents. Native contributions last year amounted to $11,142.

—Press dispatches announce that Dr. John Henry Jowett, of New York City, will be invited to succeed Dr. Reginald J. Campbell at City Temple, London.

IN MEMORIAM.

On Wednesday, Dec. 1, death visited the home of Bro. Hiram Baldwin and claimed Sister Sarah Jane Ussery. She was born June 16, 1850. She was the mother of twelve children, seven of whom proceeded her to the glory world. The five remaining reside in Rockingham; namely, Bro. W. T. Ussery, Sister Ida Solomon, and Sister Daisy Norton (those three are lively members of the Pee Dee M. P. church), Sister Roxie Baldwin, who is a member of the Presbyterian church, and Bro. Armon Ussery, who is a noble young man. Bro. W. T. Ussery is one of our best members. He was converted in a prayer-meeting service about twelve months ago and has lived a consecrated life ever since. Sister Ussery was converted at the age of fifteen years, and her children can testify that she has lived a consecrated life ever since. In the year 1914 Sister Ussery united with Pee Dee M. P. church to which she has been a faithful member ever since. She will be missed at the church services, and especially will she be missed in the Sunday school. She loved the Sunday school, and was always present when able. She was at Sunday school on Sunday morning before she died. She was sick only about two days and death came unexpectedly to us all. She will be missed in her home and in the community. She was one of God's saints. She believed in visiting the sick and speaking words of comfort and cheer to those who were down-hearted and in trouble in any way. The writer has been comforted many times in dark hours by the smiling face of Sister Ussery. She came to see me in my sickness just a few days before her death, and I always loved to see her come because she loved to talk about Jesus and his love. The doctor said heart failure was the cause of her death, but the writer believes that Sister Ussery had fought her battles and had finished the work that God had assigned her to do, and God came and took her home. Our loss is her eternal gain. As I lie on my bed of suffering and let my mind wander back to the many times that I have heard Sister Ussery in cottage prayer meetings testify to what God had done for her and review her life in this community and her earnest, zealous work for the salvation of souls and know that she is no longer with us, there is a song that seems to ring in my heart,

"Beautiful hands at the gateway tonight;
Faces all shining with radiant light;
Eyes looking down from yon heavenly home;
Beautiful hands! they are beckoning,
'Come!'

"Beautiful hands of a mother whose love
Sacrificed life her devotion to prove;
Hands of a brother or sister or friend,
Out from the gate-way to-night they extend."

There is no doubt in my mind, while Sister Ussery's dear children and the community in which she lived are mourning with deep sorrow over our loss, that she is standing tonight at tthe beautiful gates of gold waiting and watching for her children to come home. No doubt if we could hear her voice, she would tell us to cease our mourning for her and to live right and meet her in heaven. Oh what a happy time there will be in heaven when we all meet there. I have been in many family reunions in this world where the gray-haired grand-father and grandmother would send out invitations to all of their children's children to come and spend one holiday with them and there would be a large gathering and what a happy time they would have. But these reunions are nothing to be compared with the grand reunion that shall take place in heaven when our heavenly Father has gathered all of his dear children around his great white throne when there will be no more sorrow, sickness nor death, and thanks be to God he has said he would wipe all tears from our eyes.

The funeral service was conducted by her ex-pastor, Bro. J. F. Allred, whom she loved very dearly, after which the body was laid to rest in the Scotch graveyard to await the resurrection morn. May God's richest blessings rest upon the bereaved family, and may they live such lives that when God calls them home they may meet mother in heaven.

Sister Ussery has left an influence in this community which will never die. In Revelation 4: 15, we read these words: And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth, yea, saith the Spirit they shall rest from their labor and their works do follow them. While Sister Ussery lies mouldering in the dust her life and influence are with us still and her works will go on and on.

By one who loved her,
John Jenkins.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

MARRIED.

J. W. Redding and Miss Atha Julian were married at the Randleman personage last Thursday night at 7:30, Rev. J. B. O'Briant officiating. Both are of Millboro. He is a very industrious young farmer, and had his home all ready to receive the bride. Mrs. Redding is a member of our church at Bethany where she has been organist for some time.

DIED.

Morris.

Mrs. Alice Pepper Morris, the subject of this brief sketch, was converted and joined Hawkins' Chapel Methodist Protestant church during pastorate of Rev. H. L. Powell, 1903. She lived a bright, consistent Christian life until death claimed her in St. Vincent's Hospital, Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 13, 1915.

Sister Morris was sick but a few days, she was taken to the hospital for treatment but even the skill of man could do nothing to stay the White Horse and his Rider. As she stood before me last January and became the happy bride of Bro. Bernard Morris, I thought she was the most complete picture of health I had ever seen. But alas, it all faded and she fell before the sickle.

In her death, mother loses an obedient child, a husband an affectionate wife, the community a good woman and the church a loyal member.

The funeral was conducted in Corinth church by the writer on Oct. 14, and her remains were laid to rest in the churchyard, witnessed by a large number of heart-broken relatives and friends.

—The American Bible Society is in immediate need of $150,000 in special gifts from Churches and individuals if it is not to come to its centennial next spring with its reserve funds exhausted. For its great work the Society must depend principally upon the donations of individuals and Churches, since its endowment funds yield an income of only $75,000 annually. This amount would not carry on its work for more than two months.

PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

GREAT PRIZE FOR SOME PASTOR.

Last year through the kindness of a friend of our pastors and of the Herald we were able to offer a prize of valuable books, which was won by Rev. J. B. O'Briant.

This year the same good brother comes forward with a set of books that will astonish. It is nothing less than the Encyclopedia Britannica, in thirty-one large volumes. The books are apparently new, only a little shelf-worn. While this is not the latest edition of the Britannica (which costs up toward $200), it is a recent edition (the New Werner, or Twentieth Century Edition), printed in 1903.

The great majority of its articles are up to date, being in substance largely identical with those in the newest edition.

The editor of the Herald has a similar set not so good as this for which he would not accept $50.00.

This magnificent prize cannot appropriately be divided, and will therefore be given to one of our pastors of the N. C. Conference. Which one we cannot determine until March 1st next, and we will then have to have the help of pastors themselves to ascertain one of the grounds of the award.

There will be two grounds: First, the amount of money collected and sent in for the Herald from the adjournment of Conference to March 1, 1916. This we can ascertain from our books. The other ground will be the percentage of families on the charge taking the Herald (subscription paid in advance), counting only annual subscriptions. These two numbers will be multiplied together, and the largest product will take the prize.

Renewals will count as well as new subscriptions provided they are for a year.

You can see that it will not necessarily be the best field numerically that will win. For instance, Circuit A might yield $40.00 from 50 per cent. of its families, while Circuit B might yield $30.00 from 70 per cent. of its families. The product in the former case would be 2,000; in the latter, 2,100.

We hope all of our pastors will compete for this valuable prize, and thus help the Herald, their people, and themselves.

—Don't let the rampant wickedness of men shake your faith in the goodness of God. Prevailing wickedness is not an indication of God's indifference but it is an evidence of His goodness and longsuffering. He is not willing that any should perish, and He spares men in the hope of bringing them to repentance and to life. If men despise the goodness and forbearance of God, and harden themselves in sin, they are acting with mad recklessness. "He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

Bro. C. Tarkinton, of the Soldiers' Home in Raleigh, writes regarding the Edenton church. He is in favor of selling it since it cannot be used. Bro. Tarkinton made large sacrifice to build this church, and those having the property now in hand may find Bro. Tarkinton a helper or adviser in disposing of it.

Bro. G. B. Taylor, of Ware Shoals, S. C., writes approvingly of the plan adopted to liquidate the debt on the Children's Home, and shows his approval by enclosing one dollar, 50c for himself and 50c for "the other fellow." We thank Bro. Taylor, and will forward his remittance to Capt. A. M. Rankin, High Point, N. C., to whom money should be sent if contributed to pay the debt on the Children's Home.

Last issue when we asked whose death we would be called upon to record next time, we did not expect such a flood of death notices as we have received. Death is busy in the world, among our people as well as others. But when death comes naturally, in the providence of God, it is not so painful and shocking a thing as when it comes through the wickedness or thoughtlessness of men. In Europe, wickedness is slaying millions, and in our own country thousands are hurrying to premature praves through the thoughtless indulgence in harmful substances, such as alcohol, tobacco, and various forms of dope. How can men so disregard the sacredness of life! How can a Christian, whose body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, consent to defile that temple throu' some vile indulgence?

—The past week has brought on the death of three men of prominence. The governor of Minnesota dropped dead. Justice Lamar, of the United States Supreme Court, died after an illness thought to have been brought on by overwork. Our consul to Aden, Turkey, Mr. McNeeley, of Monroe, N. C., is believed to have lost his life in the sinking of the British ship Persia in the Mediterranean Sea. Other Americans lost their lives at the same time, and there is more trouble for our government growing out of the European war.

NOTICES.

Those wishing extra copies of the Conference Journal can get them at the price of 10 cents a copy by notifying me. Only about fifty charges raised a Journal fund and it is to be expected that the others will want journals.

Any church wishing to entertain the Young People's Convention to be held either in March or April will please notify me just as early as possible.

To those taking the Conference course will say that Conference this year substituted System of Christian Doctrine by Henry C. Sheldon for Miley's Systematic Theology. The motion prevailed that those who had taken the first volume of Miley be allowed to take the second in case they preferred to do so. But those wishing to take Sheldon in place of second volume of Miley will begin at the very middle of the book and they will cover practically the same subjects as Miley discusses. Rev. J. D. Williams to examine in the first half and I am to examine in the second.

CHURCH INSURANCE.

In my few years' experience as a pastor I find a great deal of carelessness manifest concerning church insurance. I say carelessness, for in most cases this is what it is. Many of the church members carry life insurance on themselves and fire insurance on their property, but neglect the church. There are other cases in which some church members try to appear superstitious (to keep from paying a few cents extra each year) and say "the church belongs to the Lord, He must take care of that." These same people claim to have dedicated themselves to the Lord. yet they eat, drink, wear clothes and do the best they know how to protect themselves from disease and death. Why not leave that to the Lord and save unnecessary exertion? It is true we must buy some natural protection, but the Lord is good enough to bless us with the means to buy it, and requires us to use the means at hand. Our church buildings are material and all material things are subject to constructive and destructive changes. We can by given means prolong or shorten or protect the life of material things and God holds us responsible for the destruction or loss that we could have prevented and did not.

Again when we put money into a bank we are insured, and when we contribute to any benevolent cause we like to know that it is well placed and not carelessly "put into a bag with holes in it." To insure church property is business economy, and we need to get busy and have all our church property insured that is worth insuring, for it is the only safe thing to do. Then, too, it will give to those who contribute to the church some assurance that their money is safely placed.

TO PASTORS AND C. E. SOCIETIES.

Christian Endeavor Week will be observed from February 6-13. The first Sunday in February has been celebrated as Christian Endeavor Day for some time. The last two years some churches and societies have extended the anniversary of the founding of Christian Endeavor into a week's celebration, known as Christian Endeavor Week.

The United Society has outlined the following suggestions for this week's observance: Sunday, February 6, Christian Endeavor Day. The United Society has issued a complete program for this day together with Decision Day. It is a program for these two Sundays gotten out by that stalwart C. E. leader, Dan Poling, entitled "Capitalists for God." Monday, February 7, Enlistment Day. The purpose of this day is to secure new members of the society. Tuesday, February 8, Local Union Day. This is the day for community fellowship in Christian Endeavor. February 9, Wednesday, Church Loyalty Day. It is intended to stimulate attendance at the mid-week prayer-meeting of the church. Thursday, February 10, Entertainment Day. This is an evening for fellowship in social pleasure and instructive entertainment. Friday, February 11, Extension Day. The day for organizing new societies where needed; Junior, Intermediate, Senior. Saturday, February 12, Junior and Intermediate Day. This is the day set apart especially for the Juniors and Intermediates to show their colors, and their loyalty and interest in their society. Sunday, February 13, Decision Day. A Day for urging decision for Christ and the taking of an open stand to live the Christian life.

If you cannot observe Christian Endeavor Week do not fail to plan to celebrate Christian Endeavor Day, February 6. There is especial reason for the observance of this day this year. We are in the beginning of one of the greatest campaigns Christian Endeavor has ever undertaken. This is an auspicious time for giving this new effort an impetus. If you have not yet put your society into touch with the new "Increase and Efficiency" movement, this is the meeting to articulate your society with this two years crusade.

The Board of Young People's Work is planning to make some further suggestions to our societies through some literature which we hope to place in the pastors' hands very soon for their Christian Endeavor societies. There will be a suggested program in this for Christian Endeavor Day especially adapted to Methodist Protestants for those who prefer to use this instead of the United Society program.

NOTICE TO THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Bro. Cecil has, at my request, made another assignment of the charges that each member of the Finance Committee will look after. This was done to get the charges as convenient as possible to some of us. I am sure that much of the work will of necessity be done by correspondence, but we hope to visit some of the fields, and be present with them at a quarterly conference, revival meeting, or a financial meeting.

Let us see if we understand the plan. Each member of the Finance Committee is expected to be especially interested in the charges assigned to him, and do all he can to increase pastor's salary—where an increase is needed—and make it possible to collect every cent of every assessment. He is to co-operate with the pastor and official members of the different charges assigned to him so that we may have the very best financial system possible, and then see that the system is worked.

Brethren of the Finance Committee, let us do our best, and then tell of our progress through the Herald. Write on any phase of finance that appeals to you. Brethren of the Ministry, we do not wish to trouble or vex you, but our aim is to help you. Brethren of the laity, we do not want to impose a hardship upon you, but we wish to help you to do your duty. I want to visit a number of the charges assigned to me at some time during the year, and I hope that other members of the Committee can do the same so that we can have a friendly talk with the people about the finances of their charge. If the assessments are too high, we want to reduce them, and if they are too low, we want to increase them and you will want us to do so when you think seriously about our mission as a Church.

The assignment of charges is:

Creswell, Roanoke, Littleton, Halifax, Spring Church, Greenville, Henderson, Granville, and Vance. R. A. Swaringen.

Mebane, Graham and Haw River, Alamance, Fairview, Greensboro, St. Paul, Haw River, Mt. Pleasant, Guilford, and Orange. R. H. Brooks.

Siler City, Randolph, Randleman, Richland, Asheboro, Uwharrie, Davidson, Denton, and Tabernacle. L. L. Wrenn.

High Point, Welch Memorial, Oak Ridge, Flat Rock, Piedmont, Thomasville, Yadkin College, and Winston. R. C. Stubbins.

Forsythe, West Forsythe, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion, Mocksville, Stanley, Midland, Rockingham, Pageland, and Mecklenburg. S. S. Coe.

Charlotte, Anderson, Yarboro, Gaston, Shelby, Falston, Cleveland, Lenoir, and Lincoln. L. F. Ross.

Asheville, Buncombe, Pensacola, Burlington, Concord, Mt. Hermon, Reidsville, Saxapahaw, and Why Not. C. A. Cecil.

R. A. Swaringen.

Vandyke.—On Dec. 26, 1915, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Vandyke and took from them their little infant daughter Elizabeth, aged three mos. and four days. Weep not, dear parents. She budded on earth to bloom in Heaven and no doubt she will be the guiding star to lead you home. Funeral services at Rehoboth conducted by the pastor.

D. R. Williams.

THE CONFERENCE JOURNAL.

We were promised the Journal in two weeks from the time Conference closed. It has now been nearly six weeks, and they have not come yet. I know that several of the reports were lost, but it seems rather careless on the part of some one that they should get lost when we had three copies of each report. But suppose that no one is to blame for those reports being lost, and granting that some of those reports might be read by a very few people if they appear in the Journal, would it not have been better to have printed it without those reports. This circuit is entitled to 60 copies, and I think that we would have needed that many had they come to us on time, but when Conference has been over nearly two months before I can offer them to any of my members, they are well nigh worthless to us.

I don't see how the brethren can make their apportionments of general interests when they do not have the Journal to see their assessment. We lose much by not getting started early in the year. About one eighth of the conference year has passed now, and we ought to have in hand one eighth of pastor's salary and general interests, and yet many do not know the amount of general interests that they are assessed. The Finance Committee was most anxious that their report, which was almost unanimously adopted by the Annual Conference, be presented at the first quarterly conferences. Many of these have been held, and many others probably will be held before the different pastors and official members see our report. Did those quarterly conferences know that the Conference asked that the minimum salary for a single man be $600, and the minimum salary for a married man be $800, and that the Conference "insists that we use the budget plan," and that the assessments be paid monthly? I fear that our charges have not this information, and I fear that some of our ministers who had to move have not received enough to pay freight charges. And even those ministers who did not have to move may be "running a time bill." You went home from Conference "strapped", didn't you? And some of you have not received enough money since to pay for a bag of flour. I am not writing from experience, for these people begin to pay as soon as their minister gets home from Conference, but I know that all charges do not do that. I have seen ministers living in towns with not enough fuel to warm their families, and with not enough bread to satisfy the appetite. If people knew!

Let us have the Journals on time next year, even if some of the reports are lost. But let us not lose those reports!

Henderson.—Bro. Taylor preached yesterday on "Four Looks", backward, inward, forward, and upward. A very appropriate and seasonable sermon. We will try to wear it in our minds. Our Christmas services and the sermon were also appropriate, beautiful, well attended and much enjoyed.

Our mails have been flooded with Christmas and New Year greetings and good wishes from friends far and near. I sent a card four years ago which made a good impression upon me. I believe I sent it to the Herald. I will ask you to print it again that your readers may see if they remember it or were benefited by it. I am sure I was and I intend to try to practise it throughout 1916 and to make it the rule of my life. Here it is:

"I will study the language of gentleness and refuse to use words that bite and tones that crush.

"I will practice patience at home lest my testy temper break through unexpectedly and disgrace me.

"I will remember that my neighbors have troubles enough to carry without loading mine on them.

"I will excuse others' faults and failures as often and fully as I expect others to be lenient with mine.

"I will cure criticism with commendation, close up against gossip and build healthy loves by service.

"I will be a friend under trying tests and wear everywhere a good-will face unchilled by aloofness.

"I will gloat over gains never, but amass only to enrich others and so gain a wealthy heart.

"I will love boys and girls, so that old age will not find me stiff and soured.

"I will gladden my nature by smiling out loud on every fair occasion and by outlooking optimistically.

"I will pray frequently, think good things, believe men and do a full day's work without fear or favor."

Here is a card I sent to friends this Christmas—I pass it along to others:

"Christmas, Nineteen-Fifteen.

"Full of thanks and appreciation to our Great Creator for all the blessings of this and other years; and to all who served Him in helping me, I stand at the milestone, awaiting with joy and expectation, opportunities to serve; sorry for those I have missed, glad for those I have used.

"Yours truly, T. T. Hicks."

I enclose still another that I found in a paper yesterday to make this New Year letter complete:

"To the New Year.

New Year,
Bar fear,
Tell woe
To go.

With might Hit spite,
With speed
Strike greed.

Nail high
Each lie,
Berate
All hate.

Please damn
Each sham.
Make quake
Each fake.

Deride
False pride.
Make Mars
See stars.

Then we'll
All feel Proud to Know you.

—Better be poor than wicked.

NOT TO BE FORGOTTEN.

In churches, Sunday schools and homes all over our land, one great historic event is now the central theme, lesson and thought of the people—the coming of Jesus into our world who is now the central figure of all history. The Jews, reared, safeguarded, and developed under God's rule, protection and blessing, hoped for His coming as evidenced in their faith, ceremonial and sacrifices.

He, and His completed work, superseded the Jewish priesthood and the old types, hitherto divinely sanctioned, and established His Kingdom as supreme, making possible, among other unpurchasable enrichments, our own civil and religious heritage.

We may well ask are we showing proper appreciation of all we possess and are we discharging our obligations to share, as we have ability, with all men throughout the world, as He would have us do?

And in the light of the conviction that we ourselves fall far short of the requirements, we ought to appreciate in fullest measure our relation to the church of the future.

Whether we will or not, we are shaping the course of those in our Sunday schools helping to mold their character, setting an example, inspiring ideals and purposes, raising up their standards, and so are determining very largely what the church hereafter will be and do. That is a grave responsibility as well as a great privilege and opportunity.

What are we doing, for example, to impart to the young the true idea of Christmas, to have instilled in them the true spirit of Christmas, to harmonize their thoughts and giving with God's purpose in giving Christ as the world's Saviour?

Only as we rightly teach and train the young to-day can we hope to have a more informed, responsive, working church to-morrow, and it behooves us to use our utmost endeavors now to discharge our imperative duty.

Our successful and extending Japan work calls for more money, but unfortunately the receipts from all sources in the denomination have not kept pace with the growing demands.

In the hope of securing the needed financial aid, we have sent out our usual Christmas appeal to the Sunday schools, and, to emphasize the meaning of Christmas, and to enlist the help of the young more largely, we have sent out a beautiful poster to each school whose superintendent's name and address is on our files. It is earnestly hoped that every school will make an offering. We wish it understood that the smallest offering from the weakest school will be helpful and greatly appreciated. The offering can be made on any Sunday desired near Christmas. We will publish in this column the names of the ten schools making the largest offering.

WHY NOT DO IT NOW?

In the last days of the year, many of our people, doubtless, are considering their financial interests.

To those contemplating investing money, I commend our Board's Annuity Plan by which, on giving a fixed sum to the Board for its Foreign Missionary work, you will be assured by the Board's Bond of a dependable income during your life. This plan will secure to you as much, if not more, interest than the usual investments you make. By giving your money to the Board now you help to safeguard and extend the work abroad, and prevent any delay, expense, contest—as is the case with so many wills—and will have the satisfaction of knowing that your money will be applied as you yourself desire. I will be glad to have you write to me to-day about the matter.

GRANDMA'S SAND SLATE.

"Just look, grandma," said Doris, "at this picture on the cover of my new tablet. It is a real beauty."

Grandma examined the new tablet and agreed with Doris that the picture was "a real beauty." "It seems to me," she said, "that boys and girls of to-day should find true pleasure in preparing their lessons. The books, tablets, pencils, and other things they use are all so very pretty. Why, Doris, when I was a little schoolgirl the only slate I had was a box of sand, and I never did have a pretty tablet."

"Tell me all about your sand slate, please, grandma," pleaded Doris, who was always eager to hear what grandma did when she was a little girl.

"Of course," said grandma, "a box of sand was not really a slate, but some way or other it came handy to call it a slate. Such a wee bit of a schoolhouse was ours," grandma went on. "And it was our church house, too. The greater number of the little folks that went to that school had neither real slates nor the money with which to buy them. Our school-master told us to bring to school with us long, narrow boxes well filled with sand, as he wished to teach us how to write and cipher. We children were much puzzled to know how our teacher intended to teach us to write and cipher by means of boxes of sand, but we obeyed him to the letter and came promptly with the sand. Then our schoolmaster with his knife fashioned us neat, sharp-pointed writing sticks, and set us copy, and we wrote it in the sand with our pointed writing sticks."

"Wait a minute, grandma!" chimed in Doris. "How did you erase your work?"

"The schoolmaster soon saw that we must have erasers for our sand slates, so he put on his thinking cap and invented little brushes with which to smooth the sand when we so desired. When we had advanced far enough to write sentences the schoolmaster again used his knife and made little rulers for us, to aid us in making straight lines across our sand slates. Then we wrote on the lines, and our work was quite neat. So it was, Doris, that I learned to write. I was almost a young woman before I owned a real slate and pencil. I well remember my first slate pencil. It was decorated about half-way down its length with gilt paper, and I thought it very beautiful indeed."

Doris picked up her new tablet and looked at it very thoughtfully. Then she slowly turned the leaves of her reader that was full of beautifully colored pictures. She slipped her arm about grandma's neck and said: "I am not going to be cross and fussy any more about going to school and getting my lessons. I am going to be more—more—more—help me say the word I want, please, grandma."

"Appreciative," suggested grandma.

"That's it I am going to be more appreciative."—The Visitor.

PROHIBITION MOVES ONWARD.

In a recent address at Seattle, Anna A. Gordon, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, addressed the first session of the 1915 convention and cited the victories of the last twenty months. In that time Russia has become prohibition territory, Germany, France and England have greatly restricted the use of liquors, the United States navy has banished alcohol, and it has been outlawed in the Panama Canal Zone and in the states of Virginia, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Arkansas, Idaho, Iowa, Alabama and South Carolina. The national internal revenue collections on distilled spirits have decreased at the rate of $1,250,000 a month in spite of new high taxes on wines and the emergency war tax.—Christian Herald.

PRESENTS THAT REALLY PLEASE.

It is curious how little initiative people have about Christmas gifts. Year after year the same sort of gifts are given and received between friends and acquaintances with comparatively little thought used or pleasure given on either side.

Of course this does not apply to one's immediate family. If your sister wants stockings for Christmas you do not give her a picture frame instead. One's family fortunately can ask for what they want.

But to our friends, whose immediate wishes we do not know, we are all too apt to give what may be called "customary" gifts—picture frames, "gift books" which no one reads, handkerchief cases, glove cases, veil cases, and all the other dozen and one cases which most people already have and seldom use. There are dozens of other articles of the same sort we all exchange shoals of each year.

This year, why not set your mind to work and see if you can not give every one something that would really please regardless of whether it is a "customary" gift or not.

Have you, for instance, a talent for making some especial kind of cake, candy, preserve, or pickle? Something that you can make better than your friend and that she can not buy? Wouldn't this be more acceptable to her than a glove case?

I know a young housekeeper who received last Christmas half a dozen jars of jams and marmalades from a friend in the country. It was the most welcome present the young housekeeper received, for she had not the facilities for making the preserves herself and they are much more expensive and not so good when you buy them, and yet—the friend apologized to her for such a "queer kind of a gift."

One of the most thoughtful givers I know is a splendid practical woman who owns a large farm. Each Christmas she sends to several young married people, friends of her daughter and of her own, who are keeping house in the city, a barrel of potatoes or vegetables, or apples from her farm—a gift to the young housewife worth a dozen or more of the usual customary gifts, and costing no more to the donor, who is in a position to spend money freely.

These two examples of thoughtful giving came, one from a woman with very little to spend, and the other from a well-to-do woman, but both of them gave pleasure far beyond the average gift.—Selected.

MOOSE JAW.

An interesting story is told as to the origin of the name "Moose Jaw," as applied to a town in Canada. Some fifty years ago, so the story runs, a pioneer with his team of oxen and "prairie schooner," while passing along the banks of the river, was obliged to camp at this point in Saskatchewan on account of an accident to his cart.

A spoke had fallen out during the day, and the wheel was falling apart. He looked about for something to insert for a temporary brace for the wheel, while his wife busied herself with the evening meal.

The pioneer's child, while romping around, found the jawbone of a moose, which she held up to her father, who by this time almost despaired of finding anything with which to repair his cart. He was delighted to find that the jawbone exactly fitted the place of the missing spoke. The Indians thereafter named this district "The Place Where the White Man Found the Moose Jaw." This, it is said, accounts for the town's queer name.—Washington Star.

ANNUS DOMINI.

The census year in marble palaced Rome,
When Caesar's image glittering on the gold
Was standard money in all marts;
When on all highways Roman chariots rolled;
Upon her legions' helmets rich the plumes;
Her eagles felt their pride of lordly birth:
This Rome was she who sent her orders forth:
"Enroll as mine all peoples of the earth."

Then high-born names, smooth sounding, noble names
The stylus listed as the worthy men,
A general here whose fame was battle won,
And there a senator to kings akin.
To little city Bethlehem came throngs
All day; and late came two midst twilight gloom,
Young Joseph journeying gently with the fair,
Good Mary, and in the inn they found no room.

The night of child-birth in a stable mean,
Where air was rank with oxen's heavy breath,
And manger hay hid here and there a thorn
To bid Him welcome whom they'd crown in death:
So He, whose is the Book of Life, God's Son,
Was born, unnumbered on the roll of Rome,
And years began, the Annus Domini one.

LINCOLN'S STAR STORY.

It is well in these days to settle it in our hearts that Truth is just as worthy of our confidence now as when all was apparently well with the world. Christ was on the way to His throne when he bore His cross toward Calvary. "There was darkness over all the land," and chaos had apparently begun its reign, and Anarchy was King for an hour, for this was "the hour of darkness." So darkness, and wrong, and cruelty have their chance. They are given rope, that their display of power may prove their weakness. "The hour of darkness" is only the resting of light that arises to shine more brightly than yesterday, to shine more and more to the perfect day. Well for us that we rest in the God of Peace and wait patiently and with undisturbed confidence in the great things of His law.

When the Northern cause was gloomiest during the Civil war, a large delegation of bank presidents called upon Lincoln. During the interview one of the bankers wished to know if the President's confidence in the "permanency of the Union was not beginning to be shaken"—whereupon Lincoln was ready with his usual apt story.

"When I was a young man in Illinois," said he, "I boarded for a time with a deacon of the Presbyterian church. One night I was roused from my sleep by a rap at the door, and I heard the deacon's voice exclaiming, 'Arise, Abraham! the day of judgment has come!'

"I sprang from my bed and rushed to the window, and saw the stars falling in great showers; but looking back of them in the heavens I saw the grand old constellations, with which I was so well acquainted, fixed and true in their places. 'Gentlemen, the world did not come to an end then, nor will the Union now!' "

A QUAKER HERO.

The Story of an Eyewitness.

The sufferings of Friends for conscience' sake during the Civil war, is familiar history. Few of these worthies are among us now. Their faces are hallowed memories, and as time carries us far from the days wherein they suffered, their noble deeds will embalm their names with sacredness.

Recently, in the town of Ashboro, this state, we met an old Confederate soldier who was an eyewitness of a Quaker's refusal to bear arms. The name of our venerable friend is William Bowman. He is a man of integrity, clear headed, and possesses a retentive memory. His story is here recorded that it may become a definite part of Quaker history.

He says: "The incident I am about to relate occurred soon after the Seven Days' Fight around Richmond. I belonged to the Twenty-second Regiment and was a member of Company I in command of Captain Shubal Worth of Ashboro, North Carolina. One day a new recruit was brought to the army and placed with another North Carolina company encamped near ours. He proved to be a Quaker, used the plain language, and spoke at times within my hearing. Upon being brought a gun and cartridges, the usual procedure with the new recruits, he refused to accept them. There being the expectation of a battle that day, the officers brought him out before our lines and there in plain view of all, strapped a gun on his back. They then placed him in this condition in the line of battle and so forced him into the fight. He came out of the day's struggle unhurt. The gun being taken from his back and offered to him, he again refused to carry it and said that he would suffer death rather than engage in war.

"Then a barrel with a hole sawed in the top was put on him, his head protruding through, and with it thus hanging around him he had to march up and down before the lines, with a soldier following him. Still he refused to bear arms, repeating his declaration that he would be willing to suffer death rather than do so.

"He was next compelled to carry a very heavy log, for four hours, a soldier marching close behind him to keep him moving. It was a terrible load to carry for so long and the strain must have utterly exhausted him; but his will and faith were strong and kept him true to his convictions.

"As a last act of compulsion, they shackled his hands behind him, threw him upon his back, doubled his knees into a cramped position and bound a bayonet through his mouth, drawing it down tightly for a gag. They placed him, tied in this manner, in the hot sun. When he was at last released he was spitting blood. His purpose being still as firm as ever, they took him out of camp. I never learned more concerning him, and do not know whether he obtained release or suffered death. If all of us had been men of his type, there would have been no war."

A HOME SCENE.

READING ALOUD IN THE FAMILY.

The whole family assembles for this reading aloud as religiously as they do for morning worship. I look upon it as the most vital hour of the day, uniting and quickening the family life, and in the course of years giving us an intimate acquaintance with more good books than a casual reader would believe. So important do I consider the "out-loud-method," and the "hour-a-day habit" of reading that I would have it incorporated in the marriage contract "to have and to hold, to love and to cherish, and to read to for an hour daily, as long as we both shall live." This means to read worthy books.* Read the new book when purchased. Learn to listen to the words, to bear them in your mind as silently they speed across the page. Read with a sharp pencil in your hand. The margins of the book belong to you. Stop, Look, Listen. Write down your thought on the blank margin.

Thus writes Dallas Love Sharp in the C. E. World.

*Carefully select good type for easy reading.

THE NIGHT AT BETHLEHEM.

"O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee to-night.

"O holy Child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us to-day.
We hear the Christmas angels,
The great, glad tidings tell.
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Immanuel."

OBITUARY.

ELIZABETH ANDERSON NORMAN.

Elizabeth Anderson Norman was born on the second day of May, 1840, died December 22, 1915. Her age was 75 years, 6 months, and 20 days.

Sister Norman was one of nine children born to Daniel and Mary Hicks Stone. Her parents lived on a farm in Granville County. It was here that Sister Norman was born and where her childhood days were spent, and where she grew to womanhood. Her father and mother were pious people and religion was taught in their home both by precept and example. It was no doubt due to this that Sister Norman, early in life, became a Christian.

On the 7th of December, 1870, she was married to Mr. B. F. Norman, then a young and prosperous farmer of Terrell County. This union, long and happy, was broken only by death. No children were born to bless the home.

After their marriage, Sister and Brother Norman moved to Granville County to live. Later, they moved to Wilson, N. C., and from there they went to Winston-Salem, where Bro. Norman was engaged in business for many years and where they were living at the time of Sister Norman's death.

Soon after going to Winston-Salem to live, Sister Norman, with her husband, united with the Methodist Protestant Church there, and during the quarter of a century that followed she was zealous for the church's prosperity. She was active in the various departments of the church, being a charter member of the Ladies' Aid Society, a teacher in the Sunday school and a regular attendant for years at prayer-meeting and preaching services. It was unusual for her, even in her old age, to be absent at the Sunday morning service. For several years, and up to the time of her death, she was reporter for the church. Her contributions to the paper were well made, both as to the subject matter and diction. She was a woman of thought and culture and the church was fortunate in having her as reporter for so long a time. Her services here will be missed and her absence at the church, where she worshipped so long and regularly, will be keenly felt by the congregation.

Besides her husband, who mourns in great grief, but in Christian submission, the loss of his long-time companion, Sister Norman is survived by one sister and the only living member of the family of Daniel and Mary Hicks Stone. Two brothers were sacrificed to the Civil war, one dying in the war and the other afterwards from wounds received in battle.

Our hearts go out in deep sympathy to those bereaved by her death and especially to her aged husband. It was upon her arm that he had learned to lean and in her companionship that he had delighted for nearly half a century. Our heart with the hearts of many other friends goes out to him in tenderest sympathy. May he be comforted by the God of all comfort, and some glad day, may he find again, in the summer-land of the soul, his companion of earth.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Henderson.—I accepted the position of reporter for this church this year with the understanding that something will be done to report. We have already held the first quarterly conference, and put in motion plans to pay expenses and our assessment for the orphanage debt.

We miss our departed brother J. D. Williams so much; but all are pleased with our new pastor, Bro. S. W. Taylor, and hoping to increase the interest of the congregation in the church and its services. Bro. D. A. Neese has been elected Supt. of the Sunday school for a second year. There was a suggestion at the quarterly conference that the church employ one of its active members as a whole-time truant officer to look after and bring into the active life and work of the church those who do not take a hearty interest in its affairs. But it was thought our financial condition would not yet justify such an outlay. However we are all resolving to make more of our church relations and to try to make those of others mean more to them.

Knickknacks.—Our Christmas exercises were seasonable, not in stomach-stretching knickknacks. but in sermons and in songs. The music surpassed all previous renditions. and the attendance at morning and evening services was fine. This was all not on Christmas day, however. but the day after. Such a pity that almost the whole state must now throw away about 2 per cent of the year in idleness and carousing, and at a time best suited for work. The schools and colleges ought certainly to take only one day for Christmas and should suspend exercises for that day only. Of course all our young people are at home wasting time. spending money and forgetting the little they picked up before and since Thanksgiving. T. T. Hicks.

Dec. 27, 1915.

Vance Ct.—We have begun the work of another Conference year. Have filled all appointments excepting one: was snowed out the 2nd Sunday. We are glad to be with these good people another year, who have shown their appreciation of us in a very substantial way. We have received many good and nice things since we returned from Conf.. a few of which we will mention. A nice suit of clothes for Christmas, several loads of wood, a fine pig, 6 pounds of nice butter, milk and other things too numerous to mention, but not too small to be remembered. and we trust that we may be able to repay all by the very best service possible. Everything bids fair for a pleasant and profitable year's work. Improvements are being made on parsonage and it will soon be ready for us to move in.

We have announced in every church that we make a special effort at the January appointments to raise money for the Children's Home. Our first quarterly conference will meet at Flat Rock Church Sat. before the 3rd Sun. in Jan. at 10 A. M. Hope all official members will be present.

A very nice and quiet marriage took place at the home of Bro. Eugene White last Sun. at 4 P. M. Miss Katie White to Mr. Leonard Paschall, the writer officiating. May they have a smooth voyage through life. A. L. Hunter.

Randleman Ct.—We have not reported since we returned from Conference, not because we had nothing to report but for lack of time. This is our fifth year on this work and it seems the longer one stays on the same field the more he finds to do. if he keeps his eyes and ears open. We have been well received by our people, and we have been greeted with good congregations at every church, and have received three new members. We have not been taken by storm, but we have been remembered by many with pork and sausage. Mrs. O'Briant has received many small gifts during Christmas which are much appreciated.

The Ladies' Aid Society has been busy since we came back, trying to make us comfortable. They have put in a small heater and a dresser, and, best of all, lighted the parsonage with electric lights. This adds much to the convenience of our home. and the lights are in now not only for present pastor but for all who may come this way in the future.

We are hoping to do more work this year than any previous year in our ministry here. We are working the Children's Home pledges with some degree of success.

J. B. O'Briant.

Mt. Pleasant Ct.—While at Conference Father Bethea came round and said, You ought to write more for the Methodist Protestant Herald. and after I came back to Mt. Pleasant Ct. Bro. W. M. Hanner nominated me reporter for Mt. Pleasant Church; so I suppose I would better write.

I admit it has been some time since you have heard from me; but it is not because we are dead, and are not doing anything; nor is it because I do not appreciate my people; neither is it because my people do not pound, for they are always remembering their pastor and family with good things. We were remembered recently in a very substantial way by Bros. George Ephland and J. E. Stafford, Mrs. John Swing. Mrs. George Amick, Mrs. Thomas Smith. Miss Geneva Smith, and Mrs. Lawrence Bowman. of Mt. Pleasant. and Bros. D. Grant Coble, and Wash Staley, of Pleasant Union.

I am very glad to be back with these good people for another year, and I pray that I may be able to give them better service this year than any previous year.

We are always doing things down here, even though you do not read about it; we are now completing a nice four-room annex to Mt. Pleasant Church, for the Sunday school, which adds much to the looks of the church, and which was very much needed. The subscriptions are coming up nicely, and this is call No. 2 for all those who subscribed anything toward the building of the Sunday school rooms, to send it in to the writer, for we want to make a final settlement.

I said in the beginning we have good folks on this work, yet we have some drones just like you have, who won't work (anything but their tongue) and when you say money they do worse than hold on till the eagle squalls, but most of our people have a mind to work and they are doing it.

However, there is one thing lacking and that is paying the tenth. I pray God the time may speedily come when Christians will have more faith in God, and when they will not be afraid to trust Him with the tenth of their income.

We held our first quarterly conference on Saturday before the third Sun. in Dec. at Pleasant Union, and in spite of the inclement weather we had a good attendance from both churches; fine start for the New Year; best yet, hope to see every official member at the second quarterly conference.

This is one of the charges which paid 100 per cent. of all assessments last year, and has paid it ever since I came to this work, and we expect to raise 100 per cent. this year.

We will almost raise 50 cents per member for Children's Home, but, Bro. Millikan, you will just have to be patient.

Yours for better service,

Robert S. Troxler, Pastor.

Uwharrie Ct.—Dear Bro. Holmes: I reached my charge Dec. 4, 1915. I have made one round on my work. I have found a very kind people and they have received me very kindly and made me welcome to their homes, for which they have my heartfelt thanks. Our work has started off nicely. Three of our S. S.s have decided to give one collection each month to the Children's Home. I have gotten eight subscribers to the M. P. Herald. I have preached ten times and conducted a number of prayer meetings and attended two funerals. Have written about eighteen letters and cards and traveled over six hundred miles and made 57 visits. On Dec. 26th I visited Mill Grove at 11 a. m. I found Bro. John Alexander, the pastor, preaching to his flock. He was giving his people some good sound truths. I made a few remarks to those good people and from there we went to Love's Grove. I say we because little Inez was with me. We found a waiting congregation. I preached to those good people the best I could, and their pastor, Bro. Alexander, made some remarks and the Spirit of the Lord was with us. The people like Bro. Alexander fine. The Love's Grove people were due me about $25 on back salary. I remained in the community a few days and they paid me up all but three dollars, and they say they will send me that in a few days. Mill Grove is still due me $5 on back salary, but I believe they will pay that soon. May the Lord continue to bless those dear people and their new pastor.

We had a merry Christmas. I went home a few days before Christmas. I was at home Xmas day and received lots of kind cards of greeting, lots more than usual. Sister S. C. Smith, a member of Sandy Ridge M. P. Church, and family sent us a nice turkey. God bless you and your dear family, Sister Smith. May the Lord bless you and your dear boys, Sister Stratford, for those precious cards of greeting. And all others. Yes, you, Sister Thompson. I never will forget that last midnight service at your home, Sister Stratford.

We held our first quarterly meeting at Canaan church on Saturday before the 3d Sunday in Dec. Preaching at 11 a. m. A good dinner was served and then at 2 p. m. the quarterly conference was held. The usual business was transacted in a spirit of love. The reports were right good. All the churches were not represented. We are looking for good things on this field this year. God bless all the pastors and all the people. Pray for us. D. A. Braswell.

Fairview Ct.—The first quarterly conference was held at Gibsonville on Jan. the first. All the churches were represented. The conference was encouraging. All seem to be hopeful of a good year. Some changes in appointments were made that I believe will be helpful. The services at Gibsonville on the first Sunday in Jan., morning and evening, were good. The congregations I understand were larger than usual. One new member was received. Some others will join soon.

J. H. Bowman.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Ct.—The S. S. attendance in Dec. was very good, but might have been better. It was as follows: 5th, 91; 12th, 23; 19th, 78; 26th, 80. As the weather is starting out fine for the New Year, we hope that we will have the largest attendance this month we have ever had. Minnie Suits, Secy.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Charge.—I entered upon my duties as pastor of this charge for the second year immediately after the adjournment of Conference. I have met all the appointments but one. I did not attempt to go to Shoals the second Sun. in Dec. on account of the snow. The people have given us many tokens of kindness since our return from Conference. On Thursday night, Dec. 30th, while the pastor and wife were out visiting we received a message to come home at once. We immediately started for home. On arriving there we found several buggies in the parsonage yard, but we did not think of a pounding. We went into the parsonage and were invited into the dining room. There we found that 40 or 50 of the members of Pinnacle and Mt. Zion churches, with some that were not members, had taken possession. The table was loaded with good things. On taking stock we found we had meat, coffee, flour, sugar, potatoes, meal, fruit, and a number of other things too tedious to mention. We appreciate this manifestation of goodwill. May the Lord bless each one of these good people.

Our first quarterly conference will meet at Mt. Zion on Sat. before the third Sun. in Jan. Preaching at 11 a. m. and quarterly conference at 1:30 p. m.

Edw. Suits.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—We were very much pleased to have our former pastor return to us for another year. Bro. Martin preached his first sermon for the new year here the third Sun. evening at 7:30. He preached a very helpful sermon. We had our Christmas exercises on Christmas night. It was enjoyed by all.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Harry S. Webster, Reporter.

—Bro. Edwards writes that he has been kindly received on his new field, Roanoke.

Asheville.—I hope you all had a merry Christmas and that you are going to have a very happy New Year. We ought to enjoy it more this year than we have for some time past, if it is a happy year—there's one more day in the year, you know.

We have started off to be happy this year anyway, whatever you may do about it. We are happy in the realization that last year was a good one for our church at Asheville in every respect, and we are happy in the anticipation of even greater things for the church during this year. We must make haste slowly here, but we are progressing in a quiet but permanent way.

We were made happy at the last of the year by a check from Bro. Geo. Harris, who at Conference kindly took charge of D. W. Hardee, with the promise of more the unpaid pledges at Henderson, for Bro. money on pledges after Christmas. This brings what I want down to $225. I am sure if I keep on wanting it long enough, I shall cease to want anything. Thank you.

We had a good time Sunday morning, and were happy again. A well attended communion service, in which several strangers participated, much to our joy, followed by an old-fashioned (God save the mark) love feast of bread breaking. So old-fashioned, and so rare, that fully half of those present, and many of them grown folks, had never seen or been in one. O Methodism. how greatly is thy glory fallen! The rich inheritance of our fathers that we have orht mnktereaa)RcfoJMH naywthaaoghm7J1BsodE T T TTTTAAA that we have thrown away together with the class-meeting.

Our people were delighted, even those who were strangers to it. and I think we will make it a quarterly institution.

With the reorganization of the Sunday-school in the election of new officers, and rearrangement of teachers, we are looking forward to larger things in this department of the work here. A canvass is being made for a teacher-training class, and we hope to have it in full swing in a week or two.

The social side of the church has been neglected for some weeks now, but next Thursday the Christian Endeavor Soc. is to give a social, and will start the ball rolling again. C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Glass-Ingold. On Christmas Day, 1915. Mr. William Glass and Miss Lillian Ingold came to the home of the editor of the M. P. Herald and were by him united in holy matrimony. May their life be joyous.

OBITUARY.

Capt. Samuel L. Lineberry died at the home of his only son, Albert A. Lineberry, on Seventh Ave., Lexington, N. C., Dec. 5, 1915. Age, sixty-four years, seven months and twenty-five days. Capt. Lineberry, a railroad veteran of thirty-eight years. Since April, 1877, he had been conductor or holding other similar positions with the different railroads of the South now grouped together to form the great Southern Railway system. During the long period of service, Capt. Lineberry was conductor in the Richmond and Danville, Georgia and Pacific, Atlanta and Florida, Seaboard Air Line, Brunswick and Birmingham and Southern. His last work was at the L. & N. and Birmingham Terminal Station. He joined the order of Railway Conductors in 1885 and was a charter member of Division 186 at Birmingham. He was a Royal Arch Mason, a Knight of Pythias. Capt. Lineberry was a member of an old German family who came to this country in 1752 from the Hartz Mountains, of Germany, in what is now known as Brunsweigh. He was born in Enfield, Halifax Co., N. C. He was one of a number of the sons of Rev. Arlendo Wood Lineberry, D. D. His mother was a Miss Celia Gallaspie of Surry Co., N. C. His grandparents were Samuel and Jane Lineberry.

Capt. Lineberry was educated at Yadkin College. Married to Miss Julia Francis Owen, of Yadkin College, on Nov. 6, 1873. This union was blessed by the birth of one son and one daughter. The daughter died at the age of four years. Albert A. Lineberry, who still survives the father, is a resident of Lexington, N. C. He leave four brothers and one sister: namely, Martin Alexander, Jesse William, Charlie Clark, and James Brantly Lineberry, and Mrs. H. B. Owen, of Gibsonville.

Capt. Lineberyy came to Lexington nearly two years ago, afflicted. Soon after his arrival here he was stricken of paralysis which rendered the lower half of the body helpless. He lay in this helpless condition till the end came, on Sunday A. M., Dec. 5th.

The writer visited him a number of times during his confinement here. He was bright, sunny, and hopeful. The most patient sufferer I ever knew. We had a number of conversations on religion. He spoke of not having lived as he should, but spoke of his early conversion and of a present and confident hope of heaven. He knew all of the older ministers and would usually name them all and ask about them. He leaves a host of relatives and friends in many of the states to mourn their loss, but their loss is his eternal gain.

The remains of Capt. Lineberry were carried to Yadkin College for interment. A funeral service was conducted in the Methodist Protestant church by Rev. H. L. Powell, assisted by Rev. W. T. Totten. Then the body was carried to its last resting place and given back to mother earth to await the general resurrection of the dead.

May the blessings of God be upon the bereaved family and especially upon Albert, who rendered untiring faithfulness during the entire confinement of his father. H. L. Powell.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

The Postal Card has been suspended for some weeks incident to our transfer from the old to the new field. After the rise of conference we returned to the old work where we had been very happy for the past seven years and spent some ten days in gradually getting our things together and placed in a car. During this time we had the pleasure of preaching once more to a fine congregation at Flat Rock. The new pastor was present; but was kind enough to insist that we deliver our final message. Bro. Cecil's remarks indicated a progressive year for Flat Rock Circuit. The charge is fortunate in having, in him, a progressive leader. We also preached the funeral of Mr. W. F. Linville at Bethel, on Thanksgiving Day. Mr. Linville was nearly 86 years of age. He had never married. He was not a member of any church. He professed Christ, in his home, a year or more ago. He was a splendid citizen. He had accumulated a consideable estate and had helped many others in a financial way.

Finally on Monday, Dec. 6, we were almost in shape for loading. Bro. N. W. Gordon came to us that morning and helped us finish and remained with us until everything was in the car. Thanks to him and many others for uniform kindness through so many years. Our friends kept us well supplied with fresh meats and other seasonable articles of food. They seemed determined that we should not be hungry when we left them.

The New.—We spent Monady night in the home of Sister Dwiggins, in Stokesdale, and Tuesday night in Greensboro. Wednesday morning we reached the good town of Mebane. Found kind friends awaiting us at depot. We went to the home of Bro. Henry Nicholson, accompanied by Mrs. Nicholson, where we were kindly entertained until evening. After dinner Bro. J. W. Nicholson placed a two-horse wagon and two good hands at our disposal and in a few hours our things were all in the parsonage.

Wednesday evening we were escorted to the parsonage, where a reception was tendered us. About fifty good-looking people were present—all were good looking—"looked good to us." We listened to splendid music. Refreshments were served to all present. The new pastor made a short talk and led in prayer. The reception was most cordial and helped us to feel at home at once. After the reception we went to the home of Bro. J. W. Nicholson and were cared for until Thursday P. M. when we took up our abode at the parsonage. On Christmas eve there was a huge Christmas tree in the church. If ever a tree groaned under its burden this tree surely groaned. It required about an hour to pick the fruit from the tree. The eyes of the little ones shone and the older ones were not forgotten. The parson came in for his share and the parsoness for a double or triple share. The Christmas tree was a success. Paul S. Kennett came to us from Westminster, Md., for the holidays and preached for us the 4th Sunday, morning and evening.

What We Find Here.—First, a very good rhorch building, in town, and Hebron one of the best country churches—we mean the membership—in North Carolina. We knew them in other days and are glad to number many of them among our tried and true friends. Here in Mebane we find a good congregation, many young men and young women among the membership. A live Sunday school. A good and well attended midweek prayer meeting. We find a nice parsonage, with electric lights, a phone and many other conveniences. The yard is inclosed and there are rose bushes and violet beds. We found plenty of good hickory wood and coal in the wood house and coal bin. Our predecessor, Dr. Swain, had done much in the way of beautifying the parsonage grounds and had planned for the comfort of his successor. We find here a very kind, hospitable people. They have kept coming to the parsonage; or sending such things as would help to make Christmas cheerful and happy. We have been in about 35 homes and our verdict is that we have a good people to serve and we are much pleased with our new work. Under the blessings of God and with the earnest co-operation of the people, which we confidently expect, we are looking for a year of successful and happy work.

Mebane, Dec. 31, 1915.

Center, Alamance Ct.—Center has lost two valuable members recently. On Dec. 20, Mrs. Nancy A. Braxton died, aged nearly seventy years. On Dec. 24, Mrs. Q. V. Braxton, wife of Bro. W. E. Braxton, died, aged seventy-two years. Both were faithful to attend church when able to do so. Funerals conducted by their pastor in the presence of large congregations of relatives and friends.

J. W. Whitehead.

Flat Rock Ct.—On the 4th Sunday at 11 o'clock in Nov. I attended church at Flat Rock, and heard Rev. W. F. Kennett preach his last sermon on this circuit for the present, a good sermon. He and I visited Mr. John Price who is sick and took dinner with Bro. J. B. Ogburn who lives with his mother who is also sick; but she is thought to be somewhat better. I have met all appointments. Attendance not large; some have gone into winter quarters and others speak of doing the same, which has a tendency to try a pastor's faith. The ladies had a fine dinner. Our first quarterly conference met on the 22nd at Flat Rock; preaching at 11 A. M. Not a large attendance, and still smaller at the conference, for some went home. Conference opened at 1 p. m. This circuit has forty-one officials and only eighteen answered roll call. Bethel 5, Flat Rock 6, Palestine 3, Gideon Grove 4. This is a poor show for a circuit of 582 members. No field can do its best work when such an interest as this is shown by officials, and I am not pleased with such a beginning. I trust the attendance will improve.

We went through with more than the usual business because of the new business. The reports were all accepted, but no one had much to report except the stewards on pastor's salary and it was especially good, as you can see. Bethel $40. Flat Rock $20.50. Palestine $2. Gideon Grove $15. Total $77.50. The conference adopted the individual apportionment plan for pastor's salary and general interests, and it takes 53 percent of pastor's salary to raise the general interests. In other words if you pay the pastor $1.00, you are due 53 cents for general interests, and this does not include collections for the children in the Home or the Home indebtedness. (I am saying this for the benefit of my members on Flat Rock Ct.) The conference decided to make an effort to raise 50c per member to pay off the indebtedness on the Children' Home. There are 582 members on this circuit, as follows: Bethel 155, Flat Rock 264, Palestine 99, Gideon Grove 67. N. W. Gordon of Stokesdale was elected to represent Bethel, and Ira Johnson of Summerfield Flat Rock, James Tucker, Stokesdale, R. D., Palestine, P. D. Lemons, of Stokesdale, Gideon Grove. These are all in sympathy with the move and will do their best to raise the $291. Our general interest is $312, plus $76 for District Parsonage equals $679, plus $600 pastor's equals $1,279. This sum divided by 582 gives $2.22 per member. We can raise it if all would do their part: let us try and begin at once.

I have been in 42 different homes on my work up to this writing. We have been kindly remembered by Bros. N. T. Pegram, A. O. Jones and R. W. Jones.

C. A. Cecil.

Yadkin College Ct.—The parsonage has again been bombarded and the pantry has been completely in the hands of the invaders and the supplies swelled to overflowing. The invaders proved to be the pastor's good and tried friends of Shiloh. On Thursday before Xmas, the Sunday-school met to treat the children and faithful workers; the pastor was invited to be there. The day was ideal. When the pastor arrived the whole community seemed to be there. The beautiful little hill on which the church stands literally swarmed with glad, cheerful, rejoicing children. The grown people seemed to be the happiest folks I've almost ever seen. I was at once invited into the church. All at once the church was left to the pastor and just a few others. I thought—Well, this is a strange way of doing. In a short time they began to assemble. Then music. The efficient Supt., H. A. Leonard, arose and with a few well chosen remarks explained to the audience the object of the occasion. Then he said we will treat our pastor first. Bro. W. J. Berrier was asked to escort the pastor to the vestibule where the treat had been prepared. Well, it looked like a well assorted grocery store. There were over 400 pounds of the best patent flour, cured ham, not Peter Slewfoot's kind, for it was just about all one could carry. Then came in line every variety of fresh meats, potatoes, jellies, preserves, fruits, pickles, sugar, butter, eggs, chickens, etc. I can't mention all nor can I take space to name all the donors. God knows them and the pastor knows every one of them. The pastor returned and tried to express his thanks to these kind friends in person. He found language inadequate. Our hearts still swell with gratitude and will be constantly reminded each day and each meal. In some lines it will take about all the year to devour them. The treat was ample, and each child and grown person received the largest treats I ever saw given by a Sunday school. I saw Bro. A. H. Evans sitting there very happy, it seemed. He had arrived late in his auto. Bro. Evans has been the faithful and highly esteemed teacher of the Bible Class. This class has been very large. At this point Bro. Evans arose and with a few well chosen remarks presented each member of his class a present. This occasion will be long remembered. Here we adjourned. The pastor was puzzled to know what he would do with his treat, for it would have taken many buggy loads to convey it all away. Bro. W. J. Berrier stepped up and said, I brought my one-horse wagon on purpose to take these things to your home. So we commenced to load and when we had piled up on the one-horse wagon there was still left, so the remainder was put on his other wagon. We were soon at parsonage and unloaded; after the children had gone to sleep, wife and I went down to inventory, finding near $50 worth of groceries.

We have had a good Xmas. I took Xmas dinner out at Mrs. Augusta Walser's. All of her children and one great-grandchild to number 45, then invited friends to number 66. Her children all brought dinner. The dinner was spread in front of the old homestead and after all had eaten to full satisfaction there remained on table more than enough to feed the same crowd again. It was a great dinner. The pastor was asked to return thanks. May God bless this occasion.

H. L. Powell.

On third Sun. in Dec. we met the regular appointment at Shiloh; a good congregation to hear the word. Bro. A. H. Evans and wife were received by certificate. Bro. Evans and wife took their certificate from this church about six years ago and moved to High Point. Now he is a citizen of Lexington; he runs his auto out to the old home church every Sunday and attends church and Sunday school. Shiloh is the church of his father and mother and where he was converted. He has a most hearty welcome. Bro. Evans is one of our most progressive laymen. His wife a model Christian woman, a true wife and mother. May God bless them with the entire membership. H. L. Powell.

President's Appointments, Flat Rock Ct.

January 20, 11 a. m., Gideon's Grove. 3 p. m., Palestine.

January 21, 11 a. m., Bethel; 3 p. m., Flat Rock.

President will be met at Stokesdale the 20th a. m. C. A. Cecil.

Oak Ridge Church.—We had a beautiful Christmas Sunday and Bro. Gerringer filled his regular appointment. He preached an excellent Christmas sermon and there was a large congregation to hear him.

Our S. S. and the M. E. S. S. gave a joint Christmas entertainment in the chapel of O. R. I. Sunday night. On account of rain we postponed it from Sat. night until Sun. night. The children did finely and their part being finished there was a large tree of presents distributed among the crowd. The program was certainly enjoyed by a large crowd.

Our first quarterly conference for the year met on Sat. before 3rd Sunday. We had a good meeting. Most of the churches on the circuit were well represented.

We wish every one a successful and a most happy New Year.

Ogalee Benbow, Reporter.

Davidson Ct.—Notice: Our first quarterly meeting will be held Saturday before the third Sunday in January. Hope all the members will be there, for there will be some very important business to come before that meeting. We want the cooperation of all the members of the church. May God bless our work this year.

Yours for the church, J. W. Hulin, Pas.

Halifax Ct.—On Saturday evening, Dec. 25, at 7:30, Bethesda Church had an interesting and helpful Christmas exercise followed by unloading a tree. N. M. Harrison, Jr., dressed for the occasion, acted the part of Santa Claus well to the great delight of the chidlren. Santa found a present of a $5.00 bill, and a $5.00 or $6.00 pair of blankets on the tree for Mrs. Swaringen and me from Bethesda Church, besides many smaller presents for the different members of the family. Miss Harriet Wills and Miss Agnes Wills sang Holy Night as a duet, and they sang it "with the spirit and the understanding."

On Sunday at 11 a. m. Bro. Stubbins preached for me at Ringwood. I did not know that he was in the community until he came to church just at time for worship. I knew that it seemed unfair to insist on his preaching without any notice at all, but I thought that Bro. Stubbins was one of those men that are always ready, and he verified my belief by preaching a most excellent sermon. I am sorry so few were out to hear him. Bad weather? Sat. night was far worse, and we had a house full. But those who will read this were there, so what is the use?

At 3 p. m. Sunday, I preached to a small but attentive congregation at Lee's Chapel. I should have preached a good sermon after receiving those valuable presents Sat. night, and then Mrs. Whitehurst had just placed a package of sausage in my buggy that morning at Ringwood. I certainly felt thankful in my heart to God for the Great Gift, and I hope that I made the people see some reasons why we should be thankful.

On Mon. night at 7:30, we had a splendid Christmas exercise at Lee's Chapel. I did not hear all of it, but thought what I heard was excellent. Mr. Curtis Hardy, an editor from Norlina, made a splendid address for us, and then Mr. Jerry Hardy, one of our ministerial students who is in school at Elon College, also made an excellent short address. A purse of about $4.50 was found on the tree for me. These people have learned that while I like postum better than coffee I like money best of all. The choir sang Holy Night, and sang it well. Isn't that a splendid hymn!

We are praying and hoping for great things this year.

R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—We have been going our usual pace since Conference. Have received three new members, and when the weather was good have had good congregations. Had two special services; one Sunday night following Christmas when the needs of our local poor, the Armenian sufferers, and our Japanese work were all briefly presented and a substantial offering was received for these causes.

Last Sunday night the Sunshine Circle of the church gave a beautiful entertainment entitled The Christmas Garden; there was a splendid audience and the offering for this will be sent to aid the kindergarten work in our Japanese schools. This circle is a junior missionary society of the church, and is doing a great work. Mrs. W. K. Hartsell is the Supt. and the children are receiving most valuable training for larger services in the services of this circle.

We regret to report that there is quite a good deal of sickness just now in our membership and city. One of our most excellent young women, Miss Velna McCulloch, has undergone an operation and is now well on the road to complete recovery. There are several cases of grip and severe colds among others of our membership.

The pastor and family have been most kindly remembered during the holidays. In fact Bro. Millikan started it off with a fine turkey for Thanksgiving, and Bro. T. A. Hunter followed suit with another for Christmas. These were just the preliminary movements of a general movement of friends of the church in their efforts to make us happy. We sincerely appreciate every token of their esteem and love. Wednesday night of this week we expect to hold our first quarterly conference; will report this later.

We are expecting Dr. Wilbur, editor of our S. S. literature, to lecture here next Tuesday night, the eleventh, on American Humor. R. M. Andrews.

Spring Hill, Piedmont C.—Bro. Self left an appointment for next Sunday, but did not set the hour for preaching. We have decided to have Sunday school at two o'clock and preaching at three o'clock. Hope this will please all. Bro. Self said he would preach at whatever hour pleased the people; so everybody come next Sunday and I hope there will be some arrangement made about the appointments so there will be no misunderstanding from this on. We are having a good Sunday school for the time of year. Reporter.

Welch Memorial.—A few words concerning the work here. The people here have made the pastor feel as if he were among home folks. They gave us a pounding just before Christmas, and loaded us down with good things to eat. We thank them for this expression of love and good will and pray God's blessings upon them.

We held our 1st quarterly conference on the 30th of Dec. at night, with a good attendance of the officials. The business was transacted in a brotherly spirit. We were glad to have Bro. Reynolds, of Denton, with us, and we thank him for the encouraging words he gave us. We are very much encouraged with the interest manifested so far, and believe we will have a successful year. May God's richest blessings rest upon all the brethren, and the new year be crowned with great success, is my prayer. A. D. Shelton.

High Point, N. C.

Mt. Zion, Uwharrie Ct.—As I was elected reporter for this place yesterday, I will endeavor to write a few lines. Our pastor, Rev. D. A. Braswell, filled his second appointment here yesterday, delivering a good and helpful sermon to a very good and most attentive congregation. We believe that Bro. Braswell is just the kind of pastor we need, for he is going to put us to work, if we will work, and I don't believe we are going to get out of it.

After we had had Sunday school and preaching, he said he was not satisfied with that, and wanted to have prayer-meeting somewhere yesterday afternoon. So Bro. Braswell gave out prayer meeting to be at the church at 3:30. A few of us went back to the church and had prayer-meeting, and we had a good time singing and praying and talking for the Lord. We think every one present received a blessing and some got happy and praised the Lord aloud.

The collection for the Children's Home yesterday was $2.00. We have not elected new officers for the Sunday school yet; it was postponed till next Sunday. We trust that this will be a good year for the circuit and that there may be much good accomplished. We hope to see the church revived and sinners saved. I believe if people would stop and study for one moment their condition they would become alarmed, that they would come to Christ and be saved before it is too late. Bro. Braswell will preach for us the 5th Sun. in this month at three o'clock instead of the first Sunday in February.

In regard to our former pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, I must say a few words. We were sorry to give him up, as he had been with us five years and we had learned to love him, and had all confidence in him as being a good man. May the richest blessings rest upon him and his wherever he may be, and may this be a good year for him.

Now, Christians, let us make this year 1916 the best year of all. Let us be up and doing while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

Yours for success. Ethel Gaddis.
Trinity, 1-3-16.

Thomasville.—The old year has come and gone and the new year is here with its numerous opportunities. What shall I do this year for the advancement of the Master's Kingdom? is a question that should be considered by every one.

Our Christmas entertainment and tree was quite a success, even though the weather was bad.

On Monday morning after Christmas the men of the church came in and built the partition across the opening into the Sunday-school room. We now have two rooms and when needed we can throw both into one by means of the folding doors.

Our teachers' training class is being organized and will meet each Thursday evening. We hope this will prove to be a success and be the means of doing much for our Sunday school.

In my last report to the "Herald" I said something of the condition of this church which might be taken by some to mean that I was reflecting on the former pastors of this church. Such a thing was entirely foreign to my idea and purpose, for I would not do such a thing. The former pastors did splendid work here and opened the way for much advancement in the future, and whatever success we may attain this year will be partially as a result of their efforts here. Sincerely,

E. O. Pritchett.

Lincolnton, Shelby Ct.—Dear Editor: I want to say our work here as a church has started off so well in the beginning of the new Conference year, I want to write something about it. We were glad to have Bro. Morris returned as pastor. He has been received with open hearts, homes and pocket books. We overpaid him for December and the way we started off we will more than pay up for Jan.

We had a splendid sermon to a good-sized congregation the 1st Sunday night in the new year. Bro. Morris seemed to be at his best, and preached a splendid sermon. We had a good Christmas exercise. All seemed to enjoy it. We treated the entire school, and oh so many presents, and, too, Santa Claus was with us.

Our attendance in S. S. for the past three months was 102, the best by far in the history of the church. We want to dedicate our church the present year.

D. B. J.

Burlington.—We presume the readers of the Herald have begun to think that Burlington church and Sunday school were keeping in obscurity in the matter of reporting. The facts in the case are these: The non-appearance of reports for the past few weeks is due to negligence on the part of the supposed-to-be reporter, who happens to be a busy "scribe" in affairs of everyday life, and therefore has not been alert in reporting.

Our church and Sunday school work has been progressing nicely during the time since the beginning of the new conference year. Each department of the church is taking on new life and pushing the work along in a most splendid manner.

The S. S. attendance was 244 yesterday, the largest we have had this Conference year, and we are very well pleased with the prospects for a much larger attendance. The election of secretary and assistant secretary was held on Sunday, Dec. 26th, and the remainder of the officers were elected yesterday. The new official board is as follows: M. A. Coble, Supt.; J. G. Rogers, Asst. Supt.; C. B. Way, Secy.; Miss Elsie Moser, Ass't. Secy; Miss Ivey Coble, Supt. Primary Dept.; J. H. Boon, Supt. Home Dept.; Miss Lena Lineberry, Supt. Cradle Roll Dept.; Miss Allene Amick, Organist; Miss Lula Foster, Asst. Organist.

We were glad to have as visitors in the Sunday school and church service yesterday Dr. W. A. Hornady, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pugh, and Miss Maie Bain, of Greensboro, Miss Daisy Wyatte, of Mebane, and Miss Margaret Hayes of the State Normal College.

The church services both morning and evening were largely attended. At the morning service the Lord's Supper was very fittingly observed. We say fittingly because we believe almost every church member in the congregation communed. There were 80, by actual count, which showed that the people were glad to witness for Him "till He come again." The pastor gave an appropriate address preceding the communion service.

The evening service was well attended, the congregation being largely made up of the young people of the community. Bro. Pritchard delivered an excellent New Year's sermon from Phil. 3:13. The discourse was spoken of very highly and it contained many good suggestions for the work of the church during the New Year.

We are delighted with our pastor and his good wife. Bro. Pritchard is giving us good, practical, helpful sermons, and Mrs. Pritchard has been rendering valuable service in the Sunday school. She was elected teacher of the Jr. Baraca Class yesterday. Bro. Pritchard is teaching the Sr. Baraca Class and conducting a teacher training class each Wednesday evening immediately after the prayer service.

Mrs. Pritchard was called to Siler City last Thursday on account of the serious illness of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Vestal.

Bro. Pritchard delivered an address to the Baraca-Philathea City Union meeting Sunday afternoon. C. B. Way.

In Kind.—Miss Eleanor B. Craig, Orange Ct., dried fruit; Mrs. C. C. Chandler, Denton, 6 pr. hose; Mrs. Earle P. Holt's S. S. class, Oak Ridge, 1 doz. pr. hose; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Spencer, Gastonia, 1 bbl. potatoes and pears; Jr. Philathea Class, Henderson, 40 hdkfs.; Jr. Baracas, Grace Ch., Greensboro, a present for one boy; Grace Ch., Parksley, Va., 1 bbl. toys and clothing; Mr. H. L. Coble, Greensboro, 1 crate oranges; Mr. Green A. Nicholson, Bellemont Ch., 1 box potatoes, peas and dried fruit; Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mr. J. D. Ross, Asheboro, each a crate of oranges; The Philatheas, N. Main St., High Point, a present for each child; Mrs. J. D. Newell, Winston-Salem, fruit, nuts and cake; Mrs. Louisa Gales, Lincolnton, two quilts; Jr. C. E. Soc., Asheville, doz. towels, 20 hdkfs.; Brown Summit S. S., a small box oranges and a bbl. potatoes; the ladies of Thomasville Ch. gave a pair of stockings to each child and one of the stockings was filled with nuts, candy and some useful present. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Millis of High Point, who are not members of our church, brought a treat last year for each child and this year they had asked for the name and age of each child and on Christmas eve they came again with a suitable present for each child. They had certainly exercised good taste in making their purchases. A contribution that I appreciate came from Mr. J. W. Bishop, a blind man, Friendship Ch., Mt. Hermon Ct. He never let his financial condition keep him from helping a worthy cause; you could always count on him, and when he lost his sight it did not stop him from giving. He sent us a sack of fine meal. Think of the people who have two good eyes and sound bodies and never do a charitable deed. So many of us who have good eyes and a sound body never stop to think of God's goodness to us. Mrs. Joe Anthony, 1 crocheted center piece; Miss Myrtle Trogdon, 1 Em. center piece; Miss Gertha Trogdon, 1 Em. table runner.

The above is a three weeks' report. The report that should have come out Dec. 23 was mailed in High Point but didn't reach the Herald office.

We have just passed through the best Christmas in the history of the Home. The people had asked for the names and ages of the children and made good selections for presents and had all labeled for us, and then we are so thankful that all the children were in good health.

We beg pardon if we have omitted reporting anything. Words fail to express our appreciation of what has been done. We wish for each and all peace, happiness and prosperity this New Year. Yours in the work, H. A. Garrett.

Bethany, Reidsville Ct.—We are very glad that Conference gave us our same pastor. for we were quite unwilling to give him up. He has entered very earnestly upon the new year's work, having already given us three strong sermons since his return. We are planning, hoping and praying for more united effort on the part of the church. and greater results from this year's work. There is much to be done, or there will be much loss to the church and to each of us. If we are unfaithful in small things God will not give us great things.

School opened here Jan. 3rd for the spring term. Our young people who teach at other places have returned to their schools. Mrs. T. F. Humphreys.

New Hope, Vance Ct.—Dear Editor: As I have been appointed reporter for New Hope I will endeavor to mention some recent happenings at our church. We had our Christmas tree on Christmas eve with recitations and songs; all present seemed to enjoy the entertainment very much.

On last Sunday Bro. A. L. Hunter filled his regular appointment and gave us a fine sermon on Lost Opportunities. Pledges were taken to cancel the debt on the Children's Home, amounting to 75 cents or more per member, including the cash.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We are hoping for a better one this year than before. We give the fourth Sunday collections to the Orphanage.

Wishing the Herald and its readers a prosperous and happy new year,

Esther S. Paschall, Rep.

MARRIED.

Jarrett-Carmichael.—On Friday evening, Dec. 24, 1915, the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Carmichael was the scene of a beautiful home wedding, when their daughter, Miss Vetra A. Carmichael, and Mr. Luther R. Jarrett were united in holy matrimony by the writer. Immediately after the ceremony the happy young couple led the way to the dining room where a dinner was served. Everything to make the occasion one of love and good cheer was made manifest in the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett are both active members of our church here and will continue to make their home in Thomasville. Their pastor and friends wish for them much happiness. E. O. Pritchett.

—Have faith in God.

MARRIED.

At the home of the bride's father, N. W. Gordon, near Stokesdale, N. C., on the 22nd of Dec., 1915, at 5:30 P. M., Mr. V. O. Jones and Miss —— Gordon were married by the writer in the presence of a few friends. May their life be a happy one.

C. A. Cecil.

Rice-Barker.—Dec. 29, 3 P. M., the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Barker, Randleman, N. C., was the place of a beautiful home wedding when their daughter, Miss Maud, became the bride of Mr. W. T. Rice, of Bamberg, S. C., Rev. J. B. O'Briant being the officiating minister. Mr. Rice is a native of Georgia but is now a citizen of South Carolina and is a bookkeeper in a mercantile house in Bamberg. Mr. Rice is a young man of most excellent qualities and it is not at all surprising that he should woo and win one of North Carolina's fair daughters. Mrs. Rice is a lady of refinement and is one among Randleman's best girls. She is also an experienced milliner and was employed by a wholesale house in Baltimore, Md., and was sent out to different towns of the country. It so happened that she was sent to Bamberg, S. C., for two years. It was here that she and Mr. Rice met, which meeting grew into friendship, love and marriage. The home was beautifully decorated with holly and fern; but only a few of the near relatives and friends were present. The bride wore a beautiful blue going-away suit, and soon after the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Rice amid showers of rice and many congratulations boarded the train at Randleman for Bamberg, S. C., where they expect to make their home.

Barker-Farlow.—The M. P. Parsonage at Randleman, N. C., was the scene of a very enjoyable occasion, Dec. 22nd, 8:30 P. M., when Mr. A. M. Barker and Miss Julia Farlow were united in marriage, Rev. J. B. O'Briant officiating. They are both of Randleman and will make their future home here. The groom is a widely known business man throughout the surrounding country and held in high esteem by all who know him, while the bride is a lady of refinement and is popular and has a wide circle of friends. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Their many friends wish for them a long and happy life together.

Burgess-Moffitt.—Married at the home of the bride in Asheboro, N. C., Mr. E. C. Burgess and Miss Mary Jane Moffitt, Dec. 9th, Rev. J. B. O'Briant officiating. Immediately after the marriage they left Asheboro for Randleman where they are now making their home.

Elmore-Kivett.—On Sunday afternoon, Dec. 26, Mr. R. C. Lewallen with Mr. C. C. Elmore and Miss Berta Kivett of Asheboro motored to Randleman. They arrived at the M. P. Parsonage about 5 o'clock where Mr. Elmore and Miss Kivett were happily married by J. B. O'Briant. Mr. Elmore is a member of the Bulletin office force, and is a most excellent young man, and Miss Kivett is one of Asheboro's charming young ladies and has a host of friends.

After the marriage the happy couple were taken by Mr. Lewallen to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Elmore in Randleman (parents of the groom) where they will spend a few days of Christmas week. Friends in both Asheboro and Randleman extend congratulations.

DIED.

Waitman.—Jacob L. Waitman was born July 10, 1846, died Dec. 16, 1915. He was married three times. His first marriage was to Miss Triphena Wagner who lived only nine months after marriage. The second marriage was to Miss Sarah C. Swicegood. This union was blessed with six children, five living, one dead. His third marriage was to Mrs. Mary Barnhart who survives him. Bro. Waitman leaves two brothers and three sisters. He leaves 32 grandchildren; five grandchildren have preceded him to the glory world.

Bro. Waitman was converted when only a boy of 18, at Shiloh Methodist Protestant Church, of which church he sought membership and was a faithful member to the date of his death. His funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, assisted by Rev. Mr. Carter, a near relative of the surviving widow and a favorite of Bro. Waitman. After the service in church his remains were laid to rest in Shiloh cemetery. May God bless the bereaved family. One of the older pillars of the church has fallen. In this dispensation of God's providence the pastor loses one of his dear friends. For some 23 years I've known him. I met him and commenced to visit him. I loved him and he always enjoyed meeting and having the young preachers who were in school at Y. C. to visit him. Peace be to his ashes.

H. L. Powell.

Foust.—Mrs. Elizabeth Foust was born Nov., 1847, and died Dec. 22, 1915. She was married to J. Wesley Foust 34 years ago last March. This union was blessed with five children, two of whom preceded the mother to the eternal world. The aged husband, two sons and one daughter are left to mourn their great loss.

Sister Foust was a member of the Lutheran Church at Old Pilgrim for some years.

Her funeral was conducted by Rev. H. L. Powell at Bethesda Methodist Protestant Church on Dec 23. After the funeral her remains were laid to rest in the Bethesda cemetery. May God bless the aged husband who is not a Christian.

H. L. Powell.

Broadway.—Mrs. Emma Ethel Broadway was born May 28, 1892; died Dec. 25, 1915. She was married to David Broadway on Dec. 14, 1913. This union was blessed with one child, a little boy of about one year. She leaves a father, mother, three brothers and a number of friends and relatives. Mrs. Broadway made a profession of religion at the age of twelve years and joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Yadkin College, where she held membership at death. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, at Shiloh M. P. Church on Sunday, Dec. 26th at 2 p. m. Her remains were laid to rest in Shiloh cemetery. Mrs. Broadway was a victim of tuberculosis.

May God bless the husband and dear little child who can never know the worth of a dear mother.

H. L. Powell.

Hill.—Corrinna Hill was born May 27, 1871, and died Dec. 29, 1915. At an early age she was deprived of parental training. She being forced to give up her earthly parent and leave brother and sisters only prepared her for greater things. She could see more plainly the necessity of a home beyond. She professed religion and joined the church at Hillsboro and lived a pious, unassuming Christian life, helping in any way she could to further the Kingdom of Christ. As a mother she was kind and thoughtful and prayed that her children might walk in the path of righteousness. As a wife she was tender and gentle. Pain and suffering did not destroy these qualities. In her last suffering she realized that the end was near, and said she and God would settle it and rested unafraid until the time came when she slipped away to her Father's House to be with that innumerable host. She was that type of a woman that shone right where she was. To know her best was to love her most.

A Friend.

Denton, N. C.

Brown.—Catherine Elizabeth Fulk, the daughter of John and Delilah Fulk, was born March 20, 1846, and died Dec. 30, 1915. She was married to Crosley M. Brown Nov. 11, 1866. This union was blessed with two children a son and a daughter, both of whom survive. The father preceded her about sixteen years.

She professed faith in Christ during her girlhood days and joined the church at Mt. Zion in Surry Co. Later she moved to Harmony Grove M. P. Church in Forsyth Co. where she lived a consistent Christian member until the end came.

She was stricken with paralysis about nine years ago from which she has suffered these many years, but amid all her afflictions she always remembered her Saviour, and when pain was so severe she would pray aloud and ask the Lord to help her, and He did, for she passed away without a struggle. She leaves one sister two children, one stepson, 26 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. She leaves a host of relatives and friends to weep over their loss. She was a devoted mother. She was meek and lowly and Christ-like. How can we give her up? But a consoling thought is, "There remains a rest for the people of God."

The fire light falls upon thy vacant chair
The sunbeams rest upon thy grave.

To us who love you, Mother, the world is dark and dreary, the long years stretch out before us lonely and desolate.

Fullness of joy—she has reached it now. God called her away from pain and heartaches, from suffering and death. The tired heart is at rest. We loved her well, but Jesus loved her best.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

—Young people often take offense at older people needlessly. They must not feel slighted every time an older person passes them without sign of recognition. Young people's powers of observation are active and they see the faces of people they meet and readily recognize those they have seen before. It is not so with people advanced in years. The powers of reflection in them have taken the place of the powers of observation. Instead of observing everything that passes before their eyes they are engaged in thought about matters already within their knowledge. This accounts for the fact that you are not recognized by the aged every time you are passed. No offense should be taken. A young man in this city, an usher in his church, has a grievance against his pastor because he sometimes passes him without seeming to see him. The pastor surely does not feel above speaking to the young man; he simply fails to recognize him because he is thinking instead of observing. The world must have thinkers as well as observers. Still it is better for a preacher to leave his state of abstraction and absorption in thought in his study when he goes out among people, and have a keen eye for the faces he meets.

THE HOLY SABBATH.

I do wish all the tired people did but know the infinite rest there is in fencing off the six days from the seventh—in anchoring the business ships of our daily life as the Saturday draws to its close, leaving them to ride peacefully upon the flow or ebb until Monday morning comes again. —Anne Warner.

The Sabbath is necessary, not because it is commanded; but it is commanded because it is necessary.—F. W. Robertson.

HONOR ROLL OF CHURCHES.

[We purpose publishing in this list the names of the churches that pay at least an average of 50 cents a member for the payment of the debt on the Children's Home. We will number them in the order in which they make payment as reported by Captain Rankin, the Treasurer.]

1. Liberty Church, St. Paul Circuit.

—Bro. J. Norman Wills is chairman of the finance committee preparing for the laymen's convention to be held here Feb. 9-11, 13. There are several important committees comprising in their membership many of Greensboro's leading business men. They hope to secure an attendance of 2,500 men from over the State. Mr. Bridgeman, of Illinois, is here as general manager of the campaign. Six years ago he managed the South Carolina campaign.

—Dr. Egbert Smith, Missionary Secretary of the Presbyterian Church, gives testimony to show that attendance at a laymen's missionary convention completely transforms many men—from mere drifters to determined, zealous, joyous, successful church workers. We hope our Methodist Protestant laymen will be well represented in the Greensboro convention.

And it will be a fine meeting for our ministers to attend. There will be instructive, entertaining and inspiring addresses.

—The ninth annual meeting of the home missions council will be held this week in New York. Among the subjects considered in an elaborate program are these: Missionary Work at Ellis Island and at Other Ports of Entry; Conditions and Work Among Immigrants in the West; Immigrant Work and Problems of Immigration in the South; Mountain and Rural Fields in the South; Rural Work in the West.

Rev. G. W. Holmes, president of the Annual Conference, should be addressed at Graham, N. C.

—Rev. J. H. Stowe should be addressed at Matthews, N. C., R. F. D. No. 26.

—Bro. Curry writes that he is highly pleased with his new field. His address is 6058 29th Ave., N. E., Seattle, Wash.

NOTICE.

If any one of our pastors knows of any member of our church living in Charlotte will you not send me their names at once and let me see if they can be enlisted in our cause; for we must act at once and any help you can give will be appreciated. N. G. Bethea.

Elon College, N. C.

Laymen's Convention.—Of the great series of great laymen's conventions in progress or planned for, North Carolina gets but one, and that will be held in Greensboro February 9-13. It is hoped to make it greater in point of attendance and interest than the one held here several years ago, though that one had up toward two thousand in attendance and was highly interesting and inspiring.

An Exalted Idea of Heaven.—They were having a great meeting in one of our churches, shouting and praising God and exulting in their hope of glory. There was present an old woman who was a member of another church, a church that lays great stress on the mode of water baptism and insists that immersion is the only valid mode. During intermission this old woman said to some of our good sisters, "You people needn't be shouting and taking on so: you can't get to Heaven without being immersed." They were astonished and replied: "Don't you think such people as good old Aunt Hannah Jones will get to Heaven?" The old woman answered, "I doubt it, but even if they do, we'll be given a higher seat where we may sit above 'em and spit tobacco juice down on 'em."

—The widow of Judge Albion Tourgee who once lived in Greensboro died recently. Mr. Tourgee died years ago.

—Bro. J. W. Self should be addressed at Winston-Salem, R. D. 5.

—Rev. Chas. J. Edwards' new post-office is Enfield, N. C.

—Tobaccoville, N. C., is the post-office of Rev. T. F. McCulloch.

WHAT TOBACCO DOES.

Dr. Rush: "Even when used in moderation, tobacco causes dyspepsia, headache, tremors, vertigo and epilepsy, and produces many of these diseases that are supposed to be seated in the nerves."

THE SPIRIT OF JESUS THE CHRIST.

As the mountain stands alone with the sky and the stars, so Jesus the Christ stands isolated in His supremacy because of His spirit. He is vastly more than anything He says, vastly more than anything He does. The richest possession of the world is what Jesus is in spirit. True, patient, tender, sympathetic, loving, Godlike in the midst of everyday human experiences, He illustrates the possibility of such a life in the midst of the commonest conditions. Christ's spirit is an incarnation of Christianity. It shines forth like the sun. It is the moral inspiration of the ages. It is the glory of Christendom.

What an ideal is the spirit of Jesus! It shades away into the heavens, and takes on the image of Godlikeness. The motive power of Christianity is the eternal principle of the spirit of Jesus, to lead on the human race to its ultimate triumph over all the obstacles of the world. When God wishes to have a system swing in the sky, a sun surrounded by planets, He does not build a fence around them, He does not chain them to one another. He places in the center the great sun, the source of light and power, and that becomes the attraction that keeps all the planets swinging in their proper places about it as a natural center. What the attraction of the sun is amid the planets, the spirit of Jesus is throughout Christendom. It is a spiritual ideal whose might is in the mind and heart of humanity; it is haunting millions by the thought of possible justice, tenderness, sympathy, purity, love, perfection; it speaks to them, and as they hear its still, small voice above all the turmoil and clamor and war of earth, it has power to reproduce itself in their life and character.

By His spirit Jesus shows what our human nature means, what are its hidden possibilities. He shows us man in full-orbed stature, permeated, controlled, absolutely dominated by the divine. He is the highest manifestation of the Godlike in the human—a sublime object lesson of developed and perfected humanity, the first ripened fruit of a coming magnificent harvest. He proclaims to us, and illustrates for us, what is possible in human nature. The ocean lies glassy before us on a summer afternoon; it ripples quietly at our feet as we sit upon the beach. A terrific storm comes. The water of the ocean, blown upon by the tremendous power of the wind, lifts itself so high that it seems as if it would batter down the cliffs, and overwhelm the mightiest works of man. But the highest wave of the ocean is made up of exactly the same kind of water as the wave that broke in music at our feet, as we sat on the beach on the summer afternoon. That highest wave is the same in kind as the water in the lowest trough of the ocean; it is the common water of the ocean uplifted, upheaved by the continent-sweeping storm, until it appears as if it will strike at the very stars. As the highest wave of the ocean is the same in kind as the common water of the sea, so the nature of Christ is the same in kind as our common human nature. If Christ born on the stock of this old common human nature of ours shows forth such a spirit, He becomes a ringing, inspiring challenge to us to become Godlike in spirit as He is Godlike in spirit. The human nature which in Him blossoms out into Godlikeness is in us; what He becomes, we, too, may become, as the floral seed may become the perfumed glory of the rose. This is a truth to cheer, to lift, to thrill us.

That it is possible for us to have the spirit of Christ, is a sublime fact that raises our life into dignity, and touches it with glory. Jesus is a prophecy of what is possible concerning man. He is humanity's symbol of universal and eternal hope, shining out before the world as a luminous illustration of the possibility of the Christlikeness of all men, and showing that the goal of humanity is to become an incarnation of the Godlike spirit of Jesus. Whatever may be man's spiritual attainments and triumphs, he still sees before him the Christ-ideal, pure as the sky, grand as the cope of heaven, ever inviting him onward and upward. So it is that the spirit of Jesus, as an ever-expanding pattern of spiritual excellence and divine beauty, is to all His disciples as an endless ocean for them to sail on, as a boundless atmosphere for them to breathe, as a limitless space giving them infinite room.

The most sacred, the holiest relationship of earth and time is discipleship with Jesus, because it means seeking to have His spirit. "If any man have not (that is, is not seeking to have) the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." To have the spirit of Christ is to possess His qualities. Take, for example, the quality of sympathy. Christ overflows with sympathy for the weak, for the tempted, for the poor, for those in trouble or distress, the unforttunate in no matter what direction. His presence is to those who have gone wrong, as the spring sun to the invalid who basks in the sunshine. Even those who are the dregs of society come to Him, break their boxes of ointment upon His feet, bathe them with their tears, and wipe them with the hairs of their head. In His sympathetic presence they feel as a plant feels when it is baptized by the dew, when it is refreshed by the life-giving air. Christ is as all embracing in His sympathy as is the blue sky. This gives Him an indefinable personal fascination; it draws the people to Him as a magnet draws steel. As we speak of Christ's sympathy, so we might speak of all the qualities that make Him Godlike in spirit. In the degree that we have these qualities, we have His spirit. As disciples of Christ we seek to live in his spirit, we seek to have our dispositional qualities as perfectly attuned to His dispositional qualities as musical instruments are attuned to each other, when, the keys of the one being touched, there is an echoing chord of response in the other.

It is a natural law that we are, year by year, progressively conformed to the character of our dominant ideal. Instinctively and inevitably we tend to become like, to become assimilated to, that which we really admire and love. By a law as invariable in its workings as that of gravitation we become gradually transformed into the image of that which is the object of our admiration and love. We have the Biblical expression of this fact in these words: "Beholding as in a glass the glory (that is, the spirit) of the Lord, we are changed into the same image." If we take the spirit of Christ as our ideal, we of necessity take on ultimately the image of the ideal to which we devote ourselves. The integrity of the principle, that works this transformation, remains inviolate. In nature we have wonderful transformation. Take the white pond-lily; its blos som is one of most delicate beauty; it is a rare, precious, sweet develpment. Yet nature by a marvelous chemistry takes the black, slimy mud at the bottom of the pond and changes it into the spotless whiteness of the lily. Unspeakably grander, though, is the transformation pictured in the Bible passage, "We all, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the spirit of the Lord."

Christ's spirit is as a clarified atmosphere through which we see the spirit of God. It is as a reflector, the glass polished and without a flaw, giving back the perfect likeness of the God who shines upon it. The harmony of Christ's spirit with God's spirit is such that He can say: "I and my Father are one." This oneness is so complete that Jesus lives in the full blaze of self-conscious Deity. What is Deity? The Bible gives a definition of Deity in its highest characterization of God: "God is love." That is a definition of Deity that will stand forever. Jesus is Deity because His spirit is an embodiment of that love that is the very essence of God's own nature, of God's eternal being. Jesus shows how it is possible for man, by having His spirit, to come into such oneness with God, that God and man are like different notes in a piece of music that are so blended together that they constitute one tune. He prays that all His disciples may have such oneness—"that they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us." In seeking to have the spirit of Jesus, we see how humanity may reach up to God and become absolutely and forever one with the everlasting Father.

A flower cannot be fragrant without scattering its fragrance, and delighting every passer by. A diamond cannot be lustrous without flashing the wealth of its splendor on the eyes of all who look upon it. The sun cannot shine without sending out its rays broadcast through all the heavens. What is true of these objects of the natural world is true of those who possess the spirit of Christ; in them is found the spontaneous activity, the free outplay of those things that make them Christlike. It is natural for them to give forth all fine and sweet and true and divine things, as it is natural for the flower to give forth its perfume, the diamond its brilliancy, the sun its illumination. As we are possessed of the spirit of Christ, we seek to make our life serve, like a great-bosomed, smooth-flowing river which, glassing the sky by day and the stars by night, carries richest verdure and abundant life. As we are possessed of the spirit of Christ, we are established in spiritual experiences and realities, in a life of holiness; we have deep, profound, abiding peace; our inward vision is enraptured with sweet revelations. As we are possessed of the spirit of Christ, we know our own divine nature, we are fashioned into that eternal Image that is stainless Love, we dwell in the very heart of immortality.

When the spirit of Christ shall be incorporated into the common life of the people, we shall have an answer to the prayer, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." We shall then have so much of heaven in this life that the transition to heaven in the next life will be only like that between dawn and the morning. The heavenly bodies swing harmoniously in their orbits because gravitation is complete in its sway over these heavenly bodies. The ideal conditions of mankind will be attained when the spirit of Christ dominates the nations. Then humanity, like the heavenly bodies, will swing, peaceful and glorious, shining in its own orbit, because mutual helpfulness, brotherly good will, and universal love are complete in their sway over all the world.—John Reid Shannon, in Zion's Herald.

FROM A BROTHER IN MORGANTON.

A word, as I understand, is the expression of a thought. I think, therefore have I spoken, and sometimes I may speak, think or write wrong, but we read in God's word, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

In thinking of Rev. T. J. Ogburn's anti-cigarette sermon I thought of a patient here that he ought to have had standing by when he delivered it; if smoking cigarettes caused him to be in the condition he is. Now I don't know that that is the cause of it, but I know that he smokes them when he has the opportunity. If it has caused his condition, to see him ought to cause any reasonable, or I might say common people, to be convinced of the great importance of stopping their use. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death."

If smoking cigarettes doesn't cause death, it may cause an impaired constitution or a wreck for the balance of life. How shall it be stopped? The way to keep a child from cutting itself with the razor is to take it from it; or, better, is not to let it have it at all; but after it has it, take it away as quickly as possible.

Now, with no disrespect do I make mention of the patient, for he can't help his condition now, only to use I would think the best means to restore him to a normal condition again; but that fathers and mothers may consider well the best interest of their boys and girls. For it has been said, that "the hand that rocks the cradle moves the world."

—Rev. G. L. Farrow, of the Indiana Conference, writes to The Methodist Recorder: The Methodist Protestant ministers of Grant County met at the home of Rev. W. W. Lineberry, in Jonesboro, and organized a Methodist Protestant Ministerial Association, to meet once a month in such places as may be designated from time to time by the association. The following officers were elected: N. Vice, president; P. W. Boxell, vice president; G. L. Farrow, secretary-treasurer. Every Methodist Protestant minister and preacher of the county is supposed to be a member of the association, also local preachers. The next meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Building in Marion, the first Monday in January, at 2 o'clock. Every member is requested to be present. The aim is for a bigger and better church.

—Rev. Dr. P. F. Breese, who founded the Pentecostal Church of the Nazarene, in 1895, died in Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 22, at the age of seventy-seven years. He was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church for many years.

WHY DO WE WAIT?

Why do we wait till ears are deaf
  Before we speak our kindly word,
And only utter loving praise
  When not a whisper can be heard?

Why do we wait till hands are laid
  Close-folded, pulseless, ere we place
Within them roses, sweet and rare,
  And lillies in their flawless grace?

Why do we wait till eyes are sealed
  To light and love in death's deep trance,
Dear wistful eyes, before we bend
  Above them with impassioned glance?

Why do we wait till hearts are still
  To tell them all the love that's ours,
And give them such meed of praise,
  And lay above them fragrant flowers?

How oft do we, careless, wait till life's
  Sweet opportunities are past,
And break our "alabaster box
  Of ointment" at the very last!

O, let us heed the living friend
  Who walks with us life's common ways,
Watching our eyes for look of love,
  And hungering for a word of praise!

A NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION.

"I am not making but one resolution this new year," said an energetic business man recently, "and that is to take better care of my health and take time to live right—that is to give my body the treatment it deserves.

"I'm just beginning to realize," said he, "that it is more than a personal matter as to whether we have good health or not. It is such a foolish idea, that old notion that we get sick because we can't help it. Probably we couldn't help it years ago when we didn't know anything about the causes of diseases nor the ways of preventing them. Then, in our ignorance, we just simply took every disease that came along and said God sent them.

"To-doy it's different. Science has taught us better. Health is as much an intellectual matter as is character. In the light of present day knowledge, to live a healthful life is a moral obligation. The trouble is few are willing to pay the price. It takes time and effort. Most people run their lives in such slip-shod fashion that they haven't the time to eat properly, to think properly, nor to rest properly. They have no time for exercise, no time for mental recreation, no time for taking care of themselves. The only thing they do find time for is to die before their time because they couldn't find time to live right.

"As for me," said the speaker, "I intend to use the same amount of intelligence in keeping up my health this year that I shall use in keeping up my business. One is as much my duty as the other."—State Board of Health.

THE JOURNAL.

Before this reaches you it is earnestly hoped that the journals will have reached their destination. I did my best to get them all out last week but owing to the inability of the printer to get them all finished some had to be carried over into this week. I am hoping to mail the rest of them today-Monday.

I believe in giving full credit to every one, so I will try to give proper credits for work on the Journal. Bro. Curry made the contract and arranged the order of the Jounal. He also managed the business part of it until he left, which was about ten days after Conference. Neither Bro. Curry nor myself knew that Conference had elected Bro. McCulloch to read the proof for some time after Conference, so we engaged Prof. T. C. Amick to read the proceedings of Conference; then when we learned that Bro. J. F. McCulloch was to read the proof we sent the remainder to him. Bro. Bates collected the material and mailed it out from Conference and I have looked after the business part of it since Bro. Curry left. left.

Why it is so late, I do not know. When there seemed to be a considerable sentiment in favor of getting those reports in, I told the printer to wait a few days if necessary in order to get the reports in. I then wrote personal letters asking for the reports and most of them came. After about five days I 'phoned the printer to go ahead anyway and he says he was out of work just about one day as result of my order. Then last week I spent four afternoons right in the printing office taking the journals just as soon as they were finished and mailed them out according to the order of the names appearing on the list sent me by Bro. Hutton. This will explain why some received journals so much earlier than others.

Now I have done my best at the job and there are two people glad—you in that you have received the journal and I in that it is off of my hands and that I am never to have the job again.

J. E. Pritchard.

Burlington, Jan. 10, 1916.

Whose Money Is It?—Brother Hutton says there was one envelope handed in in which there was $1,00 for journal and that there was no name on the envelope. If any charge raised $1.00 for the journal and does not receive ten journals by the last of this week, please let me know and I will send them.

What to do with Journal Money—. Sell the journals sent you at ten cents a copy and use the money in paying your journal assessment for this year. Send this money to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Treas., Henderson, N. C. If you order extra copies, this money should be sent to me.

THE ROYAL LAW AND GOLDEN RULE.

We thank Rev. A. D. Shelton for his pledge of $5.00 to help rebuild our church. We are very anxious to know our financial strength that we may be able to plan our building. We ask nothing more than that our churches keep the royal law as given in James ii. 8 and the golden rule in Matt. vii. 12. This done, we will go forward without embarrassment. Let each church give us just like they would have us give them if their own church were burned. Denton is a growing town and we expect to build up for the future. Help us now and you will be glad of it later. Let us have your cash or pledges to be paid by May.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

Official Announcement.

The North Carolina Convention of the National Convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement is to be held in Greensboro next month, the 9th, 10th, 11th and 13th. It is the desire of the Convention Committee of which Mr. A. M. Scales is Chairman, to make this Convention one of the biggest and best of the seventy-five or more to be held in the principal cities throughout the nation. The Committee is working for a registered attendance of 1,000 men from Greensboro and Guilford County, and of 1,500 men from the State outside, and there is every reason why this many men should be present. God is calling upon the manhood of America to stand for Him throughout the world as never before. The Old North State is rich in her Christian manhood. The Lord is pouring great blessings upon these and entrusting them with large riches. It is right and fitting that these men should come together to consider their King's business. Men high in the councils of the missionary activities of the co-operating churches will be present as speakers, thus insuring a strong and inspiring program. Every church should be represented at this Convention by its pastor, one or more wide-awake laymen and also a good man, or so, not yet specially interested in missions. If this is done it is impossible to estimate the beauty and power of new life resulting. God's cause in this commonwealth will be enlarged and intensified, and the light of our churches will shine with increasing brightness and steadiness even to the uttermost parts of the earth.

The men of our churches should become active in the interest of this Convention at once. Plan to send your pastor, paying his railroad fare and hotel bill, plan to attend yourself.

Send your registration fee of $1.00 to A. C. Bridgman, Ex. Sec., Y. M. C. A. Building, Greensboro, N. C., and he will enroll you as a delegate and mail you your credential.

In Kind: C. Tarkington, 2 bags peanuts; M. P. Murphy, load hay; Miss Millie Bowman, 4 stands bees; Mrs. Bettie Conklin, S. C., half doz. towels; Mrs. L. A. Hatley one 42-piece dinner set.

A Correction: Last week I reported $5.00 from Miss Pauline Floyd for best attendance in S. S.; it should have been from the Intermediate Class. She made the best average and then gave the prize to the Home,—a good example.

Don't you think the weekly reports show an increased interest in the work? If you haven't watched the reports regularly I want to remind you of some of the things that happened since the Annual Conference.

A class of young ladies, Tiffin, Ohio, voted unanimously to clothe a child a year and sent $5.00; the Ladies' Aid, Brookville, Md., took the obligation and sent $16.50 with their pledge; the Intermediate Dept., Christ Church S. S., Baltimore, sent us a check for $25, the full amount to clothe one, making three children to be clothed from outside the North Carolina borders. Other schools and individuals have contributed and still encouraging letters come.

The Baracas, Grace Ch., Greensboro, paid out before the end of their year and have made a larger pledge, $150, and say that they hope to do more; it will be done.

People at a distance always want to know what home folks think of an enterprise. Now what is our duty? Let us do our full duty and see what the result will be.

PRAY FOR WORLD PEACE.

Pray that God's will may be done in this war, that it may be settled speedily in justice and righteousness; for our President and Secretary of State and Congress; for courage to teach peace to our children and to stand by the principles and teaching of Jesus. Pray for all who suffer on battlefields, for all stricken hearts and homes; for our nation that we may be truly Christian; for forgiveness if we have any roots of bitterness or hatred in our hearts; for love that finds a way where force and hate fail; for new legislation when peace comes that shall prove that we all believe in the teachings of Jesus.—From Bulletin of Federation of Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies.

A PARABLE OF PENNIES.

At an English missionary meeting an earnest speaker had been telling about the trials and triumphs of God's work among the heathen.

A collection was then taken, and as it was a children's meeting the plates came back with a great many pennies. These looked very much alike, but the steward who counted them over said they differed wonderfully.

"How so?" asked a teacher.

"Because of the different feelings with which they were put into the plate," answered the steward.

Then he gave a little history of what had happened as he passed the plate among the classes.

One boy thought colections should not be taken at a missionary meeting. "When I give," said he, "I want to give without being asked. But as the plate is here, right under my nose, I suppose I must give something. Pity, though, I can't come to a meeting without being dunned for money."

With this the boy threw the penny in. "I call that an iron penny," said the steward. "It came from a hard, iron heart, and the hand that gave it was a cold and merciless hand."

As the plate passed on it reached another boy. He was laughing and talking with a boy in the class behind him. The plate waited a second, while the boy's teacher tapped him on the shoulder, saying, "Have you your penny ready?"

"A penny?" said the boy, turning about. "What's a penny; a penny's nothing; here goes a penny for the heathen!" And, so saying, he tossed his penny in, and at once looked about for some more fun. "That boy's penny," said the steward, "I call tin."

The plate went on its way and presently met a boy of another sort. His penny was ready. He had been holding it between thumb and finger in such a way that his classmates might all see it. Looking round to make sure that they were all now watching him, he dropped it in with a self-satisfied air and with a loud thump. "A brass penny, that," said the steward, as he kept on counting.

"But the next kind that I got was a great deal better," he pursued. "It came from a little fellow who had been listening to every word of the speaker, and whose heart was touched with real pity."

As the plate drew near this boy, he turned to his teacher and whispered, while a tear dimmed either eye, "I'm very sorry for the heathen! Of course I'll give a penny, and I only wish that I had more to give."

"I call that a silver penny," said the steward.

"But now I have the best of all," he added, as he held up a clean and bright new copper coin.

"This I shall call a golden penny, for as I held out the plate to get it, I heard the boy that gave it say, 'I love my Saviour. He wants the poor heathen to know how much He loves them, and to learn His pleasant ways. I will give my penny gladly for His sake. And I would give anything I have to carry out His wish if I knew He wanted it.' "—The Missionary Speaker.

FROM HENDERSON TO ELON COLLEGE.

Hurry through the snow was what it meant the Monday morning we left Henderson for our home at Elon College. The snow came while we were packing and we never stopped for that only to rest on the Sabbath. Through the kindness of T. P. Stewart, Eugene Pardue, E. E. Edwards, J. W. Floyd, Dr. R. J. Gill, James Fuller, and W. T. Pardue, our household goods were loaded in the car at Henderson. We thank all these brethren very much for their timely aid. Through the carelessness of the depot clerk our things never left till Tuesday at noon, and Mr. I. J. Young took care of my cows and horse on Monday night; while Mrs. Bethea and the little ones come on to Burlington Sam and I had the privilege of spending the night with Bro. Neese and taking dinner with Bro. Taylor. Getting off Tuesday afternoon stopping over at Burlington for the night, our goods beat us here, getting in at 1:30 Tuesday night.

Prof. Amick helped to care for us till we got in shape to set up for ourselves. Grip has seized every member of the family except the madam and she kept so busy it hasn't caught up with her yet. So many of our old friends have come to see us that we haven't had time to be lonesome. Preachers, too, among them. Bro. Gerringer has been to see us three times, Bro. Pritchard twice, and Bro. Bowman once. We were also favored by a visit from Misses Nell Pickens and Sudie Powell. Two of our nieces from Greensboro spent New Year's and Sunday with us. This has all helped to make the lonesomeness of moving into a new place less.

We were glad of so many remembrances from our old friends during Christmas Holidays. Wish we could answer every card and letter. John Gill's big sack of pecans lifted the burden from Santa Claus some as did substantial gifts from Dr. Gill, C. W. Finch, Mrs. Sol Satterwhite and Miss Lizzie Pardue. We will not forget the good friends on Granville and are sure that Bro. Williams is in good hands. While we have no people that we can call our own as a regular charge, yet we feel that we have the prayers of the entire Conference as we undertake this great work, for already I have about six months of work planned. So much to do. Please enter my name on your prayer list, praying people, for I need your help in this way.

We are now settled in our own home and the door is always open to our friends.—Come, we will give you a hearty welcome.

I go to Charlotte this week to look after our interests there through most of January. Write me at Elon College and it will be forwarded till Charlotte address is given.

Sincerel , N. G. Bethea.

DISTRICT C. E. CONVENTION.

The C. E. societies in the northwestern part of N. C. will hold a rally and district convention in Greensboro on Jan. 15, 16, in the new Church of the Covenant. The first meeting will be held at 2:30 p. m., Sat., Jan. 15, and will be in the nature of a junior rally.

The afternoon's exercises will be under the supervision of Mrs. L. W. McFarland, of High Point, State Supt. of Junior Work in N. C. A very interesting and instructive program is being arranged for this rally.

On Sat. evening, after the session of the convention, a reception will be held in honor of the visiting delegates, and for the purpose of getting better aiquainted.

Sunday morning, Rev. Murphy Williams will preach a special sermon to the Endeavorers. The Sunday afternoon session will be given over to short talks by Endeavor experts on "Increase and Efficiency." Sunday night's session will close the convention, and at this time addresses will be delivered by several of the best speakers in C. E. work in the South.

The leading figure of the convention is Mr. Evans of Louisville, Ky., Field Secretary of the All-South Extension Committee. He will be present at all the sessions, will deliver addresses on two or three occasions, and lead a conference on practical methods in C. E. work. Another prominent speaker will be Dr. Sylvester Newlin, of High Point, formerly of Cal. The State President, Mr. Geo. L. Mitchell, of Wilmington, will be present and will conduct a model C. E. meeting.

It is the aim and hope of the local endeavorers that no evangelical church in this district will be without its strong society of young people when the year 1916 comes to a close.

THe BIRDS.

The birds! the birds! Partridges, I mean. The wheat and corn lands are just swarming with them. The woods, old fields and barn yards are so thick with them that you can scarcely step without treading on them. They have become so excessively numerous that some men have become dog-trainers, the tail end of all jobs, I presume. Of course we do not see them but they are here in unlimited numbers—must be for the very good reason that bird hunters have been telling us for the past thirty-five or forty years that if they were thinned out they would pair off better and become more numerous. Strange to say that, in the face of every evidence to the contrary, they continue to use the same rot yet as an excuse for killing the birds. If they increase faster, by your "thinning them out", as you call it, where are they, please? They are in a fair way of becoming extinct within a few more years, which you very well know. When the writer was a boy there were from 25 to 50—perhaps 50 would be the nearer number—against one now. Those who lived in the country could hear their morning hymns at early dawn from either side of the house, as they praised their Maker more perfectly than their merciless destroyers have ever done. I do not remember to have heard their sweet and cheerful morning notes within the past ten or fifteen years. They have been driven away from our dwellings or dare not give vent to the momentary gladness in their little hearts at day break. It is a shame that these pretty, innocent and useful birds have been and are being sacrificed for no other purpose than the ignoble, sordid and savage pleasure of a very few men. At least fifty per cent. of those engaged in this destruction are not worth as much to the country as the birds they destroy. They seem to have no ambition at all above loafing and hunting. These are painful facts that truth compels every observer to admit. I boldly repeat that it is a burning shame that the great mass of humanity must be deprived of the pleasure and profit of said birds for no higher end than to furnish pastime for such worthless characters as mentioned above. I have had farmers to tell me that they did not make more than half of a crop of wheat while their neighbors had almost a bumper crop under the same conditions. It seems strage indeed that said crops should be excellent all over the whole neighborhood except one or two farms. There is a cause for this shortage. Perhaps those losers decided to have a little sport, shot at and killed a few of their partridges and larks and scared the rest away or maybe you allowed a hunter with a dog to hunt on your farm. If this is the case you need not expect the partridges to return. They went home with the hunter. When a covey is found their doom is sealed, for the dog, true to its nature, will hunt down every bird, and if the hunter is anything like an expert shot the poor bird has not the slighest chance to escape. When the dog finds one it stands perfectly still until its master gets near enough that escape is utterly impossible; but if it should, it would avail it nothing, for the dog would hunt it down again. I admit that hunters say they don't get them all—that is, they presume they don't. This argument is as weak and senseless as the "thinning out" business. Anything for an excuse to continue their savage pleasure. The very best thing for the farmers and bird hunters is for the land owners to refuse positively to allow any one to kill a bird on lands within the next five years. This would give the birds a chance to increase. It is evident to all observing and intelligent country people, that something must be done to preserve the partridges or they will become extinct before many more years are numbered with the past. Then we will learn whether the farmer will be compelled to spray his wheat and corn fields as the fruit growers have to spray their trees. An Observer.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Reidsville.—We are on this work the 3rd year and have started in with renewed interest and trust that with our knowledge of the people, the needs of the work, and a full cooperation of all concerned, we can accomplish more than we have in any preceding year. Our Sunday school and church attendance on last Sunday was encouraging.

We are trying to make, plan, and carry out a better system of church finances.

Our first quarterly conference met at Reidsville at night, Dec. 17th. Reidsville was right well represented, but Bethany and Sandy Cross neither had an official member present, but it may be that they will say I ought to say in connection with this that the weather was unfavorable, which I here do say; but I trust that they at the same time will allow me to say that I fill appointments when the weather is worse. We believe, though, our conference did good, and we are confidently expecting better and greater things for this work. Bro. Romie Gunn was elected secretary of our conference, a good young man, and we believe well qualified for the place.

President Holmes was with us at Reidsville on last Thursday night, and made an interesting talk on the general interest of the church, after which he preached a good but short sermon. His talk indicated that we as Methodist Protestants must do more, better and greater things. I am sure that I can say that the President's visit at this place was well received. We regret very much, on account of bad weather, he did not get to Bethany and Sandy Cross. I have made 71 visits and have taken seven subscriptions and renewals for our church paper since Conference. We were remembered with a number of nice presents during the holidays, and in addition to that Mrs. Lowdermilk and the writer jointly received the largest cash present that it has ever been our privilege to enjoy.

Others have shown great kindness to us in giving sausage, fresh meats, butter, milk, and perhaps other things that I do not just now recall. Mrs. Lowdermilk joins me in saying, Many blessings upon all who have shown us such great kindness. Trusting that this year will bring enlarged blessings to every member on this charge, both temporally and spiritually, I am E .G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

Stanly Ct.—Dear Bro. Holmes: Our 1st quarterly conference was held at Albemarle, Jan. 8th. All churches were represented and reports were good for an early conference, and the brethren seemed hopeful for the future.

The interest in the work seems to be growing. One evidence of this fact is that, of their own accord, they increased pastor's salary $50.00. Albemarle is taking steps to build a parsonage preparatory to becoming a station, and I feel sure that in the near future her hopes will be realized. The church here is growing by leaps and bounds. They do things here.

We are fortunate to have Bro. Johnson from High Point as a permanent fixture in our midst, and our church is already feeling the influence of his life. We are glad, too, to have Bro. Carl Moton, son of Rev. J. H. Moton, among us. Carl is making good, and we hope to make even a more useful man out of him than his father. We have had many expressions of kindness from the people since Conf. Among the many, Bro. James Gantt is the most prominent giver. First, a sack of flour, then a pocket book. My! thought the recipient; what's the use of that? But now he is filling it for us. For all these I am truly grateful. W. D. Reed.

Thomasville.—Dear Editor: Our work here has started off so well this year I want the people to know some of the things we are doing and some of the things we are going to do. Our partition across the opening into the S. S. room has been completed of which we are very proud. We have had a hot air system fixed round the stove which adds a great deal toward heating the church. We are having book racks put on the backs of the benches. Bro. Garefild Beck is doing this free of charge and we are so thankful to him. After this is completed we hope to raise money enough so that we can furnish hymn books for all who attend church service. The Senior and Junior Philathea classes are going to hold a leap-year quarter social in the Baraca Social hall next Thursday night. We have a nice program ; after this we will have a social hour of games. Refreshments will be served by the classes. We hope every one will come and help a good cause.

Our attendance at S. S. yesterday was the largest for some time—142. We hope for more next Sunday. Our pastor preached excellent sermons last Sunday. At night he began a series of sermons on the ten commandments which will continue for the next ten Sunday nights. We all love Mr. Pritchett very much and thank the M. P. Conference for sending him. May God's richest blessings rest upon us all. Reporter.

Welch Memorial.—Since I have been elected reporter I wil ltry to report a few things. First I want to say we ought to be congratulated on being able to get Rev. A. D. Shelton to be our pastor. We have all learned to love him. He and his good wife make a good fit for the church. The prospects look bright for a good year.

Bro. Shelton preached two good sermons yesterday. His subject at eleven o'clock was "A Cheerful Religion," and at night "Lost Opportunities." After services Sunday night we organized a ladies' aid society with 25 or 30 members. Our S. S. is holding its own very well for the winter. The attendance for Jan. 2nd was 126; Jan. 9th, 111. We expect to build an addition to our church in the near future,—work that should have been done last year. The prayer meeting is taking on new life, but it is far from being what it ought to be. If the prayer meeting is the pulse of the church, the church generally has a weak pulse. We are to have our revival meeting commencing the 1st Sunday in April with Rev. H. L. Powell for pulpit help. We are looking forward to a good meeting. Remember us when you pray.

F. W. Easter, Rep.

Spring Hill, Piedmont Ct.—Rev. J. W. Self spent Sat. night and Sunday at A. A. Moore's and Sunday afternoon filled his appointment at Spring Hill; had a very good congregation. Bro. Self spent Sunday night at I. I. York's. Stewards' report for last Sunday, $2.75. Collection for Children's Home, $1.00 from the Sunday-school.

Bro. J. B. Swaim will close his singing school at Spring Hill next Sunday, Jan. 16th. Everybody is invited to come and hear the class sing. Glad to say those sick in our neighborhood are better.

Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Welborn and took their infant son. Burial in Spring Hill cmeetery.

Denton.—The fourth Sun. in Dec. we accepted Bro. Reed's invitation to visit Stanly Ct. in the interest of our building fund. We visited Albemarle and Porter and report result as follows:

Albemarle: John Snotherly, $2; Wm. Snotherly, $1; R. E. Eudy, $1; W. H. Efird, $1; Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Furr, $5; Mrs. L. W. Williams, $1; D. L. Hatley, $1; Mrs. John Snotherly, $1; Carl Efird, $1; Lassiter Hatley, $5; C. W. Hatley, $1; Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Hatley, $5; Miss Ruth Hatley, $1; W. A. Harwood, $2; Miss Flora Baucom, $5; Miss Swan Plyler, $2; Mrs. D. L. Hatley, $1; Miss Pansy Plyler, $1; Miss Grace Plyler, $1; Mrs. W. A. Harwood, $1; Miss Lenner Efird, $1; J. W. Johnson, $5; Ira Plyler, $2; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gannt, $3; W. E. Cranford, $1; total, $51.

Porter: Geo. H. Thompson, $1; Mrs. M. J. Marbry, $1; W. H. Mabry, $1; Mrs. Amanda Whitlock, $1; C. L. Fultz, $1; C. F. Marbry, $0.50; Mrs. G. H. Thompson, $0.50; total, $6.00.

We certainly thank these good people for their hearty response to our appeal for help to rebuild our church at Denton We were also pleased to see the improvements made on the interior of our church at Albemarle. Porter has a new church which is a credit to the good people of that vicinity. Our membership here is small, but courageous. This church some day will be a strong point.

We were sorry that Bro. Reed, the pastor, was unable to be present on account of injuries sustained when his horse ran away at Albemarle. We trust he may soon be at his post of duty again. We thank him and his people for their kind help in this time of need.
Geo. L. Reynolds.

Spring Church Ct.—We have been here some time and the people here are still so good to us it seems that we have just arrived. When we came we had nothing in the Parsonage and our things were not here, so were taken to Bro. H. E. Vassar's. There we were made to feel at home, and everything was provided for our comfort. By and by our things came and we then moved into the Parsonage, and then the good things began to come in. Mr. Paul Stevenson gave the Parsonage a good cook stove and Mrs. Danham gave a dining table. The others had already supplied us with plenty of good things to cook; so we proceeded to cook, and then to eat, drink and be merry. And as I said in the beginning things are still coming in. We held our first quarterly conference Jan. 1. It was well attended and a great deal of interest manifested in every way. We find the people here very good to us in every way, and are thoughtful of us in our every need. We are liking our place and enjoying our work fine.
R. L. Hethcox, Pastor.

Denton.—As I have been appointed reporter for this church, I decided to give a brief report at the beginning of the year. Bro. G. L. Reynolds preached us two interesting sermons Sunday morning and night. We reorganized our Sunday school and elected Bro. A. A. Hill superintendent. We started in this year with renewed energy and determination to make this year's work the best. We are by no means discouraged in the plans of rebuilding our church, but are encouraged by the sympathy other churches are showing us, by pledging some amount, and we appreciate it very much. Although we have had a great blow to our church financially, we think we have been helped spiritually and by God's help we will succeed in rebuilding our church.
Nannie Hill, Reporter.

Flat Rock Letter.—Mr. Cecil has systematically opened up the work of the year and we are pleased with our pastor. But more of church news later, and now some Christmas thoughts on Conference.

Previously having attended the periods devoted to sermons, this year we took in two days of business My! How it appeals to us and has absorbed our thoughts since. There the young ministers who struggled through poverty, contempt and contumely of the proud, standing at the front, the older ones to retirement and rest, the non-college bred but natural born preachers holding their station in the rank. And those best equipped, with their undying longings, (expressed to us) for a more aggressive body, both pastors and parishioners.

Our Father God! before whom men bow, and angels cry, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, casting their crowns at Thy feet, we come to Thee. Thou hast promised wisdom. What can we do as a church to change the situation. Our church that loathes oppression and bigotry and one-man power. We have ever heard of this, but how the vail has been lifted recently, and we have seen till our brain reels and our heart sickens. Our church a home for the weakest, a harbor for little children. Oh, our Father, omnipotent God, transform it, we pray Thee, into a harbinger of all good. And let us as a body do our part in this great work of transfomation. Every one his part. One thing we know: we are not giving as it is our blessed privilege. We are not. God taught the tenth, and God is good. Who shall gainsay? This is an age of combines. Some minister from the heights, some minister who has received much, set the ball rolling. Start a list in the Herald and all who will pledge themselves for a tenth for ten years both ministry and laity.—Should all report, 'twould revolutionize things at the expiration of this time. The college would be built and endowedandevery circuit built up.

Buncombe Ct.—We reached home from Columbia, S. C., where we spent the holidays, on the 28th. We are back and on the job. Our first quarterly conference will be held at Clark's Chapel on Sat. before the 4th Sun. in Jan. when I hope to see all of the officials present. There is some important matter to come before the conference and I hope to see all of the churches represented. I am looking for a great year. May God bless all of th readers of the Herald.

We were well pleased with the crowds at Terry's Fork and Pleasant Gap Sunday —the crowds were small but the interest was good. We received one new member at Pleasant Gap. Pray for us for a good year. Yours in the fight till He come.
T. E. Martin, Pastor.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Ct.—For the first time I write a letter to our dear paper. The holidays were spent with cheerfulness and thankfulness. We had a community Xmas tree Tuesday at two o'clock. The children had recitations for which they deserve credit, and also the ones that trained them. Rev. Willis Walker with a heart-stirring prayer and excellent talk, filled the place of our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, who we regret very much could not be with us. May this exercise prove to be something in the future, as we all know the children of today are the future community.

The sick of our neighborhood are improving. Success to the Herald and all of its readers.
Mrs. C. B. Boger..

Rehoboth, Granville Ct.—On the first Sunday in this month we had our regular service at Rehoboth church. It was a cloudy and threatening day, but a large congregation was present tolisten to a very interesting sermon taken from Matt. 4: 20, "And they straightway left their nets and followed him." We are glad to welcome Rev. D. R. Williams into our church and community. The Sunday school attendance was larger than usual. The following officers were elected to serve for the new year: Mr. Sam Hunt, Supt.; Mr.

Egbert Kittrell, Sec.; Miss Maud Wrenn, organist; Mis sHattie Harris, Miss Perron, Miss Crystal Bobbitt, Mr. E. C. Harris, Mrs. J. W. Wrenn, teachers. We are looking forward to much good. The people seem more interested than ever before, when they look around and see so much to be done.

Let's "lend a hand" and by so doing win stars for our crown.

Crystal Bobbitt.

Greensville Ct.—Reached this charge the latter part of Nov. My househuld goods were placed on cars before we left Denton, but they were delayed for about four weeks. Consequently we have spent most of the time in visiting. We are now temporarily located near Triplet. Our first quarterly conference was held at Philadelphia Sat. before the first Sunday in this month. Everything moved along nicely. Officers were elected for this year, the pastor's salary was raised ten per cent. We also elected a committee of five for the purpose of selling the old parsonage and building a new one. The lot for the new parsonage was located near Triplet. Plans and specifications will be made known on the 22d of this month.

The contract will be let to the lowest bidder. We are looking forward with the expectation of making this one of the best years on this circuit and trust that each member on Greensville Ct. may look the facts squarely in the face and see them just as they are, whether they be pleasant or unpleasant; then as brave men we should prepare to meet conditions with forces that will change them. With best wishes, J. M. Morgan.

Harmony, S. C.—We have a new roof on a part of our church. We expect to finish it with some other improvements soon. We want to get wire and fence in the cemetery as soon as we can get up the money. We may have to call on old Brother Bates to help us get this up.

Well, I understand that we are to have W. A. Lamar for our new preacher. He has been down here before and I think the people like him very much and will be glad to accept him as their new preacher and every one is now getting anxious to see him. He never came last preaching day. We understand that there is a young Miss Preacher at the parsonage, the reason he never came. The Rev. Travis Taylor, a minister of the Baptist Ch., preached for us the 4th Sabbath.

Pray for us that we may be able to realize our great need as we should and that we will not make any mistake in our application for help again. Sincerely,

James A. Hughes.

NOTICE.

Rev. C. A. Cecil will begin protracted services at his next appointment at Flat Rock Church, next fourth Sabbath.

Conference Evangelist, Rev. N. G. Bethea, will do the preaching. He is a most excellent preacher and revivalist.

You filled our house to overflowing at S. S. Convention. Can't you do likewise then? Only one service in the day on Sunday. Reporter.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

The Conference Journal has come at last. And in coming has vexed us much. The Journal looks well. The cuts are very good; but the errors are vexatious indeed. Take Flat Rock Circuit, for instance. Statistical report,— "No. conversions 40" "No. accessions ——."—whereas there was a net increase of 29 after deducting all lossess. Again, "Deceased, 36"—whereas there were only six, I think. Such a death rate as the Journal shows would be frightful.

Again, the Financial Report credits the Ladies' Aid with having raised $300. That looks good; but it is not true. It should be $30. Who is at fault we do not know; but it is too bad.

(Bro. Kennett will be surprised to learn that every one of these vexatious errors pointed out by him was made by the pastor of Flat Rock Ct. last year in making out his report. We have the reports in the Herald office and find that the printer followed copy faithfully in giving the figures and blanks to which Bro. Kennett objects.—Editor.)

Mebane Items.—We held our first quarterly conference at Hebron last Saturday at 2:30 p. m. Attendance was not very good. Reports fairly good. Spirit of the conference fine. It was decided to pay pastor's salary monthly. Plans for raising assessments for general interests have been made and we believe all will be raised.

There has been some sickness among our members. Among those who have been sick are Mrs. Fogleman, Mrs. Qualls, and Mrs. Wilson Sykes. Some of the children have been sick also. We are glad that all are improving now. Bro. John W. Nicholson was shut in a day or two—it takes something to keep him in. It was pain and the doctor's orders this time.

Last week we reported special kindnesses from our people—that was only a kind of foretaste. Monday night of last week we were sitting quietly in the parsonage when the sound of many voices reached our ears. Then the click of the gate, then footfalls on the porch. We started for the door, but we were too late—Bro. J. W. Nicholson, who seemed to be captain of the forces, had already opened it and said—"We want to go to the dining room." Without waiting he pressed forward followed by by some thirty or more others. All of them appeared to know the way—guess they had been there before. In a minute the dining room was full of people We cannot undertake an inventory or give names. That would take too much space. After they had pounded us, a pleasant social hour was spent together. There were songs and the pastor led in prayer. He also told of the bashful young man who had finally worked his courage up to the point of proposing to his lady love. When he did so she said, "Why, you frighten me." He lapsed into prolonged silence; finally she said, "Why don't you scare me again?" The pastor said the point he made was that he was scared; but was perfectly willing to be scared again just any time. The pounding was not fully completed that night. Packages continued to come in next day. Such kindness heartens us and confirms our former verdict—that we have a kind people to serve.

Last Sunday Mrs. Emma Terrell was received into the Mebane Church. She came to us from the Baptist Church of Durham.

We wish for all our brethren in the pastorate a very happy and successful year, and this wish certainly includes our worthy President and also the editor of the Herald.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Ct.—Owing to the disagreeable weather we had no preaching 2d Sun. in Dec. But our pastor was with us today and preached two excellent sermons. We are indeed glad to have Mr. Gerringer with us for another year; we feel that it would be impossible to have a better pastor. He asked the Christians to resolve at the beginning of the new year to know, to do, and to love God's will. If we church members were as interested in God's work as our pastor is we could do something worth while. Pray for us that we may become aroused and make this the best year in the history of our church.

Since my last report death has visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Raper and taken away their infant son. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor.

We have our prayer meetings on Sunday afternoons; have been having good meetings.

Best wishes to all Herald readers.

St. Paul.—Our first quarterly meeting convened on Thursday, Jan. 6, 1916, at 7:30 p. m. in St. Paul church. The usual business was done after which Bro. J. Norman Wills spoke to the brethren very earnestly and pleasantly, exhorting them to make every effort they could to eliminate the appropriation made to this Ct. by the board of church extension. The board has been appropriating one hundred and twenty dollars per year to this work for three years. At our last Annual Conference the board reduced the appropriation $25, and Bro. Wills asked the conference to raise that $25, so that the pastor might not be the loser, which they agreed to do. The pastor was asked to apportion the same among the churches, which is as follows: St. Paul's, $9.00; Liberty, $7.00; Brown Summit, $4.50; Liberty Grove, $4.50. This quarterly meeting was the only real quarterly meeting we have had in three years,—since Liberty and Liberty Grove have been on the work. There were six representatives from Liberty, two from Liberty Grove; these all came in automobiles, a distance of 25 miles. They were enthusiastic and they said, "We are going to attend our quarterly meetings from this on." Those from Liberty were J. L. Hardin, A. W. Curtis, J. W. Curtis, Sec. of the conference, George Smith, Joe Swaim and Dr. F. A. Shepherd. Liberty Grove was represented by Bro. A. P. Brower and his son, Otis Brower. The meeting was a good one. The Ladies' Aid of St. Paul had prepared a supper for the visiting brethren, which they seemed to appreciate very much, and their expressions gave pleasure to the Ladies' Aid. St. Paul was well represented by our best men. One thing marred the enthusiasm of the pastor: Brown Summit was not represented. This is the first time they have not been represented in three years. They will be there next time. G. F. Millaway.

Guilford Ct.—While husband was away in Greensboro to spend the day last Tuesday, the good people of Mitchell's Grove took the "parsoness" by surprise and just bombarded the parsonage right. Abo[illegible] 1:30 I heard a car stop in front of the house, but as they often stop there to mend a tire, or fix some little thing that's out of order, I didn't notice that anything was happening out there until I heard Bro. Hendrix say, "I believe we've run them off." I looked out and there they were unloading two automobiles, and in a few minutes a buggy and wagon came up also.

I couldn't do anything but just look on, as the children, Samuel and Julia, and I were alone and defenseless.

On they came, bringing us sugar, coffee, flour, meat, potatoes, blueing, starch, flavoring, honey, butter, soda, canned peaches, tomatoes, blackberries, pickled beets, pumpkins, chimney and wicks for lamp, and fodder for Nell, our faithful horse.

The pastor being absent, we had a short service with Miss Martha Parsons presiding. Sang several songs, then Bro. Winfield Davis led the prayer service, others joining in. We felt the presence of the Lord with us.

I feel to say here that a number of the good M. E. people joined in this pounding, and we sincerely appreciate these tokens of love from them, and also from our own people. May the Giver of all good things bless this people and help them to cooperate each with the other and with the pastor, that we may do more his year than ever before, to advancing Christ's Kingdom here on this work. Mrs. S. M. Needham.

Eden, Halifax Ct.—We are all glad to have Mr. Swaringen back again this year.

Quite a large congregation met him at Eden the first Sunday. In the morning Bro. Swaringen preached a splendid sermon, but he always does that. In the afternoon the members of the church met and assessed themselves for this year. You know we just tried the budget plan last year and it works fine. On the following Monday there were all-day services,—preaching in the morning and the quarterly conference in the afternoon.

Annie White, Reporter.

Rockingham Charge.—I came to this charge the 15th of December. Spent the first night with Bro. J. W. Jenkins who has been sick for some time. Everything is moving on nicely at Pee Dee M. P. Church. We are having one of the best Sunday schools there in the town. The pastor is pleased with such a good S. S.

The S. S. at St. John's is not so large, but this school is taking on new life.

The quarterly conference was held, and the spirit of harmony prevailed.

Paid on pastor's salary: Pee Dee, $5.25, St. John's, $1.00. Some of Conference claim paid. We are praying for a successful year. W. B. Surratt. Pas.

Rockingham, N. C., Jan. 10, 1916.

High Point.—No report has been given of the work in High Point since Christmas, but we are moving on as usual doing our best. We had a splendid Christmas entertainment with a packed house. Our young people rendered "What Happened to Santa," and did it well. The people were so kind to the pastor and his family at Christmas time that the joy-bells were kept ringing in our hearts.

On Sunday morning we reorganized our Sunday school, and made our plans for the best year yet in Sunday school work. Mr. A. M. Idol was elected superintendent of the school for the 14th time. He has served faithfully and well in that capacity and seems like a father to all our young people. Mr. R. H. Shaw, Jr., was re-elected assistant Supt. Mr. Lester Teague was elected secretary treasurer with Miss Rozena Perryman assistant; Miss Gertha Trogdon organist with Miss Grace Gurley assistant; Mrs. A. G. Dixon superintendent of the primary department, to choose her own assistants; Miss Lizzie Ferree superintendent of the home department, to choose her assistants; Miss Edith Sechrest superintendent of the cradle roll department, and Mr. A. G. Hough librarian, to choose his assistants. On the first Sunday of 1915 the 250 people present pledged themselves to do their very best to make the average attendance for the year 225, that being an increase of 26 over the year 1914. The members of the school worked so well that during the year there were enrolled over 600 in all departments, and the average attendance of the main school was 311.

On the first Sunday in this year with 275 present we stood and pledged ourselves to work this year to make the average attendance for the year 350. We realize that we have set a rather high mark, but with 600 or 700 people who ought to be in our S. S. and with our people at work we ought to reach it easily. Our slogan is, "Every resident member of the church in the S. S. and as many more." That would mean 700 in the various departments, and we ought to have it. That S. S. which is not larger than the church membership is not living up to its privilege.

We are already laying our plans for a good revival service with a great ingathering. We are working for, and praying for, and believing that this will be the best year yet in the history of this church. Pray for us, brethren, and we will pray for you. Yours in His Name,

A. G. Dixon.

Graham and Haw River.—We will hold our first quarterly conference in the Graham church on Sat. afternoon at 3 o'clock before the 4th Sun. in Jan. Every official member is expected to be present. Business of great importance to come up. Come, be on time. Respectfully,

O. B. Williams.

THE GIRL WHO PLAYED THE PIANO.

Little Tina lived in Odessa, which, if you look in your geographies, you will find is in Russia on the shore of the Black Sea. Her family were rich in musical talent, in sterling character, and in nothing else.

The most valuable piece of furniture in her home was a beautiful grand piano, which her father had forbidden her ever to touch "with her little greasy fingers." From this we may infer that children in Russia are no fonder of soap and water than those of other countries are.

One day little Tina had been left alone for what seemed to her to be a long time. Her mother and grandmother, both of whom were brilliant musicians, had gone out, the grandmother to give a music lesson, the mother to keep an important engagement. The maid was at work in the kitchen, and Tina wandered disconsolately about the empty house. Finally, she ventured into the room where the piano stood. O, how bright and smooth its polished sides looked! How she longed to open it and play it! She had no doubt that it would give as beautiful music to her as it did to her mother and grandmother. But her father had forbidden her to touch the piano. Obedience to parents must have been strictly enforced in that family, as it ought to be, or she would not have hesitated so long. But an irresistible inward voice seemed to be speaking to her with still stronger authority than that of her father, saying, "Open it, Tina, and play it: it will give out music to you."

Suddenly she had a thought. Her father had said "with greasy fingers;" would it be disobedience if the fingers were clean? Going into another room, she washed and rubbed them until they were as white as the ivory keys, and the rosy nails shone like corals. Then she went back to the piano. She climbed upon the stool and, with great difficulty, raised the heavy lid and began to play softly.

She did not pound and bang as most beginners do, but pressed the keys with a light, firm touch. O, how beautiful it was! The piano seemed like a living thing which delighted to obey her slightest wish as a spirited horse obeys the touch of a skillful rider.

Tina might have said with Ole Bull, "The music is not in the instrument, but in me." At first she tried a few simple melodies, and, finding that she could play them without difficulty, she ventured upon something more elaborate.

When her grandmother returned, she was surprised, as she drew near the house, to hear some one playing the piano. It could not be her daughter, for she would not be at home for some hours. Had some unexpected guest arrived in her absence? "It is a good player, whoever it is," was her mental comment.

As she opened the door, she was still more surprised to hear the strains of a difficult composition which she herself had been practicing for several days.

Imagine her astonishment when, peeping through the door of the music room, she found that the unknown player was no other than her little seven-year-old grandchild; and I assure you that this is not fiction, but fact.

Tina was so absorbed in her music that she heard nothing else; but, when she had finished the piece, which she had played through correctly and without hesitation, she turned her head and saw her grandmother standing in the doorway. The thought of her disobedience rushed over her, and, with a shriek, she ran into the adjoining room and hid in a dark closet.

"Tina," said her grandmother in the sternest tone which she could assume, "come here to me."

Tina only shrieked louder, and retreated still further into the closet.

"Come here, my darling," said her grandmother kindly, "I am not going to punish you."

Tina ventured out, and still weeping and sobbing, was lifted upon a kind knee and encircled by a pair of warm, loving arms. When she had been soothed and comforted, her grandmother raised her hand above her head, saying solemnly:

"Heavenly Father, I thank thee for the wonderful gift which thou hast bestowed upon this dear little child."

But Tina was not always to play by ear, delightful as it was and wonderfully as she did it. Theater managers would have been glad to put her upon the stage at once, but her parents were too wise to consent to anything of the kind. A short time after this episode the family moved to St. Petersburg, where Tina had the best instruction available. She had to spend long hours in practicing scales and exercises, just as you, dear girls, who are learning the piano must—exercises which were probably still more irksome to her than they are to you, and which, no doubt, often seemed unnecessary, but which gave accuracy and force to her playing as nothing else would have done.

At the age of thirteen Tina played at concerts in her native country, and at nineteen she made the tour of the world, giving concerts of her own; for this wonderful child of whom I have been telling you was the girl pianist, Christina Lerner, whose playing has delighted large audiences.

But remember, children, only a child who can play difficult music without practice or instruction ought ever to try a piano which she has been forbidden to touch.—The Christian Register.

A SURPRISING NEIGHBOR.

"Where are you going, Buddy?" Cynthia Lee inquired hoarsely as Jack, securely cloaked and protected against the cold weather, passed along the hall, whistling a cheery air.

"Over to Dick Dodd's to make a snow man and throw snowballs at folks that pass his house," the brother answered carelessly, as he stopped for a moment at the half open door of the bedroom where his little sister was confined on account of a very bad cold.

"Oh, I'm so sorry you're going out this afternoon. I'm dreadfully lonesome, and I wanted you to read me all the stories in my new book," Cynthia observed regretfully.

"Pshaw. That's a silly book. I don't like girls' stories. Anyhow, I don't want to waste a fine afternoon like this indoors when Dick's out there having a fine time in the snow." So saying, Jack banged the hall door and ran whistling down the street. As he neared his chum's home he uttered a shrill sort of yell, which was the comrade's call; but there was no response, and the snow man in the yard boasted no arms or head. He had been left in a state of incompleteness. Jack rang the doorbell loudly. "Where's Dick?" he asked of the servant who let him in.

"Upstairs," said the maid. "Run right up."

"All right," Jack replied. And he started to enter the room at the head of the stairs.

"No. Dick is not in his room; he's in the nursery, at the end of the hall," the servant directed.

"I wonder what he's doing in here," Jack was thinking as he knocked at the nursery door.

"Come in," two voices called. And the guest entered, but he could hardly believe what he saw. For there was Dick Dodd, the leader of all the boyish games, playing dolls with his little sister May.

"Hello, Jack. Come join us in our game," Dick called unabashed. "Sis' May is sick of a cold today and couldn't get out; and mother had to go to town, and there was nobody to keep her company. So I'm pretending I'm her doll's chauffeur as she goes out for a ride in her new motor."

Jack gazed silently at the toy automobile occupied by a large, flaxen-haired bisque lady with staring marble eyes, and then at the frail little girl propped up with pillows on the couch, and then at his chum who was doing all he could to entertain his little sister during her illness.

"No, thanks. I reckon I can't stop today. I'll come again," he said, as he turned and left the room.

Jack hurried home through the deep snow. A wistful face looked out of the window of a small bedroom as he neared the house. "I guess I'd better run in and read to Cynthy awhile," he resolved as he entered the hall.—The Child's Gem.

A PET TURTLE.

One would not look for much intelligence in a turtle, and what I am about to relate in regard to a pet wood tortoise (Chelopus insculptus) I had while living in an apartment house in New York City several years ago, will surely be a surprise to many readers. The postman who brought me my mail was something of an amateur naturalist, and when he came in from his suburban deliveries, he frequently brought me butterflies, turtles, lizards, and so on, which he found in the country. One day he had a male and a female wood tortoise in his bag and duly turned them over to me. My wife christened them "Darby and Joan," but they by no means lived happily together.

At first Darby pressed his courtship to the limit; but as his advances were very coolly received on the part of the unresponsive Joan, his love turned to hate and he treated her most cruelly. Finally he inflicted such bites upon her that she died one night from the loss of blood. He was very selfish, too, often deserting his pile of strawberries on the floor on one side of the room, and, walking over to where she was eating hers, he would drive her away from them and start in to eat them himself—until I taught him better manners. After Joan's death, however, Darby became very lonesome. He was fully eighty years old when I had him—and I kept him for several years—and he came to know every nook and cranny in my rooms. Frequently, when he felt particularly affectionate, he would come and rest on one of my feet as I sat writing at my study table, possibly working away on some paper on turtles.

His eyesight was excellent; and sometimes, when I'd offer him a strawberry from across the room, he would come directly after it and stand by me on three legs, while begging hard for the berry by lifting the fourth up and down. If not served at once, he would walk around in a circle, a yard or so in diameter, with the hope of attracting my attention, or of demonstrating how hungry and impatient he was. He would also beg for food while we were at the table, coming over by my chair, and waving his foot at me in the way just described. He knew every member of the family—and especially the maid who was very fond of him.

Finally the time came when I was compelled to part with him; but I was afraid to give him his freedom in the nearby country, for I felt sure he would fall into hands where he would suffer. Boys, especially, are often very cruel to the tortoises they find in the woods; therefore I decided to put him in some fine zoological garden, where he would be carefully looked out for and regularly fed, and where he could enjoy surroundings as good as his native haunts. With this in mind, I presented him to the Gardens of the Zoological Society of London, where large and commodious quarters are kept for all such creatures. For all I know to the contrary, Darby is comfortably passing his life there—the great war notwithstanding. —Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, in Our Dumb Animals.

DICKENS' ADVICE TO HIS SON.

In a letter which Charles Dickens wrote to his son when the latter went to Cambridge the novelist gave him the following counsel: "As your brothers have gone away one by one I have written to each of them what I am now going to write to you.

"You know that you have never been hampered with religious forms of restraint and that with mere unmeaning forms I have no sympathy. But I most strongly and affectionately impress upon you the priceless value of the New Testament and the study of that book as the one unfailing guide in life.

"Deeply respecting it, and bowing down before the character of our Saviour, as separated from the vain constructions and inventions of men, you cannot go very wrong, and will always preserve at heart a true spirit of veneration and humility.

"Similarly I impress upon you the habit of saying a Christian prayer every night and morning."

A CAUTIOUS CLERGYMAN.

A clergyman was annoyed by people talking and giggling in church. He paused, looked at the disturbers, and said: "I am always afraid to expose those who misbehave, for this reason: Some years ago I was preaching and a young man who sat before me kept laughing, talking, and making uncouth grimaces. I paused and administered a severe rebuke. After the service a gentleman said to me, 'Sir, you have made a great mistake. That young man whom you reproved is an idiot.' Since then I have been afraid to reprove those who misbehave in church, lest I should repeat the mistake and reprove another idiot."

During the rest of the service there was good order.—Williamsport Grit.

"AS I HAVE LOVED YOU."

If we are simply to pray to the extent of a simple and pleasant exercise, and know nothing of watching in prayer, and of weariness in prayer, we shall not draw down the blessing that we may. We shall not sustain our Missionaries, who are overwhelmed with the appalling darkness of heathenism * * * We must serve God even to the point of suffering, and each one ask himself: "In what degree, in what point am I extending by personal self-denial, to the point of pain, the kingdom of Christ?" "That which costs little is worth little."—Hudson Taylor.

ARMENIAN REFUGEES IN CAIRO.

Rev. Stephen Trowbridge, representing the World's Sunday School Association in Cairo, Egypt, as Sunday School Secretary for Moslem Lands, sends a touching account of the relief work for the Armenians. "The refugees are in a most destitute condition," he writes, "without proper clothing for the colder weather which is coming on at the seashore, without changes of undergarments, without towels, without soap, without plates and spoons,—in short, they escaped with nothing more than the ragged clothing they had on. I do hope and pray with all my heart that Sunday school friends throughout America may be led of God to make some generous gift for these people. Bibles have already been supplied by the British and Foreign Bible Society. The most urgent need just now is for mild and proper food for the sick and the babies."

Special gifts for Mr. Trowbridge's work may be sent to Mr. Frank L. Brown, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

Canton has forbidden slavery, and any slave girl who applies to the police is received and educated. Those who can see are sent to the "Government School for Rescued Slave Girls," and at the urgent request of the former chief of police, Mr. Chan King Wah, the blind girls of the singing class were committed to the care of missionaries. A temporary mat shed was provided by the government for their shelter until a new permanent building was recently completed. This is known as the "Ching Sam" school, and was built with money contributed by a wealthy Chinese gentleman.—Spirit of Missions.

"Happy Childhood" is the name of a new magazine for Chinese children published by the China Sunday School Union. Already it has a subscription list of 1,600. Mrs. Donald MacGillivray edits it.

G. W. Holmes.

Fairview Church.—The services on the second Sunday morning and evening were very well attended and were very interesting. Two good members were received into the church. The Sunday school is doing well; there were 95 in attendance. A teachers' training class was started. I am glad that there seems to be on the part of church and S. S. a spirit that tends to advancement. J. H. Bowman.

Bethesda, Halifax Ct.—We were fortunate in having our pastor returned to us, and he commenced the work of the new Conference year with his usual energy and zeal. He does not believe in doing things in a half-hearted way.

The Finance Committee had its meeting at the Parsonage, and the business was conducted with satisfaction. Some of the church members are so far away, it seems necessary to communicate with them by letter.

Owing to circumstances, there a small congregation out yesterday to hear a good, helpful sermon from our pastor. I am sorry we will not have a full report from our Egg Club. The hens do not seem to realize how much depends on their industry.

Mr. Nat. Harrison, Jr., returned to college a week ago, but was called by wire to the bedside of his sister, one of our youngest members, who is critically ill. The family has the sympathy of the entire community, for every one feels interested and anxious, and all are praying for her recovery. Reporter.

Mecklenburg Ct.—To Pres. George W. Holmes and all others who may be interested: Greeting. After waiting to see our son-in-law, Rev Geo. L. Curry, and family started on their journey to the far West, I started across the country with horse and buggy for Mecklenburg Ct. Three days' moderate driving brought us within the bounds of the work and the fourth day carried us to Zoar, the extreme end of the circuit, where we preached our first sermon on the work, and for the year, to a small attentive audience. The 4th Sunday we preached at all three of the other churches, making a full round for Dec., and arranging for first quarterly conference, which convened at Antioch Jan. 8, 1916. The 4th quarterly conference had made a raise of about 41 per sent. on pastor's salary, and we were expecting a kick in the first but none came and everything moved on nicely. Some repairs were ordered made at the parsonage and it was agreed to raise $50 on conditions proposed by the pastor for the purpose of furnishing the parsonage. There are many things about this work that are discouraging. The churches all need from one hundred to two hundred dollars' worth of improvements made on them at once. The people generally are poor. There are older, stronger and richer churches all about us. Several of those who have been here as pastors and leaders in former years have turned their backs upon their former parishioners and gone to those richer churches. Of those we might mention, Ogburn, Battle, T. A. Plyler, and Coble while the man who served them for the past two years (Waldrop) dropped into the water at the end of last year. Hence there is more or less a feeling of discouragement and listlessness and indifference at all the churches except Stallings. But there have come to the front a few determined spirits who are striving earnestly to bring about a better state of affairs. Hence this 41 per cent. increase in pastor's salary, the movement to improve and furnish the parsonage, putting a new roof on Beulah church and other material improvements. There is an evergreen Sunday school and a weekly prayer-meeting in each church, with the possible exception of Zoar the workings of which I have not become fully acquainted yet. My first impressions of the work were so discouraging that I came very near asking for my release. But realizing later that there is a spirit of progressiveness working among the people, and that my resignation would quench if it did not destroy that spirit I determined to stay, if God permits, and make the fight of my life for the salvation and uplift of this circuit. We may fail, but some of us are in it to win. Pray for us, for we need your prayers and we need them badly. J. H. Stowe.

Love's Grove, Midland Ct.—Our S. S. is moving along nicely, with very good attendance. We don't want to go into winter quarters; we haven't for many years. It seems that our school is getting to be much better than usual with a better attendance. We want to make the year 1916 a more prosperous year than last year.

We had a good meeting yesterday. Bro. Alexander filled his regular appointment yesterday with an excellent sermon. The people like Bro. Alexander well. We are always glad to hear him and to have him in our homes. Our first quarterly conference was held last Sat. at Mill Grove. It was interesting. There will be communion service the fourth Sun. in Jan. at Love's Grove. We want all the members present on that day. The Sec. and Treas. of our S. S. is very sick. We ask the prayers of all God's people for him. Pray for us all and our pastor. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Jno. N. Smith.

Lee's Chapel, Halifax Ct.—We feel very fortunate to have our same pastor preach for us again this year. He did much the past year for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom and we feel that he is going to do more this year. We are very glad that quarterly conference decided to give us morning preaching and hope to have larger congregations.

There was a Christmas tree at this church Monday night after Christmas. It was quite an enjoyable occasion. "Santa Claus" played an important part which not only the children but the grown folks too enjoyed.

There will be an evangelistic meeting at Holister beginning the 2d Sun. in Feb. Rev. N. G. Bethea will do the preaching. May there be much good accomplished.

Reporter.

Bethany, Randleman Ct.—As I have been appointed reporter again, I guess I am expected to write something. Brother O'Briant filled his appointment yesterday. Preached a very forceful sermon on paying God His own. Bro. D. T. Gaster has been re-elected Supt. of the S. S., Miss Ollie Julian Sec. Some movements are being made to raise the money to help pay the debt on the Orphans' Home. Hope we will raise our part.. Hope we will wake up and do something so we can have something to report. Yours in His Name,

Theodosia Routh.

Reidsville.—We are beginning the new year quite hopefully. Pretty good attendance at S. S. both Sundays. After revising our roll we have 60 members with 55 present last Sunday.

We were very glad to see some of our members back again who had been kept away on account of sickness. Hope they can attend regularly this year, we need them and miss them when they are away.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst to His mansions above our sister and co-worker, Mrs. B. F. Norman, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Winston-Salem, bow in meek submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, while conscious of our great loss.

2. That we express our deepest sympathy to the bereaved husband and relatives and pray that God's sustaining grace may be theirs in this dark hour of sorrow.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the grief-stricken husband, a copy be spread upon our Minutes, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

Mrs. J. R. Cummings,
Mrs. S. A. Smothers,
Mrs. W. J. Ellis.

Whereas God in His providence has seen fit to remove from the activities of this life to sweet rest in Heaven one of our oldest and most faithful members, Mrs. Gillie Pegram, be it resolved:

1. That we the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Winston-Salem will emulate the beautiful Christian character of our departed sister and we will not forget her wise counsel and faithful service as a member of our church and society.

2. That we express our sympathy to the bereaved loved ones and pray that God's richest blessings may abide with them forever.

3. That a copy o fthese resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread upon our Minutes, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Last night just after settling down by the fire after a hard day's work I heard a rap on the door and on opening it I found the front porch filled with folks armed to the teeth, and the spokesman, Dr. Atkinson, said they were cold and wanted in. President Harper complained that his load was heavy and he wanted somewhere to put it. Dr. Amick was also in charge of a brigade bearing arms to the teeth and of course we have already put our teeth in some of the arms. Dr. Atkinson spoke for the company in making us welcome and what they had brought was only an expression of the spirit that prompted the giving, which of course is what is appreciated most of all. I had already felt welcome and felt at home too and this was a complete surprise. I tried to tell them I appreciated it all, but I couldn't. Miss Mabel Harris, one of the music teachers here, said when we first came that she liked Elon College because everybody was so nice to everybody else. Well, it's true. So many had called and said, "We are glad to have you here," that I thought that was enough. Dr. Newman led us in prayer after which the happy company left us to think and talk over what had happened. Mrs. Bethea said, "I tell you this makes a person feel better, to know they are among such friends." Well, they left us many kind words of welcome and appreciation as well as flour, canned peaches, tomatoes, corn, cherries, apples, oranges, peanuts, evaporated peaches, baking powder, meal, butter, macaroni, book for children, celery, and money. Glad I had just put more shelves in the pantry. They are filled up now.

I shall be away from home most of the year, but am glad I can leave my family in the hands of such kind neighbors. Wish I could give the name of every one, but some of the articles were not marked. The Lord knows the givers and we pray God's richest blessings upon them all.

N. G. Bethea.

Elon College, Jan. 4.

Death of Bro. T. N. Crew.

This occurred Dec. 12 at his home in Pleasant Hill. He was sick about a week. He suffered a great deal but did it without a murmur. And when the end came, he departed this life rejoicing in the hope of life everlasting. He was a supporter of the church at Pleasant Hill, which feels deeply the loss it has sustained. He is survived by Mrs. Crew, two daughters, Abrey and Oller, and one son, Milton Crew, all of Pleasant Hill. The funeral and burial were at his home.

Bro. Crew had many friends, not only around his home but all over the country who join his loved ones in weeping at the remembrance of the departed brother.

R. L. Hethcox, Pastor.

Weaverville, Buncombe Ct.—We are very glad that Conference returned to us our former pastor, for we would regret very much to give him up. Bro. Martin preached his first sermon for the new year here the third Sun. afternoon at four o'clock. It was a very helpful sermon.

We had our Christmas entertainment on the night of the 23rd. The children did their part well. Rev. C. W. Bates from Asheville gave us a very interesting talk on the birth of Christ which we all enjoyed very much. Then we proceeded to unload the tree which was the delight of the children. Our S. S. has good interest now. Our aim is to make this the best year we have ever had. With best wishes to the Herald, A Member.

—The Parsonage has again been bombarded. Bro. R. E. Leonard and wife of Bethesda came with a buggy load. Many thanks to Bro. and Sister Leonard for these timely gifts. H. L. Powell.

DIED.

On the 1st of Dec. Sister S. J. Ussery was called from below to her reward, at the age of 65 years. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Pee Dee, Rockingham Circuit.

Sister Ussery was a true and devoted Christian woman and we believe the loss to her children and friends is her eternal gain.

Sister Ussery professed faith in Christ when she was about 16 years old, and joined the Baptist Church and lived in it until she joined the Methodist Protestant church at Pee Dee 1913. Since that time she has been a consecrated Christian woman, regular attendant at Sunday school and preaching service, and true to every interest of the church. The very large crowd that attended the funeral shows the high esteem in which she was held by her friends.

Sister Ussery was the mother of twelve children. Her husband and seven children have crossed over the river of death before her, five still living to mourn their loss. They have our heart-felt sympathy in their hour of affliction. May we lean upon a strong arm of him who saith, My grace is sufficient for you.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $[illegible] per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

TO HENRY FORD.

I cannot help but love the knight who goes
Unchampioned, derided by his foes
And friends, to seek the white star of his dream
In the black night. He only sees the gleam;
And, heeding neither laughter nor the sneers
Of sane complacency, his course he steers
Into the starless skies. Perchance for him
The gleam will never out of darkness swim
Yet better, dream-possessed, to falter down
In failure than to snicker like a clown
Over the dream. God give us grace to see
The grandeur in the soul of errantry!

VOLUME XXII. GREENSBORO, N. C., JANUARY 20, 1916. NUMBER 9.

THE GLORIOUS AGE IN WHICH WE LIVE.

This is the most glorious age thus far in the world's history. In saying this we do not have in mind the conquests of science and the achievements of art. Man has made progress in his understanding of nature and in his utilization of nature's resources. But this age derives a far greater glory from a wholly different source. This is the age foretold by prophets as the time when God's Spirit would be poured out upon all flesh. In olden time, the Spirit moved upon the mind of a man or a woman here and there. But in these latter days—since the Day of Pentecost—all men and women, old and young, have had the great privilege of enjoying the indwelling and constant guidance and quickening of the Holy Spirit. It is true that many close their hearts against Him, but thousands and millions have come under His power, making this age glorious.

Jesus said, "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away the Comforter will not come." Great as was the privilege of living in daily association with Jesus, He saw for His disciples a greater privilege—that of having the Holy Spirit within. The disciples could not realize this at first. The promise of the coming Spirit did not wholly relieve the feeling of loss which filled their hearts at the thought of Jesus' going away. But Jesus sought to assure them that the Holy Spirit would more than fill His place to them. "He shall take of the the things of mine and show them unto you. He shall lead you into all truth." And when the Spirit came on Pentecost, the disciples found themselves endued with new powers and new insight. They spoke with new tongues, they were filled with new courage, they were qualified for their work in life as never before.

Is it not so today in all the Christian world? The church of God is made up of men and women under the power of the Holy Spirit. The great work of the church goes on because the Spirit of God is moving the hearts of men and women. The glory of Christendom through missionary efforts is being extended to all the continents and islands of the earth. The knowledge of God is spreading, man is being delivered from the night of heathenism and from the bondage of sin. If every Christian would fully yield to the Spirit's domination, how much more glorious would the age become —Rev. C. W. Bates has been re-elected Secretary of the Asheville Ministers' Association.

— We were pleased to have a visit last week from our friend and former associate in educational work, Dr. C. E Wilbur, of Pittsburgh, where he edits our Sunday-school literature. He was on his way to Asheville where Mrs. Wilbur has been for some time under the care of a physician. He stopped on the way in Greensboro, Asheboro, and High Point and delivered his lecture on American humor. This lecture made a fine impression on our Grace Church audience. Whatever view one may take of the lecturer's theory of wit and humor, he is bound to admit that the lecture contains some exquisitely amusing illustrations.

NOTICE.

All orders for Conference Journals may be sent to me at Burlington, and will be handled by Mr. T. T. Stafford.

J. E. Pritchard.

(Bro. Pritchard is in the hospital here. He was operated on for appendicitis last Thursday. He stood the operation well, but suffered much for a day or two after it was over. He seems to be getting on nicely now. His recovery will be slower because the disease was in an advanced stage. He says he had an attack twelve years ago and two physicians pronounced the cause appendicitis. Later an older physician declared he did not have appendicitis. But he has noticed a sensitiveness if not positive soreness on his right side for years, and now he is satisfied that the disease has been preying upon him all these years.—He may have better health now that the appendix is removed. Mrs. Pritchard is of course much distressed, her mother and father both being very ill, and now Bro. Pritchard, and she would like to be with all, which is impossible. We hope Bro. Pritchard's confinement will last only a few weeks.—Editor.)

—Moses Stafford of Oak Ridge is dead.

—Bro. Bascom Baynes is among the sick this week. We hope to see him out in a few days.

—Mrs. J. A. Walker, of Reidsville, died on Tuesday at the age of ninety years. Bro. T. A. Walker, of Grace Church, is one of her sons.

—Bro. S. S. Cox went to Raleigh on Monday to attend a meeting of the Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. He is president of the Randolph branch. The cost of insurance in this company is surprisingly low.

N. C. CONFERENCE FOR SOCIAL SERVICE.

This body will meet in Charlotte from Jan. 23rd to the 26th. Additions are still being made to the exceptionally strong program already published. The latest is the Hon. C. R. Woodruff, of Philadelphia, secretary of the National Municipal League and editor of the National Municipal Review. He will speak on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 25th. Attend the conference if you can and hear the distinguished speakers.

HOW DOES IT ALL START?

I nipped a slice of raw eel between my chop sticks and put it in my mouth.

Dr. Spencer and Mr. Ito were watching me with a quirk of amusement in their eyes. They were used to Japanese food; I was not. The raw eggs, raw fish, dishwatery soup and pickled chips were a trial for me.

In the room below us we could hear a Buddhist priest chanting his lamentations over the death of the senior proprietor of the inn. We knew the priest was kneeling before a little illuminated shrine and the members of the family were bowed to the floor around him. The frogs in the rice fields rang out in a lively chorus—then like a tragic solo would rise the moanings of the priest of Buddha.

"How long will he keep it up?" I asked.

"All night."

For a while I chopsticked in silence. Gathering up loose grains of rice between the points of two small sticks is a job requiring absolute quiet and concentration. Then as I was swallowing a peculiarly atrocious brand of pickle that would have upset the digestion of a locomotive boiler, the maid began to chat vivaciously about the stomach trouble which had taken the dead one off!

"If a Christian should die in this town," I asked, "would there be any Christian minister to—"

"If anything happens I'll look after you," was Dr. Spencer's reassurance.

"No, no I didn't mean that," I protested falsely. "I mean, is there any Christian missionary station here?"

"No." His face sobered. "After we leave there will not be a single Christian, foreign or native, in this town."

Great Christian churches I had seen throughout Japan, great Christian hospitals, schools and universities. I had wondered how they had all been brought about. So I asked:

"How does it all start? Take this town, for example. How would go go about starting Christian work in this place?"

"Come out after dinner and I'll show you."

Breaking Into a Japanese Town.

So after dinner we rose from our somewhat uncomfortable seats (our own heels) and padded stocking-footed through the corridors and down the stairs past the half open door of the candle-lit death room. We pulled on our leather shoes, which we had left among the wooden sandals in the courtyard, and passed out into the street.

It isn't much of a town—Shinkawa. About seven thousand inhabitants, of whom not quite one hundred are said to be able to read. Off in the interior from Nagoya. None but Japanese in the town, and only a Japanese inn. But we had traveled cross-country all day and this would be as good a place as any to spend the night.

Have you ever seen Dr. David S. Spencer? He is our Methodist misionary at Nagoya, and he is a missionary to stir the pride of any church. A great mountain of a man, white-haired, but strong as a giant; gentle as a mother, but a fearless man in action. Mr. Ito is also worth knowing. He is a little Japanese preacher with rare talents, improving painful English and a big future. He is coming to America, and that will fix his English, for he is a swift student. He will study American evangelists, and that will insure his future, for he has a silver tongue.

Through the dark alleys we went, crossed a canal, and came into a street of small shops. Dr. Spencer stopped.

"How's this?" he asked.

"All right," said Ito and pulled out his Bible.

I looked around in amazement. Except for the three of us there was not a person in sight. The street was walled with closed shutters, except for the shop just beside us where a flickering light shone forth from the empty store. Except for this splash of light in which we stood, the street was as black as a tomb—and as silent.

The First Song.

Suddenly I heard a terrible yell behind me. I turned. It was Dr. Spencer. He yelled again, in a higher tone, then again, still higher. Then I realized the man was singing!—singing "There Is Sunshine in My Soul." Ito joined in. I made a fist at it myself. And there we stood. the three of us yelling under the stars as if we would split the firmament and bring down the crack of doom upon our impudent heads.

Dr. Spencer explained afterward that it takes rather loud "music" to penetrate closed shutters. Ours penetrated. Heads began to crane out from above the wooden walls. Doors opened here and there and dark figures slipped into the street. Before we knew it we had a respectable audience. I mean respectable in size. There was a bath-house two doors away and half a dozen men slid out white and dripping, garnished only in rough towels, and stood listening and wiping and shivering in the kind dark on the fringe of the crowd. I tell you this to show what a motley crowd it was. Jaw-hung boys and timid girls stocky little shop-keepers, a belated bean-curd vender, a few women, bare bathers—a pick-up audience. The sort to which Christ used to preach.

The First Sermon.

When the song was finished, Mr. Ito spoke to the crowd—in Japanese, of course.

Dr. Spencer whispered to me: "A story two thousand years old, and this is probably the first word of it these people have ever heard."

"What is he saying?" I asked, eager to know how a man would present Christianity in a town where it was as unfamiliar and unknown as sunshine in a mine. How would he begin to explain?

He began very simply. Dr. Spencer whispered a translation as Ito spoke: "We whom you see before you have come down here from Nagoya," said Ito, "and we believe in a religion called Christianity. We thought you might not know of this religion and would like to hear a little about it. In one of the Imperial Rescripts, Meiji Tenno (the last Emperor) said that our country must adopt every good thing from abroad no matter if it be material or spiritual. So we have adopted the telegraph, telephone, railway train, schools, medicine. It is even more important that we should adopt Christianity, the religion which has caused the success of the Western nations.

"According to this religion the foundation of the universe is a spirit which we call by the name of God. This God is our Father in heaven, who loves us just as our father on earth loves us. The question is, How can we know the Father in heaven? We may know Him through His Son, Jesus Christ, who came to this world two thousand years ago and is still with us in spirit."

And he went in to tell of the life and love of Christ.

No one left the audience. Every moment new listeners came. There was an air of silent wonder in the street as the people listened to this new strange story.

Sermon Number Two.

When Ito had finished, we sang another song, I've forgotten what, and Dr. Spencer spoke to his improvised congregation. Later he gave me at my request a trnslation of his remarks. Here is the second Christian word spoken in this pagan town:

"You have heard from Mr. Ito of the Creator of the sun, moon and stars, and you will wish to know where you can learn more about this Being.

"I have in my hand a book which is more than a hymnal, from which I sing hymns (New Testament and hymnal bound together)—it is the Word of that

Being of whom Mr. Ito has told you. This book is called the Bible. It is a very old book. It originated in a country we now call Palestine, and with a people we call Jews. It gives an account of the dealings of God with His people, and shows us His Son, whom we call Jesus Christ. It tells us how we may live forever.

"This is a remarkable book, and has been more widely published than any other book in the world. Up to the end of 1911, this book had been translated and puglished in six hundred and thirty-five different languages and dialects. It is read and loved by millions of people. The more men read it the more they like it. Whatever may be your training, you are not educated so long as you do not know this book. Though you may not believe in the Christian doctrines, you cannot be called a learned man, a well-informed man, till you have read this book.

"Mr. Ito has told you that all the most useful inventions and conveniences which Japan now has have come to you from other lands. And where did they come from? You will find without exception that they came from the land where this Bible is read.

"You must know about this book, and I have brought with me these pamphlets to show you what the Bible is. Please read these carefully and I shall come to you again some day."

Ito distributed the pamphlets, which contained brief, attractive statements concerning the Bible and Christianity. Then, with many bows and smiles, we started back toward the inn.

The First Inquirer.

A pair of wooden shoes clacked after us through the dark. We made several turns, but still the sound was just behind. We slowed down a little and a young man dressed in the usual Japanese gown and wooden sandals came up with us and timidly introduced himself. A fine clean-faced young fellow, vice-president, he said, of the Young Men's Buddhist Association in connection with the local Buddhist temple. It was his duty to arrange the programs for the meetings of the association, and he wished to engage Dr. Spencer for an address on the relations between Japan and America. Also he was greatly interested in the remarks he had heard that night, and would like to speak privately with Dr. Spencer.

The two went on ahead and we followed them through what seemed like miles upon miles of roundabout side streets, alleys and finally country roads, a million frogs chorusing around us, the moon glinting on the water in the paddy fields. Still Dr. Spencer and the vice-president went on, two shadowy objects, their heads inclined together. It was very late, and I had wrung from Ito every English word he had ever learned, when we all finally brought up at the door of the inn.

The young man hurried away. The three of us went up to our room where the beds had already been laid on the floor and palanquins of green mosquito netting hung above them.

Dr. Spencer knelt in prayer. When he rose he said: "I told you that when we go from this town there will not be a single Christian left in the place. I was wrong."

"You mean—"

"Yes, the vice-president of the Young Men's Buddhist Association."

That is how it all starts—all this magnificent system of mission work throughout the world. Some day a great Christian church, or university, or hospital may stand in Shinkawa. I saw the beginning. No man can dream the end.—Willard Price, in Christian Advocate.

THE APPEAL OF THE BOOK.

Coleridge once wrote to a friend: "In the Bible there is more that finds me than I have experienced in all other books put together." And every careful Bible student will say "Amen" to this remark of Coleridge.

The Bible appeals to our minds. There is no other book which begins to have the attention paid to it by scholars all over the world that is paid to the Bible. They are engaged in the study of its language, of its history, of its literature, and of its message. Thousands of books have been written already about the Bible, and each year sees a host of new volumes coming from the press. If a man wishes to use his mind instead of dwelling in intellectual torpor, he will fiind in the Bible such food for thought as he can find nowhere else.

Then the Bible makes a masterful appeal to the imagination. By the imagination I mean that side of life to which music and pictures and poetry appeal. Practically all great men of letters have delighted in the Bible. You cannot read Milton or Shakespeare, Tennyson or Browning, Whittier or Longfellow without seeing what an appeal the Bible has made to them.

And because the Bible appeals to the imagination, it appeals to the feelings. It helps you to feel nature when it speaks of Him who covers himself with light as with a garment; it helps you to feel how timeless and universal is sorrow when you hear David's lament over Absalom. Most of all, the Bible in a hundred passages causes you to feel the presence of God.

But there is still another side of life to which the Bible makes appeal, and that is the will. There are passages in the Bible which soothe as a child is soothed by his mother. And we need soothing words ever and again. But the supreme appeal of the Bible is not to quietude, but to activity. The Bible is a call to do something. Says a great text, "The word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayst do it"; while another striking verse declares, "This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayst observe to do according to all that is written therein."

Mr. James S. Gale tells the story of a Korean Christian who came a long distance, a hundred miles, on foot to recite some Scripture verses to his pastor. Without an error he repeated the Sermon on the Mount. When he had completed the recital, he was told that if he simply memorized the Word of God it would be a feat of memory and nothing more; he must practice its teachings. His face lighted up with a smile as he promptly replied: "That is the way I learned it: I tried to memorize it, but it didn't stick; so I hit upon this plan: I would memorize a verse and then find a heathen neighbor of mine and practice the verse on him. Then I found it would stick."

This Korean found what is, perhaps, the strongest appeal of the Word of God—the summons to live the daily life in accordance with its teachings.—James Elmer Russell, in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

SCHOOLS IN CHINA.

According to the latest census by the Board of Education in China, there are 35,880 schools of all grades, with 892,514 students in the government and private schools throughout the country, exclusive of missionary institutions.

In 1913 the Chinese government spent $5,207,215 for education. During the last revolution many schools were discontinued. The present Minister of Education announces his intention of stressing elementary education and the training of teachers, with some emphasis also upon industrial schools. He is also working to secure a levy for a special tax for the support of schools.—Selected.

IN MEMORIAM.

One fondly loved we miss to-day—
So pure and undefiled;
But angels came to take her home,
For God would crown His child.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

It has been a wonder to me that some of our good writers have not "stirred up" some of the grave facts concerning the attitude of the Methodist Protestant denomination toward our Orphanage. Since they are slow to speak of these things, it falls to me to see if we can't remedy such conditions. Our denomination seems to be ' at ease in Zion.'' It's true that the Orphanage is quite young yet; yes, and our church is nearly a hundred years old. We are proud that we have done as much as we have, but when we stop to consider that this institution is the only one of its kind in the denomination, we see that we are far behind. The first thing of which we wish to speak is the debt. You will remember that each member in the entire M. P. denomination was asked to give a day's earnings Thanksgiving for the liquidation of this debt. Do you know the amount received? $327.86 Horrors! From our big denomination! This is not boasting, but it is true that almost one third of this came from Granville Ct., and yet we didn't do what we should have done, for at 50 cents a member we could have sent in about $250. We mean to make it 50 cents a member at Rehoboth and we hope to get the whole circuit to do so. Why didn't we get up the whole deficit that day? Twenty-five thousand members in N. C. at 50c a member should have been $12,500. Think what our State alone could have done. Where are the other states? "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead." "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" We may get to work even if it is the eleventh hour. Did you know that the Baptists in this state raised $27,000 Thanksgiving Day for their debt at Thomasville? And we don't pay as much for missions and schools as some of our sister denominations. "There is something rotten in the state of Denmark." The M. P. denomination ought to clear this debt, build a ten-thousand dollar building and support a hundred orphans within the next twelve months. "If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches and poor men's cottages princes' palaces." Our own state should awake: but look at the other states. Only three children supported by outsiders. Don't you think we should support at least two hundred even now? See what the Bible says about tithing. If everybody obeyed God's word in this, all of our questions would be easily settled. Now, this is a serious thing which confronts us. $327 on a ten-thousand dollar debt—why, this only pays 6 per cent. interest for six months and sixteen days. One of our members said it should make us crawl into our holes and cover the holes behind us. What is to be done? Do you read the pleas of Messrs. Garrett and Rankin? So many of our members do not see the Herald. Can't we reach them through the Methodist Protestant? Mr. Holmes will please pardon me for the suggestion that he get all the facts together and make a special appeal through the Methodist Protestant. This question will doubtless be discussed at our General Conference in May. Delegates, will you try to bring about more enthusiasm Hattie Harris.

—Mt. Lebanon Church, Randleman Ct., recently came in possession of $150.00 for the purpose of fencing the cemetery. A provision made in a will by Miss Emilina Hinshaw, one of its members who died in 1914.

THE BIBLE IN THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

I have always been interested in the study of the Bible, and one of the sweet privileges of my life was when I was invited to the Children's Home to present Bibles to all the children that could read. I had bought the Bibles not thinking that I would have an opportunity of presenting them, and to further my pleasure I was called to the Home as matron and given the pleasure of helping them get a start in the study of God's word. I had also given those that could not read a little book called "Day Dawn," containing a verse for each day in the year.

I decided to interest the younger children by teaching a verse each evening from their little books; this we did and the exercise became so interesting that nearly all the older ones joined our class. We soon found it necessary to take other verses than those of the small book. Now, for the verse exercises, we commenced with the Sunday school golden text followed by kindred verses during the week.

At our Summer Conference in June, while listening to an address on the Bible by Dr. Lewis, a plan was suggested to my mind for the older children who had Bibles. It was this; for the Supt., his wife and the matron together with as many of the children as could read well enough, to read a chapter each day, letting it be read by verse alternately. As we had the morning devotional exercises in which the daily readings of the Sunday school lesson were read, and in the evening our verse exercise, it was decided to have the chapter exercise after dinner while all were seated around the tables, letting the smaller children hear the reading. Soon we were selecting one or more verses from each chapter for memory. This proved so interesting that the Supt. offered a prize to the one that would recite the most verses at Christmas. When the time came to make the test we were all greatly surprised to know that there had been such an awakening in their minds.

Ethel Brown, one of the older girls, recited 170 verses and located 131 of them; her brother Hall recited 145 and located 108; Esther Tarkington recited 123 and located 52. There were others who could do almost as well. It is encouraging to note the interest the children take in memorizing Bible verses, and we are encouraged to continue.

One evening we have a rehearsal of the Sunday school lesson, with all present, thus helping the children to be in readiness for the lesson at the church. I am glad to say that the children are very receptive of religious instruction and delight in Bible stories.

I think with the high ideal of life that Mr. and Mrs. Garrett and their helpers are continually setting before them the children can hardly fail to develope into noble Christian men and women. Millie Bowman.

WHAT IS IT TO BE A CHRISTIAN?

BY ROBERT TURNER.

Why should not this question be one permissible for every man and woman, every boy and girl to ask?

I am as deeply interested in this question as any man, whether Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, or of any other denomination. If any man can say he was born in a Christian home, reared under Christian environment I can say it. It is easy to study the lives of men and to know why they are of such virtue or why they are villains; but to ask such a question as this seems to make us stop—and think. Every church man you meet in the church seems to be a Christian, but "not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven: but he that doeth the will of my father which is in Heaven." Matt. 7: 21. Nineteen hundred and sixteen years ago the man of Nazareth appeared in one of the small provinces of Rome. The world was full of woe, and he came to succor it. He ofttimes defined the purpose of His coming and in His first recorded sermon He told His mission. He came to preach good tidings to the poor, to heal the broken-hearted, to restore sight to the blind. This is what Jesus Christ came to do. This is what He did while here upon earth. If any were hungry he fed them; if they were sick, He healed them; if they were ignorant, He taught them; if they were despondent, He gave them hope; if they were tired of sin, He told them their sins were forgiven, and bade them go their way and sin no more.

He bade His disciples do the same work He was doing. On one occasion He sent out twelve men; at another time, seventy, and this is his charge: "As you go, preach, saying, The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the leper, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give." After His death and resurrection He repeated this charge.

What is it to be a Christian?

It is simply this, accept this charge or commission, receive the Holy Spirit, and take part in this work to which He summons His disciples.

We do not have to stop and say, What church must I join? What was Christ's power while on earth? What power has He now? These are very appropriate questions, but we do not need to get an answer to these questions before we engage in the work to which He calls us.

To be a Christian does not mean that one has to believe in all the principles embodied in the articles of any denomination or creed.

The necessary thing is to believe that what Jesus Christ commanded us to do is worth doing; to believe the Holy Spirit which He has promised us is worth receiving, and having that Spirit from Him, to give ourselves to the work to which He calls us. To make our business speak to the world, that the smile on our face may comfort some broken-hearted; to give of our best in helping to relieve those less fortunate than ourselves—the deaf, the blind, the sick, the ignorant, the orphans. But I imagine I hear some one say, He is wrong, for did not the sinners whose deeds are recorded in the Holy Bible do this? My brother, I can say yes to this, but listen: They were Christians in so far as they did these things. For to be a Christian is to be a believer in Jesus Christ, and to try to do His work in His Spirit.

Some folks seem to think religion is something apart from life, not even bearing the relation to life that the foam of the mighty deep bears to the mighty waters. But religion is the art of living, with hands, eyes, feet, with conscience and with our money. Nothing less of that is religion.

While the children of Israel were waiting at the foot of Mount Sinai, Moses was in the mountain praying and talking with the great Redeemer, and when he returned he told the people that Jehovah was ready to make a covenant. They were anxious to know what was expected of them, and the Ten Commandments were an answer to that question. Such was the religion of Mount Sinai. Would to God people had kept that part of their obligation. Would to God that we were keeping them today.

May I close these reflections by giving a single illustration? Toward the close of Christ's life, in Jerusalem He describes who will be able to stand the final test of that day. What sort of portrait have we? A man who has spent his life in prayer? No; the man who has fed the hungry? No. The man who has visited the sick? No. Although these are necessary, but the man who possesses all these attributes is the man Christ calls "saint."

To follow Christ is not to go out of this world, for Christ came into it. It is not to live apart from the world. Christ lived among men, and dwelt with them. It is not doing great things. Christ did small things. It is simply this: carrying with us in our every day life the spirit that Christ carried into his common life. He made men happy, He was a joy-distributer. To be a Christian is to make others happy. We cannot restore sight, but we can help a blind man across the mud. We cannot feed the thousands, but we can contribute something to feed the orphans. We cannot restore life but we can carry the life of our own faith into the home that has been darkened by death.

It is a Christian's character that makes him happy, not his condition. To touch the very garment which Christ wore was sufficient to cure a chronic disease. Others besides Christ may wear a garment that others touching may feel better for the contact;—and that is the garment of righteousness.

I wonder if when we are in Heaven we will not look down to see our Saviour back here on earth and wonder if it was possible that He was near us all the time, and then we will long to come back to this old world once more to be among the poor, the lowly, the suffering, the needy, the outcast, the broken hearted, but this cannot be. Therefore let us thank God for the new year 1916 and take fresh courage and keep our covenant with Him who doeth all things well.

IS THE JOURNAL RIGHT?

Since the proof-reader has caught some of us fellows with the goods I am almost afraid to call attention to what the last Conference Journal makes me say. But in justice to the good people of the Littleton Ct. I must make this explanation.

The Journal makes me say "that the pastor was promised $1,000 salary last year and only received $675.00." This is what I should have said: The charge promised $700.00 salary and paid $675.00. Chas. J. Edwards.

(Bro. Edwards should be grateful to the printer for greatly reducing his error. He wrote $7,000 as the promised salary, but he made the seven to resemble a figure 1. As $1,000 seemed within and $7,000 seemed without the range of probability, the printer and proof reader thought the former was the amount intended. Moral—Review what you write before sending it to the printer.—Editor.)

MASS MOVEMENTS IN INDIA.

How Whole Villages and Castes are Turning Toward Christianity, and Why.

The mere statement that "over thirty thousand natives were baptized by the Methodist Church in India in the year 1914, and other thousands by other denominations," a thought stimulating to the imagination, can give no adequate idea of the scope of India's mass movements toward Christianity.

But what is a mass movement, and why? Let us look at one of the greatest now in progress in the United Provinces among the Chamars, leather workers by caste tradition, also field laborers and builders and repairers of mud houses. There are six million of them in these provinces, five million more Chamars in other parts of North India, and millions more elsewhere closely allied to them, but called by different names. In numbers, in all India, they are second only to the Brahmans.

A year ago three thousand of the village leaders of the Chamars gathered in a village near Delhi, the new capital of India, for a panchayat, or caste council. They represented some thirty-five villages and anywhere from eight to ten thousand of their people.

By train and bullock cart, on horse and on foot, these tall, slender, dark-eyed and dark-skinned men, many of them stooping with age and weary with the journey, came pouring into the Chamar mohulla chosen for the gathering. They were clothed in the dusky cotton garments, the long flowing shirt and dhoti, so familiar in that part of India. In a roll under the arm or flung over the shoulder and around the body each carried his rezai, or cotton quilt, which is both overcoat and bedding. They wore turbans, or puggrees of the same colorless cotton, and heavy leather, pointed sandals, which flapped as they dragged them over the dusty miles of white metalled road or through the narrow paths of the village.

Three Days of Argument.

They gathered for the council in one of the large open spaces near a group of houses and seated themseves in a circle on the hard smooth clay. There, hour after hour, stopping only for the noon-day and evening meals, they listened to one spokesman after another, or talked excitedly together.

They were there to settle a question which had been agitating the whole community for years, a question that was breaking up families, dividing villages, disrupting the caste and threatening to separate it from Hinduism itself. A few years before a thousand of their number had been baptized as Christians, other thousands had followed, and now many times the number were talking openly of adopting this new religion. Should these be thrust out and wavering ones likewise threatened, or should they all follow the new teaching, which, in truth, did sound promising and different?

Twice before they had met, but Hindu and Aryan influence had interfered with a satisfactory decision. Now it was to be settled.

Come! Baptize Us!

And it was. After three days of argument they reached a conclusion, far-reaching, but final. Sending for the missionary they said, "Come! baptize us. We are ready."

India does not move in a night. For forty years one great missionary society had worked among these Chamars, baptizing a few men at a time. Our own workers had lived among them for eighteen years before that first thousand came. Soon there were five thousand enrolled. Now the whole caste is mightily stirred, and this council represented a large section which is but a part of a great movement spreading in all directions from the railway center of Ghaziabad out toward the six million Chamars in the United Provinces and other millions in the rest of India.

To interpret all such movements one must understand the life and thought of the people of India.

An American boy, for instance, may leave the farm and go to the city to enter what caling he will and acquire the success his energy and ability deserve. Not so in India. There the village is the unit, the caste groups the factors to be considered. In the community organization each group has its part and does its share of the necessary work. If one fails all others are affected. For generations the people have lived in the same houses and done the same work. Farmers' sons are farmers, laborers' sons are laborers; whether priest or potter, shopkeeper or scavenger, the children are supposed to follow in the calling of their parents, though that be high or low, honorable or despised.

Caste System Greatly Disturbed.

The entrance of Christianity, with its strong emphasis on individual freedom, necessarily disturbs such a system. For example, during the great movement among the Telugus, the missionary felt it imperative to insist upon three things—the Christians were to observe the Sabbath, stop eating carrion and cease worshipping idols. Now the Hindus and Mohammedans have about as many holidays as one could desire, even in the East. For a large group of laborers to demand, besides those, one day in every seven, even in the pressure of harvest, meant harder work and consequent annoyance for the farmers. The farmers were high caste. The laborers were Madigas, the leather workers of the Telugu country. The latter had been little better than serfs.

When they refused to eat carrion, the economic situation was again affected. The flesh of cattle, diseased or decayed though it might be, was part payment for the work the Madigas were to do in tanning the hides and making necessary articles for the village. A new system of remuneration was involved and this aroused resentment.

Even in the idol worship of the village they had duties to perform. Only Madigas could repair or beat the leather-headed drums which were so necessary a part in all ceremonies, particularly in the great processions. They also perform the Sivam, or "dance of possession," which leads the procession. Their refusal to take part upset the whole program. No one else could or would touch the work of the out-caste Madigas. The entire village was furious, from the priests down, and their wrath fell upon the offenders. By every means in their power they tried to force submission, but soon the law interfered and the Madigas won out.

Consider that these outcastes dwell largely on the land belonging to their employers, upon whose favor they depend for a chance to work, to draw water, gather fuel, or to share in the harvest and in other rights of the community to which they belong. For ages they have been ignored and regarded as less important than the beasts. For such to rise and make demands, to assert themselves in any way, is amazing.

Many Forms of Reprisals.

Reprisals take many forms. The Christians are refused work or are made to work and refused their due; they are shut off from the wells, with all that means in the intense heat of India's sun-baked plains, and they must get what water they can from filthy pools; they are denied the service of the village barber and washermen; they are put out of the houses in which their families have dwelt for generations and are denied their share in the crops and other established rights from which their poor livelihood is derived. In every conceivable way they are made to feel the wrath and scorn of the village, and even of their own people who have held off.

In the face of such opposition they come in large numbers, literally in masses. Why?

The conditions which I have described tend to such grop movements. The individual may lead, but he cannot act alone. He is simply thrown out of the community and life goes on without him. To get anywhere he must take the group along.

Consequently, these movements do not take place quickly. Years must be spent in cultivating the group soil. The interest spreads through one community, then on to others in surrounding villages. Each caste bound together by marriage ties constitutes, in fact, a great family. One group, large or small, gets ready to move and asks for baptism. It is something like loosening the supporting brick of a pile. There is a general movement on the part of all resting upon it.

The mass movements in India have assumed such proportions as to have gone completely beyond the ability of the present missionary force on the field to cope with them. This is true of the Presbyterians and of the Church of Engand, but still more notably true of the Methodists.

To meet the crisis, there has been created by the Methodist Episcopal Board of Foreign Missions in correspondence with the Bishops, a Mass Movement Commission which has disregarded all conference boundaries and has secured a conspectus of the whole situation in all those parts of India where the Methodists are at work.

To sum up, these mass movements are Christianity working through the most closely organized social groups in the word—the castes of India—and stimulating these groups to great forward movements, which are not only religious, but social, and which touch the entire life of the caste. More than that, they break through caste, separating the Christians from their former associates and reuniting them in a new group, which is caste free.

Together these Christian mass movements face the great mass of now hopelessly divided India with the one program which can unite it. They have already won the heart of the fifty millions of the outcastes; they are breaking into the higher castes and into Mohammedanism. As they go they tear down old barriers and unrighteous distinctions. They compel respect for the educated and elevated Christian, whatever his origin. If we stand by them in their days of need they will yet bring India to Christ. They hold the key to India's evangelization.—By Thomas S. Donohugh, in the World Outlook.

DOES GOD CARE?

In Psalm 55: 72 we have this fine expression, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee. He will never suffer the righteous to be moved." This word "burden" means "gift" in the beautiful Hebrew. The Lord takes your burden as a gift. He accepts it as an offering. He does not want you so much to bring Him the happy things as the sorrowful things. The old legend tells us that, when the three wise men came to the infant Jesus, the one brought gold, for he was a king. A second brought frankincense, because he was a priest. They were unnoticed by the Child. But the third brought myrrh, for he was a mourner. The Babe opened His eyes, dropped a tear, and stretched out His hand. Of course, it is a legend, but it expresses the true thought of Christianity concerning the heart of Jesus Christ. Bring your sin, your shame, your cares. You will not bore Him with the tedious story as you do some other people. He will listen; He will count it a "gift," and then put your sins into His bottomless grave, and lift your sorrows so high that they will become wings, and you will 'mount up with wings as eagles, run and not be weary, walk and not faint."

We have another beautiful picture of the Lord's care in II Chron. 16: 9. The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show himself strong in behalf of those whose heart is upright toward him." The eyes of the Lord, just flashing hither and thither, into every corner and place of danger, in behalf of those whose hearts are true to Him! Omniscient love; intelligent love, the love that nothing can hide His children's need from, love that knows and cares,—He is watching those that are against us and sees every harm before it buds and bears its bitter fruit! And He sends His "carpenters" to fray the horns of the enemy so that they will have no power to hurt. Think of it, beloved, when you feel yourself so little, and are surrounded with mysterious dangers, the Lord is watching; the Lord is caring!

"He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye" (Zech. 2: 8). A splendid Hebrew figure—the apple of His eye. In the original Hebrew it is "the daughter of his eye," that little crystalline lens that is so delicate and fine that the point of a needle would destroy it, but it is guarded by nerves so delicate, so sensitive, that the moment danger comes near, the eyelid and eyelash are warned by signals along the nerve lines, and long before that particle of dust can get in, they shut down and guard the apple of the eye. And God means that He will take care of you just as the eyelid takes care of the crystalline lens. God is so concerned about you that nothing can come through without touching Him. He has a set of nerves that can communicate with every organ of your being and every moment of your life, and He can sense your perils by night and by day. "He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye."

Again we have a very fine expression in Hebrews 4: 15. "We have not an high priest who cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." The original word there is the Greek for "sympathy." "We have not an high priest who cannot be sympathetic " and the word literally means "suffering with." He is so one with you that the thing that hurts you hurts Him first. He is so interested in your being, your body, your soul, that nothing can reach you except through Him. It is wonderful, incomprehensible, and infinitely comforting. "He is able to be touched." It hurts Him. Those that walk closely with the Lord are conscious, when going through great trials, of something inside the heart that is suffering. It is not you. You don't know perhaps much about the need and trouble, but you know there is need and trouble, and there is Someone inside who is suffering keenly. It is Jesus through the Holy Spirit suffering with you, praying through for you, praying more than you know. "The Spirit maketh intercession within us with groanings"—I think that is so wonderful. He shares your trouble and prays through your need. He is able to be touched with the feeling of your infirmity. This word "infirmities" is not limited to moral infirmities, mental infirmities, the mistakes and inperfections of your life. It means your physical infirmities, too. It is the same word that is used in Matthew, "Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." We think of a headache, nerve ache. He is touched by it. It hurts Him; and if you could only trust Him well enough, you would so roll it over on Him that it would take it off you completely.

In Matthew 10 we have Christ's own portrait of the Father's heart. He says, "The very hairs of your head are all numbered." A sparrow cannot fall to the ground without your Father knoweth it, "and ye are of more value than many sparrows." I wonder what mother ever counted all the hairs in her baby's head and missed every one that fell out! God does. They are all numbered. So minute and infinitesimal is God's care.—From a sermon by Rev. A. B. Simpson, in Alliance Weekly.

The woes of Chinese medical treatment bear with special hardship on Chinese women. Their physical miseries are beyond estimate. The presence of an educated Christian medical woman in the sick room is one of God's best gifts to China.—Arthur H. Smith.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Clark's Chapel, Buncomb Ct.—Our S. S. is doing excellent work. Bro. Watts, our Supt., has offered a prize in each class for the best attendance during this year. We have revised our roll book and we hope to have a better S. S. this year than we have ever had. We had good attendance last Sunday. We added four names to the roll and we hope to add more in the near future. Our attendance was 48 and our collection was 46 cents. Bro. T. E. Martin, our pastor, preached at our church last Sunday night. He preached an excellent sermon and had very good attention. His text was, There has no temptation taken us that is not common to men. Harry Webster, Rep.

——o——

Mebane Church.—We are still moving on nicely altho' we have not told it. Bro. and Mrs. Kennett are with us and we all like them very much. They are taking great interest in our church and Sunday school. Rev. Paul S. Kennett spent the Holidays with his parents and preached two excellent sermons for us. Our S. S. seems to be taking on new life with the new year.

Bro. Kennett has held election of church officers since coming to us. The stewards are the same as last year except two,—Bro. Barnett and Fletcher Smith. Mr. Highfill Jobe was elected church treasurer. We are so glad to have the young men interested, for they are excellent boys. We are very glad indeed to have Mrs. Claude Hunt to join us again from the M. P. Church at Graham. Also Mrs. Odah Terrell from Durham Baptist Church.——We are planning for the best year yet. If we follow our pastor's instructions and example we wil laccomplish a great work. Pray for us that we may.——Two of our members are sick: Bro. Sam Smith is in with grip; Mrs. D. M. Qualls is very sick with typhoid fever. We pray for them a speedy recovery. Mrs. Henry C. Nicholson.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.—Bro. Holmes came to see us last Tuesday. He made such an interesting talk full of information. After that he preached to us a few minutes. He tried to arouse us to a sense of our duty and opportunity. His visit was a great blessing to us, but only a few got the blessing. Where were our people? Too busy or not interested—can it be so?——About $25 has been pledged already on the Children's Home debt. This is not half our assessment, but the interest manifested by some is encouraging. ——Our congregations have been reduced by sickness. Never knew of so much in our neighborhood at one time. We wish for the sick a speedy recovery.——Our new Supt., Mr. Clarida, has entered on his duty with a determination to forward the work of Mr. Witty. They work so closely together. In union there is power. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Witty have adopted an orphan boy just ten months old. Don't see how they could love him any more. Mr. Witty says he is afraid they will love him too much. No danger if God is first. Mark, Jr., is an intelligent-looking child and gives promise of being a great man some day. Mr. Witty's greatest ambition for him is to be a preacher. "With God all things are possible." May God help them to train this precious one. Lillie Sharpe, Rep.

Pine Grove, Oak Ridge Ct.—Bro. Gerringer preached a powerful sermon yesterday—just what we need. May God help us every one to receive it. I think every member at Pine Grove is willing to say that Bro. Gerringer is the man we need, and let us not forget that he needs our help in many ways if we expect our church to grow. We must help by our prayers and means.——We reorganized our Sunday school Jan. 9th. Bro. Henry Ingram was elected Supt. again. We are having good attendance and more interest is being taken in the lesson and we hope every one will study the lessons well and try to practice what they teach. K. K. K.

——o——

Flat Rock.—Mrs. J. B. Ogburn was elected reporter for this church this year, but I have been asked to report at present. Our new pastor filled his regular appointment here Jan. 9th. We are all well pleased with our new minister, Rev. C. A. Cecil, and let all as members do what is allotted for us to do and co-operate with him that this may be a successful year and much good may be done. Our special meeting begins the 4th Sun. in this month with Rev. N. G. Bethea as pulpit help. We are hoping to have a good meeting. Rev. G. W. Holmes, Pres. of the Annual Conference, will preach here next Friday at 3 p. m.

Mrs. J. W. Williams, F. O. Kirkpatrick, and Misses Alcie Bailey and Nina Johnson are general interest collectors. Mr. Ira N. Johnson was elected to collect for the indebtedness on the Children's Home.

Our S. S. went into winter quarters. We hope it will open in early spring with new interest.

Mrs. Sarah Angel was buried here Jan. 6th. Rev. Mr. Doggett of the M. E. Church at Stokesdale conducted the funeral. She selected the 27th verse of the 14th chapter of St. John to preach the funeral from.——Mrs. Mary Wray was buried Jan. 10th. Both of these were between 75 and 80 years old and members of F. R. church.——Miss Joy Bell Murphy and Mr. Herbert Wilson were married Dec. 29th. Miss Gertrude Pegram and Mr. Hugh Gourley were married Dec. 8th. All of these young people are members of Flat Rock Church. Nina Johnson.

Stokesdale, Jan. 17, 1916.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.—The action of Conference in returning to this field our pastor, Rev. J. B. O'Briant, has given complete satisfaction. Bro. O'Briant has been well received, not only by our people, but by all the churches of the town. His efforts have been very successful, but we hope the present year may be the most fruitful of his entire ministry at this place. We regret to report the sickness of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. O'Briant. They are afflicted with cold or La Grippe. Notwithstanding his condition Mr. O'Briant met the appointments at Mt. Lebanon and New Salem last Sunday.

The interest in Sunday school has revived greatly. In the election of officers Mr. W. A. Lamb was elected Supt. Mr. Lamb is a faithful Sunday school worker; he is alive to the needs of the school. The following are our teachers: Misses Nora Hughes, Aleen Lamb and Etta Lamb, C. J. Parsons, L. R. Hughes, E. F. Caudle, and M. F. Hinshaw. Through the efforts of some of our members the school purchased notes for the teacher. We think this a forward move as it seems to be bearing fruit thus early in the year in increased membership. The attendance has been the largest for the last few Sundays it has been for quite a while. The lack of adequate preparation we consider one of the main hindrances to the Sunday school work. Silly Billy's argument for a better prepared ministry seems to apply with equal force to the Sunday school teacher.

The Ladies' Aid Society of our church is, as the name implies, a real aid. Since the society was organized in Jan., 1915, they have collected for the benefit of the parsonage and other interests of the church more than $125.00. At the last meeting the officers for the present year were elected. Mrs. M. F. Hinshaw was chosen president, Mrs. W. A. Lamb vice president, Mrs. J. F. Dosier Sec., and Mrs. E. F. Caudle Treas.

Another interest of the church that appeals very forcefully to us is the Children's Home. Since the appeal for the support of the home was first made, we have, with the exception of a very few occasions, sent in our monthly collections. The church certainly should rally to the call for funds to relieve the debt on the Home and make it possible for the Home to be enlarged and care for more of our homeless children. On this charge the pastor is making an effort with some degree of success to collect funds for this cause.——It is a sad duty to report the death on Jan. 14th of one of our faithful and aged members, Mrs. Hannah J. Johnson. The funeral was conducted by the pastor and interment was made in the Mt. Lebanon cemetery Saturday afternoon, Jan. 15th. The deceased has been a member of our church a long time. She remained faithful to it to the last.——Saturday evening at 7:30, Jan. 22, a class of children from Worthville under the direction of Miss Phillips, will give a play at the Auditorium in Randleman. The play will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. All are invited to attend. Especially do we invite those of the other churches on this field who are interested in the work the Ladies' Aid Society is doing. M. F. Hinshaw, Reporter.

THE POSTAL CARD - - - - W. F. Kennett, Editor.

We regretted very much to miss our appointment at Hebron last Sunday; but with the sleet and mud and condition of the weather it was thought to be unsafe and useless to go.

A live wire is our Mebane Sunday school. Since we could not (or did not) go to Hebron we attended Sunday school at Mebane. We were agreeably surprised at the number present—about 90. The Baraca and Philathea classes with J. W. Nicholson and Mrs. Henry Nicholson as teachers are doing fine work. Indeed, it is said the school is on a boom.

We are pleased to have a good attendance at the midweek prayer meetings. Last week there were about 60 present.

We were glad to have Mrs. Grace Amick Hunt transfer her membership from Graham to Mebane. She was received into the church here last Sunday night.

We have neglected to express our appreciation to the Ladies' Aid for the beautiful set of bed room furniture placed in the parsonage some weeks ago. They have now given an order for work to be done in parsonage which will add much to the appearance of the interior. We are very sorry to report the serious illness of Mrs. D. M. Qualls. She is one of our best workers. The entire church is praying for her recovery. She was reported slightly better this morning.

Those Journal Blanks. Just to think. We nominated Dr. McCulloch to be proof reader for the Journal and now see how he has fixed us. Well, we still declare "it is too bad." We call Rev. J. R. Hutton, former Conference Treasurer, to witness that we have usually been very correct in our reports. Dr. McCulloch no doubt is right; but we want to see those blanks any way. We are glad the correction has been made even though it puts us "in a hol." The errors are not the less vexatious since the blame has been located. We are trying to take our medicine like a little man.

(Bro. Kennett may see those reports. They will convince him that it is necessary for even the most accurate and careful writers to review what they write before sending it to the printer. Bro. Kennett is so habitually correct in his figures that we will not deny that there was a real pleasure in finding hi min error this time. We trust this was not a wicked pleasure—just the pleasure you find in realizing that some very superior person is really of your own order of beings.—Editor.)

YadkinCollegeCt.—Our beloved president has made his visit and gone. We met all the appointments notwithstanding we had rain, sleet, and some very cold weather. The mud was something fierce. We got through all right, only one accident: one buggy wheel broke and pastor walked a short distance and borrowed a wheel of Mr. Bud Cope and on we went. We met very good congregations everywhere, and Bro. Holmes seemed to be at his best each time. He did us all good and I think his visit will do lasting good. In a very forceful and intelligent way he emphasized the importance of each interest of the church of God. Bro. Holmes shows that he is truly the pastor's friend. He is optimistic for our church, full of zeal and spiritual power. Finance is getting well in hand and each church met in full its pro rata share of president's claim. We were sorry when he had to leave us. May Heaven's blessing attend his labors as he goes from field to field.

Our first quarterly conference convened at Shiloh on Jan. 15. A splendid congregation assembled at 11 o'clock to hear the word preached by Bro. Holmes. After preaching, dinner was spread. The dinner was bountiful and one of the finest I have ever seen. It was eaten in picnic style. Every one seemed to enjoy not only the dinner but himself. The social feature was grand. When we were all filled the quarterly conference was called together. Each church was well represented, somewhere from forty to fifty officials present to answer at roll call. I believe Bro. Holmes remarked to pastor as we were leaving that it was the largest quarterly conference he was ever in. The various reports were very good. We accepted our part of the General Interests as given to us by the Ways and Means Committee of our Annual Conference. We are going to do our best to collect every cent of every assessment. This is our motto for this year—"Every cent of every assessment." Upon the recommendation of pastor, there was a new office created; that of Circuit Financier. Bro. A. H. Evans of Shiloh was elected to fill the new and important office as created. Bro. Evans is one of our most liberal and progressive laymen. His duty will be to visit all the churches, meet with each board of stewards, and co-operate in every way to inaugurate method and system in finance. I believe this forward step will deal a telling blow and that we will soon have more business method and system in our church work. It is already telling—Shiloh has already adopted the pay by the month plan. So the pastor will draw his check from the Treas. each month, his month's salary, and I believe other churches will fall in line and that this Ct. as every Ct. and charge should do, take the finance out of the hands of pastor, and our good laymen will inugurate such methods and systems that the pastor will not have to give finance a thought. Draw his salary monthly and look after the preparation of sermons and the spiritual interest of the church. Why not the church of God get in line and wake up to progress and move as the commercial world is moving? Why should we as preachers have to devote our time in financing the church of God? I verily believe this is the work of our laymen. You are business men and know how to put method and system into your own business. Why not in the Kingdom of God? The preacher should be supported and made to feel easy. When he sees a dozen needs in the family at the same time and has no money to supply those needs, it simply shows a lack of method and system. Come on, Mr. Layman! You have equal rights with the minister in our beloved church. Let's push to the front. I am looking for greater things to be done on this charge. Now I would better close as my say is getting lengthy. I've resolved, however, to write more to our church paper since a brother told me the first thing he looked for on receiving his paper was an article from me. Others came to me and subscribed because they had chanced to see a scratch from my pen. I thought—Well, this may be the cause why more of our people do not take our Methodist Protestant Herald—we pastors do not write enough for it. May the Lord abundantly bless our church and may each and all do our whole duty. Yours in His Name, H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Halifax Ct.—I have met all appointments in this month, but owing to the bad weather and some sickness among the members we have had small congregations. We had a fair congregation at Eden the first Sun., but on the following day we had an extremely small congregation for preaching at 11 a. m., and we had very poor attendance at the quarterly conference in the p. m. Some of the official members were not there because of sickness, and others that I have seen had good reason for not being present, but I fear that a lack of interest kept some away. It is difficult to get many officials to see that they are really needed at a quarterly conference. With the exception of one church, the stewards' report was bad. One sixth of the Conference year has passed, and I fear that we have not realized it. We have the budget system, and the pay monthly plan, and it worked well last year. It will work well again this year if we work it. Let us get busy. This circuit is $153.00 behind on finances. Unfortunately I was forced to use my salary to live on last year. It took it all and $600.00 over to meet my unusual expenses for last year, and I hardly had money to get from Conference. I would not make this confession except for the fact that I am chairman of the Finance Committee, and I believe that there are other ministers who have received even less than I, and it may cause other charges to bestir themselves when they consider that their pastor may be embarrassed financially. I wonder how many of our ministers had to disappoint their children at Christmas? This Ct. made ample provision for this pastor's large family of children, and we have been pounded almost unmercifully. Mr. Andrew Hardy gave us a nice ham last week; but our people had not noticed that time was slipping by so rapidly and that two months' dues should have been paid. By the end of this quarter, we are expecting to be able to report all claims paid in full.

Bro. Bethea will conduct a revival meeting at Fosburgh Camp beginning on the second Sun. in Feb. There will be three services on that day: 11 a. m., 1:00 or 1:30 p. m., and 7:30 p. m. Come and bring your lunch. We are expecting great things at this meeting.——Miss Helen Harrison has been very ill, but she is very much better now. Miss Lossie Hardy is in the hospital at Rocky Mount where she underwent a successful operation for appendicitis. We hope for her a speedy recovery.——Eastern N. C. is "coming." I had the pleasure of attending the first quarterly conference of Roanoke Ct. A motion was unanimously adopted to increase the pastor's salary from $700 to $850. Here we go! R. A. Swaringen.

Asheville.—I am sure that those of you who read my last letter and saw how awfully mixed up certain parts of it were, decided that I had had too good a time on New Year's, or that I was altogether too happy to think straight. But I assure you my letter left my hands in fairly respectable condition so far as spelling and grammar are concerned. I wouldn't think of blaming the Editor whose reputation for sobriety is well established, nor the compositor, who I am equally sure never "teched a drap," so I shall have to blamed it on the linotype.

Things are moving along in about the usual way. We had extra good services on Sunday. At night we had another "Alexander Song Service," and the congregation was especially large, with perhaps the largest number of strangers present that has ever been in the church at any one time. A male quartette came and gave us two splendid selections, and we had a violin solo that unfortunately, because of the breaking of a string, came to an all too sudden ending. We will have to have the part that we missed hearing again.

The C. E. Society held an enjoyable social last Thursday night. It was perhaps the best attended of any that has been held thus far. The Juniors are to have one this Friday. The Senior Society will observe "Christian Endeavor Day," Feb. 6th, by a union service with the Society of the Christian Church. We are looking forward to a good time together.——The churches of the city are to observe the third Sun. in next month as "Pulpit Exchange Day," when all the ministers will preach in some other church than his own.——Well, it keeps coming down. Got ten dollars the last of the week from Capt. and Mrs. S. B. Hunter, of Wilmington. Thank you, friends! That brings it down to $215. Think I can quit asking for anything in a couple more years. Alexander has a song:

"Just a little help from you, just a little help from you.
Wondrous things the Lord may do by just a little help from you."

How about it? C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Roanoke Ct.—Since no report has been made through the church paper since the charge changed pastors, I shall attempt to make known some of the things which are taking place and have taken place. We reached Enfield on Dec. 15, 1915, as Bro. T. E. Davis was moving out to get into his new harness, and entered upon our old duties with a new people. We have been kindly received by the people, and have been remembered in a substantial way by many of them. After having driven through the snow for 23 miles it was a delight to both soul and body to go right into a nice, clean warm parsonage so conveniently planned. The parsonage on this charge is one of the nicest in the Conference, for which much credit is due the ladies. It is partly furnished with furniture, carpets, stoves. It also has electric lights, telephone and many other conveniences.

I have completed my first round on the work, and at some of the churches I have found the people right much discouraged because of local conditions, but I believe with much visiting and more faith the darkness can be dispelled. We have already commenced planning for greater things, which we feel must come to pass this year. One thing is to pay every cent of every assessment. Another is to pay at least fifty cents per member to our Children's Home. Still another is to rebuild or build two new churches which are greatly needed. The congregations at Enfield and at Whitaker's Station have reached the conclusion that they must "do or die" denominationally, and I am indeed glad they have decided to "do." Each of these congregations have purchased perhaps the most desirable lots in their respective towns on which to build their new homes.

Each of these churches has a wide-awake Ladies' Aid Society and from what I have been able to see they are deeply interested in their denomination.——The first quarterly conference was held at Enfield on Jan. 14 with a small representation. (Come along, folks; we must attend our quarterly conferences better.) We were favored with the presence of Bro. Swaringen who was given an opportunity to take part in the discussions. The salary was not fixed at the close of last year for this; so when the time came to take up that part of the business Bro. Stanley Whitaker made a motion to increase the pastor's salary from seven to eight hundred dollars. Bro. Swaringen who is a member of the Finance Committee asked that it be made $850, and this was done without an opposing voice. That would sound good to me even if I were not the pastor. We need more men who are willing to take the step Bro. Whitaker took. The stewards' reports were good, which showed they had $103 on the pastor's salary. Some of the churches will try to pay monthly if not all of them. The plan of appointments was changed at the suggestion of the pastor in order that there might be more preaching. As the plan now stands there will be services at each church twice per month except Roseneath, which will have one forenoon appointment after the 2d Sun. in Feb.——As I see it at present, there is no good reason why this charge should not build up very rapidly. I believe the people are going to contend for a division of the work until it comes to pass, which will be much better. "If the Lord be for us, who can be against us?" Chas. J. Edwards.

Piedmont Ct.—On the 4th Sun. in Nov. I entered my new work. I preached at Union Ridge the 4th Sun. night. On Sat. before the 1st Sun. in Dec. we held our 1st Quar. Conf. All the churches were represented. The usual business was transacted in an enthusiastic way, and seemed like an old-time Quar. Conf. We had preaching in the morning and a good dinner at noon and the business meeting in the afternoon. We elected or re-elected officers and are expecting good results. We have adopted the duplex envelope system for our finances. I have filled all my appointments. I find that each church is doing very good work and live Sunday schools except Mt. Pleasant, the largest church on the charge. It has gone into winter quarters, but I see no reason for it, and I am sure that it is a bad mistake for a church to stop its S. S. Canaan is much smaller, but I am delighted with the work they are doing. Mt. Carmel has a fine S. school. I am well pleased with the outlook for a good year. The people have received me very kindly, and the stewards have been doing well from the beginning.——The good neighbors and the people of Union Ridge gave us a surprise pounding the other night that was of great value to us. We were more surprised when we found that the City Market at Winston had taken such a part in the act of kindness. We are indeed thankful to all that took part.——We are going to try to pay our part of the assessment for the Children's Home. With best wishes to all the brethren of the Conference, J. W. Self.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.—As this is my first report, will first say that we feel very fortunate in having our pastor returned to us. He did much the past year for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom and we feel that he is going to do more this year. Last Sunday was our regular preaching day. Our pastor came, but owing to the disagreeable weather and so few present he did not preach, but collection was taken for our Children's Home and $12 taken in. Two young ladies were appointed to visit each member, and in that way we feel sure the rest of our collection can very soon be raised. Work is progressing very rapidly on our parsonage and we hope very soon to have Bro. Hunter and family in the neighborhood. Am glad to say our Sunday school is moving along nicely. The attendance is good, but still room for improvement. We have a very interesting prayer meeting every Sunday night, which we believe is doing much good. Beginning with the first Sunday in March we expect to have two sermons a month—on 1st Sun. afternoon at 3:30 and as before on 3d Sun. at 11a. m.

James White, one of our faithful members, is now in the hospital at Norfolk for treatment. We ask all readers of the Herald to pray that he may soon be restored to health.

Bessie Satterwhite, Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.—Sunday, Jan. 9, Bro. D. R. Williams preached his first sermon at this place, snow preventing second Sunday in Dec. It was, as we expected it to be, a very interesting sermon. He is to preach for us again the fifth Sunday. Am hoping and expecting great works on this charge this year. We are to hold a circuit Sunday school rally at this place second Sunday in May and this will act as anniversary day for our church here, and this is also Mothers' Day, so by this think we can have a full program.

W. Polk Garrett.

Midway, Haw River Ct.—We are glad to have Bro. Ashburn back this year and feel sure that we will have a good year spiritually if we the members will cooperate with him. Our President was with us last 2d Sun. and made an interesting talk on the general interests after which he preached a good sermon. We regret very much that on account of the weather not so many of our people were out to hear him. Bro. John Dixon was elected to collect money for debt on Children's Home. Bro. L. R. Dixon was re-elected Supt. of S. S., Bro. J. D. McCollum assistant, and Bro. E. J. Elmore secretary. Our S. S. is doing very well, but would do so much better if all would come. We have prayer meeting every third Sunday; not many out last Sunday. The meeting was conducted by Bro. G. R. Wright. May God's richest blessings be upon us all.

Flat Rock Ct.—Special meetings: At Flat Rock beginning on the 4th Sun. in Jan., Rev. N. G. Bethea to assist. At Bethel the 1st Sab. in Feb., Rev. D. A. Braswell to assist. As it is not a busy time we will expect a good attendance and good meetings.

C. A. Cecil.

Mt. Zion, Buncombe Ct.—Last Sunday was our regular church day at Mt. Zion. Rev. Mr. Martin, our former pastor, preached a very helpful sermon. He always preaches with power. We were more than glad to have him return to us this year. (There was much sickness in the settlement, and some visiting always has to be done on the regular church day, you know. So there was not a large congregation at church. We all know if we do our part and help the pastor as we should the church would grow as it ought to. We are expecting this to be the greatest year yet. Pray for us that it may be. We must be like the little boy I heard of that could pray the best. There were two little boys in a S. S. class. The teacher called on one to open the class with prayer and the other one to close it with prayer. After going home one of them asked his mother why it was that the other little boy could pray so much better than he could. She said: I don't know why it is. He went on and after awhile, coming in, he said: "I know now why it is that he can pray so much better than I can. I heard him out on the barn loft down on his knees practicing." We need more people that practice the barn loft praying more. St. John 14:14. If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it. So let's get the blessings that are for us. Don't wait for a revival; let's begin now. We don't have a large Sunday school, but it is a good one. They all seem to be earnest and working for the interest of the school.

The Herald doesn't hear from us often, but you know the old saying, A still hog drinks the slop. Don't forget to pray for this circuit. Sincerely, Vonnie Roberts.

(That is a new old saying to us, but it is expressive.—Ed.

THE CONFERENCE JOURNAL.

It is always difficult to criticise a thing without touching a person, and for that reason I hesitate to say some things about our Journal. I certainly appreciate the task of the Secretary and the publisher, I have filled or wobbled around in both places a few times myself. But my desire is to see a journal with the maximum of good things and a minimum of errors, therefore I write about some of the errors, for two reasons, some of them may not be known as errors, others ought to be made plain so as to be avoided in the future.

In the first place I want to voice the hope that in the future, our publisher will not hold the publication of the Journal back for any report or anybody; if he can't get out more than a few reports, with the proceedings and the covers, let's have them, and on time.

Now there are a few matters somebody ought to call the attention of the reader to, as they are more or less confusing. First, the report on page 36 of the Nominating Committee gives the correct list of the Board of Church Extension rather than the names found on page 12.

It seems that the Conference Statistician's Report got a jolt somewhere. It was all run together like a news item, notwithstanding it was written with proper paragraphs, and in the shuffle, some items were left out, among which is the grand total, and the name of the Statistician.

The page of summarized Statistics is also quite misleading. We gather from this summary that we lost 16 parsonages and 53 churches last year. A few more years like that and we will be out of existence. Now most of us pastors know that this is a time when figures lie, but many others may not know this. Better had it been that these figures had not been tabulated than thus arranged. The trouble, however, goes back to the pastor. These additions were all made on an adding machine, therefore doubtless correct; but the pastors made the figures which we added; except in some few charges, there were no reports at all. Of course we were working with figures and when they gave out we stopped. This accounts for some of those discrepancies. But will our people never take more interest in sending correct reports to Conference?

We reported lost by death last year 822 and only 87 the year before. Did not some of our pastors shove a few of their lost members into the deceased column? Surely we did not lose all that number by death last year. Then some of the charges report nothing for many of the general interests; it is hardly to be believed that some of the charges thus reported blank, blank, blank, for missions, etc., are correctly reported, for one of these is one of our stations. Still the reports must be published as sent in.

Let us all try to bring correct reports to Conference this fall, and then see that they are correctly printed in the Journal. Yours for correctness, R. M. Andrews.

CHILDREN'S HOME . . . . REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT.

Shoals S. S., $1.55; Shiloh S. S., Randolph Ct., $1.84; Concord S. S., $4.22; Bethesda S. S., Yad. Col. Ct., $2.53; Cedar Cliff S. S., $2.11; Mt. Pleasant S. S., Mt. Pleasant Ct., $3.10; Liberty S. S., $3.50; Henderson S. S., $1.75; Love's Grove S. S., $1.30; Burlington S. S., $3.67; Bethesda S. S., Pageland (?) Ct., $0.85; Spring Hill S. S., Piedmont Ct., $1.00; Bethesda S. S., Halifax Ct., $2.37; New Hope, Vance Ct., $1.50; Harris Chapel S. S., Vance Ct., $1.30; Fair Grove S. S., Haw River Ct., $2.35; Mt. Zion S. S., $1.00; Men's Bible Class, Henderson, $7.78; Why Not Ct., $3.00. Total, $46.74.

Our larger boys are all smiling because the Odell Hardware Co., Greensboro, sent nine rain coats, the kind that are worth something to you. The cold weather is cutting down our Sunday school attendance and that is affecting our collections. Let me make a suggestion to you: double your contribution the next time a collection is taken for the Home. While the amount is smaller this week than it has been for some time, we have never been more hopeful.

H. A. Garrett.

Correction of a Correction.—One word was changed in Bro. Garrett's correction last week. completely changing the meaning. What he wished us to say was that it was the best average attendance of the Intermediate Class that won the $5.00 prize which was generously given to the Home.—Editor.

Gaston Ct.—While others are reporting the good things their people are giving them, we feel that we, too, have something to report. We came back to our work after Conference in December. We spent a night with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wright. The next morning when we started for the parsonage, Mrs. Wright loaded us down with fresh meats. Since then Mrs. Wright has kindly remembered us with butter, milk, eggs, apples, and pears.

She is not by herself in these kind deeds, but she started them. Mrs. A. L. Falls, Mrs. A. P. Sills, Mrs. Mel Grigg, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Spencer, Mrs. John Fraley, Mrs. Whit Blanton, Mrs. R. A. Hudson, during the holidays have contributed various articles, including sixteen different cakes. You see our people want us to keep sweet.

Then last Saturday I was just wondering what we would have for Sunday (our larder was almost empty) when in came Mr. J. F. Spencer with a box of fresh meat. He said they had killed a pig and thought perhaps some of it would taste good to us. Appreciate it? We certainly did. It will tide us over several days. All of these kindnesses make us realize more than ever our great and grave responsibility. And our hope and prayer is that we may be able during the coming year to do more for these kind people than we have in the past. May we all work together to help build up our Master's kingdom here on earth. Mrs. Will H. Neese.

Mt. Carmel, Piedmont Ct.—Although yesterday was a damp, sleety morning, quite a goodly congregation came out to hear Bro. Self and were not disappointed. The more we see and hear him the better we like him.

Our Sunday school is evergreen. We appointed a Christmas entertainment for Christmas night, which was rained out, but next morning was clear and we decided to have it that night and were surprised that on so short notice our church was crowded and quite a number had to occupy standing room. All were well pleased with the exercises. On the 1st Sunday in January we re-organized with fair prospects for another year. J. E. F., Rep.

UNION PRAYER MEETINGS IN PAGELAND, S. C.

I was very glad to be able to attend a union prayer service while at home for my Christmas holidays. These union services are held each Wednesday evening and are an example of Christian fellowship.

The town as a whole has displayed a great interest in the one week-day prayer service, each church being well represented. The churches in Pageland are Methodist Protestant, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist and Presbyterian. The pastors of the four churches are doing all they can to make this union prayer service a success; not only by their prayers but presence as well.

On Wednesday evening following Christmas the services were held in the Baptist church. Mr. Thomas Smith, of the Methodist Protestant Church, conducted them. On the next Wednesday night services were to be conducted at the Methodist Protestant Church with the pastor of the M. E. Church as conductor. And so it goes through out the year—every Wednesday evening a union meeting led by a member of some church other than his own. Let us hope that great good will be accomplished in these services. For, "Where there is union there is strength." Robert Turner.

—The C. E. Convention which closed last Sunday night was a very interesting one and the Endeavorers are inspired to go forward in their good work.

—Henry James, the distinguished author, whose home is in London, and who recently surrendered his American citizenship and became an English citizen, is reported as dangerously ill.

—We have been unable to publish all the reports received last week and this. We regret to defer any, but our space is limited and sometimes we are compelled to postpone or to omit publication altogether. We ask the forbearance of all. We are trying to do the best thing under the circumstances without any partiality or prejudice.

DIED.

In Memory of Mrs. Rachel Isley.

(Adopted by Burlington M. P. Sunday School.)

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst our greatly esteemed and dearly beloved sister, Mrs. Rachel Isley,

Be it resolved, That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to her bereaved loved ones, and commend them to our Heavenly Father who alone can comfort in these sad hours.

Second, be it resolved, That we as members of the Burlington M. P. Sunday school will never forget her faithfulness and presence in the Sunday school. May we all follow her example.

Third, be it resolved, That her leaving us for a better home inspires us to greater things and better work for the Master.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the bereaved family, a copy be placed on the minutes of the Sunday school, and copies be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, the Burlington News, and the Dispatch for publication.

Sibyl Pugh.—Tabernacle community was very much saddened on November 14 by hearing of the death of Sibyl Pugh, a much loved and highly esteemed member of Tabernacle church. The last six weeks of her life she suffered much. I was glad to know Sibyl Pugh the last two years of her life and having her visit in our home and going into the kind, hospitable home where she lived and served for many years; glad for the invitation to sit at the table which was so well prepared by her dear hands that are now so cold. I believe she is now being served around the table of the Lord, as she so faithfully served others while on earth.

She was not only loved by the old, middle-aged and young, but even the little children loved "Aunt Sibyl" and were often seen by her side looking up into her face with a smile, she looking down into theirs with the same. She will be sadly missed in the church and Sunday school, where she often went, sometimes when her body was fatigued and suffering. We believe she has heard the glad "well done" and entered into eternal rest.

O how sadly we will miss you
As we journey here below;
But we hope to meet and greet you
On that bright and golden shore.
Here your useful life is ended,
But you're resting now above
In the house of many mansions,
Where all is joy, peace and love.

Johnson.—Hannah J. Johnson of Randleman, N. C., aged 78 years, passed away Jan. 14. Funeral was conducted from the home Jan. 15 after which her body was taken to Mt. Lebanon cemetery where by loving hands it was quietly laid to rest. Sister Johnson was a member of Mt. Lebanon church for many years and during early life and as long as she was active was regular in attendance at all the church services. When she could go no longer she was still interested and made inquiries of her pastor often as to how Mt. Lebanon was getting along. She rejoiced to see the day when Randleman Ct. bought a parsonage. She remained a faithful member until death. The writer visited her many times and always found her strong in faith and anxiously waiting her time. During her active life she was also a most useful woman in her community, being especially kind and helpful in time of sickness, and had many friends who will remember her for her kindness to them. She leaves three sons and one daughter, eight grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

CHILDREN'S HOME. Report of Treas. Building Fund.

Previously reported, $327.86; J. H. Spencer, Fair Grove Ch., Why Not Ct., $10; Rev. C. M. Compher, Lynchburg, Md. Conf., $10; Capt. and Mrs. S. B. Hunter, Wilmington, $2; Mr. W. W. Lindley, Moneta, Va., $5; Mrs. C. T. Luck, 50c; Mr. Alfred Rush, 50c. Total, $355.86.

Since my last report placing Liberty church as the first to appear on the honor roll as having paid all the 50-cents per member pledge, upon investigation we find that our church at Reidsville is entitled to first place, having sent me Ck. Dec. 24 for $34, that being 50 c per member. This error came by my not knowing how many members are at Reidsville. In competing for place on Honor Rool, always state the number of members at each church and there will be no confusion. Hoping to hear from many more soon,

Yours for paying off the debt.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S ADVICE.

It became the duty of President Lincoln to send a letter of censure to a young officer accused of quarreling with another. This is what he wrote:

"Quarrel not at all. No man resolved to make the most of himself can spare time for personal contention. Still less can he afford to take all the consequences, includng the vitiating of his temper, and the loss of self-control. Yield larger things to which you can show no more than equal right; and yield lesser ones though clearly your own. Better give your path to a dog than be bitten by him in contesting for the right. Even killing the dog would not cure the bite."

WANTED—A WORKER.

God never goes to the lazy or idle when He needs men for His service. When God wants a worker He calls for a worker. When He has work to be done He goes to those who are already at work. When God wants a great servant He calls a busy man. Scripture and history attest this truth.

Moses was busy with his flocks at Horeb.
Gideon was busy threshing wheat by the press.
Saul was busy searching for his father's lost beasts.
David was busy caring for his father's sheep.
Elisha was ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen.
Amos was busy following the flock.
Nehemiah was busy bearing the king's wine-cup.
Peter and Andrew were busy casting a net into the sea.
James and John were busy mending their nets.
Matthew was busy collecting customs.
Saul was busy persecuting the friends of Jesus.
William Carey was busy mending and making shoes.—Unknown.

PROVINCIAL CHRISTIANITY.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Who is my neighbor? The man who needs me. Oh, how provincial we are! You know what it is to be provincial. From what you call your big city you go to a little village in the country and listen to the gossip of the village, to the paltry talk of the neighbors, that speaks of little plans and little things. They of the village, you say, have a little vision and a little newspaper, and live a narrow life, and you say: "How provincial." You yourself like the broad world outlook. You like to speak and think in terms of the universe. And yet how provincial is our Christianity! It is Presbyterian or Protestant or American or Anglo-Saxon, but there is no provincialism in the Gospel of Jesus. Cecil Rhodes, the maker of South Africa, said that God thought in continents. Some men think in nations, and some in states, and some in cities, and some in villages. Cecil Rhodes said that God thought in continents. Jesus said God thought in terms of the universe. Jesus told us to go into all the world and make disciples of the whole creation. "Why call ye Me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

Are you willing to take into the circle of your brotherhood the children of God scattered abroad? They said of Sir Walter Scott that he treated every man like a born brother. That was a fine thing to say. That was the spirit of Jesus. That was the spirit of Christ gained in the atmosphere of the cross. The great Scotch nobleman treated every man like a born brother, and that is what the world needs today. Oh, how it needs it! Oh, the pathos and the tragedy of the world's situation as we see it today! "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The infinite value of every human life. The infinite value of every little child, no matter what his language or his race, no matter what his color or his creed. During the march of Napoleon over the Alps of Italy we are told that a great avalanche swept across his path, and a little drummer boy was carried in the falling snow down into the great gorge below. He was not hurt, and, standing upon his great snow mountain, he began to beat the charge, and word was taken to the great commander of the perilous position of the little lad. Only extraordinary measures could have saved him, but what was a little boy to the man who thought of battalions in terms of food for powder? Onward they marched and as the army disappeared over the hill they heard the funeral march that the lad was playing for his own requiem in his icy prison house of death.—The Family Altar.

HONOR ROLL OF CHURCHES.

[We purpose publishing in this list the names of the churches that pay at least an average of 50 cents a member for the payment of the debt on the Children's Home. We will number them in the order in which they make payment as reported by Captain Rankin, the Treasurer.]

1. Reidsville Church.
2. Liberty Church, St. Paul Circuit.

A very sensible view of what should be our attitude toward the warring nations is given by Wong Yie, a Chinaman, as quoted in the Missionary Voice. He says: It is hard indeed for a Chinaman to understand this thing. I know from personal observation what fine men there are in the countries now at war. They see things ordinarily in a very true light, but in this thing of war they seem to contradict themselves in all other things. Now we know, after these nations are exhausted with strife, after millions of dollars of property have been destroyed, after innumerable men are killed, that there will be a congress called to treat over the new settlement. The Chinese mind asks why not have this congress of reason before rather than after the fight.

VOLUME XXII. GREENSBORO, N. C., MAY 25, 1916. NUMBER 27.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Zanesville, O., May 18.

Our N. C. party arrived this P. M. We had a pleasing surprise in Lynchburg, Va. Mr. R. C. Wood and Rev. Mr. Hines, pastor of the M. P. Church, met us at the station with automobiles and took us riding over the city for an hour. They took us past splendid residences, parks, Randolph Macon College, and a Presbyterian orphanage, with its six or seven brick buildings. Not satisfied with this, they took us to a restaurant, and gave us our dinner. Then they took us and showed us their church—a large and substantial building near the business center of the city. They told us of extensive improvements soon to be made in the building to give more room for Sunday school work and more light. Bro. Hines is a class-mate of Revs. T. M. Johnson and J. S. Williams, and is a man of fine qualities of heart as well as of head. He succeeds Bro. Compher as pastor in Lynchburg.

Bros. Taylor and Harris of Henderson joined our party at Lynchburg. We traveled over the Norfolk and Western Railway to Columbus, O., where we had a few hours' wait. We took breakfast and dinner here, some of us in a "self-serving" restaurant. Each man is given a tray, knife, fork and spoon and started down a line running by a long counter containing many kinds of food. By the time he reaches the other end of the line he has on his tray such things as he selects; then he pays for them, takes his tray to a table and sits and eats at his leisure.

We visited the capitol building. Costly cases to be air-tight with glass fronts were being constructed in the walls of the halls to receive and preserve the battle flags that have come down from the Civil War. Some of our party visited and shook hands with the governor of Ohio.

I went to the Supreme Court Room just before the Court began its day's work. At a call from the court crier, the seven justices marched in with their black gowns on. Everybody in the room arose and stood till the judges had seated themselves. They sat in seven revolving upholstered chairs on a raised platform resembling a very wide pulpit. In front of this platform and facing it was a desk resembling a pulpit stand for the use of the lawyer making appeal. The seven justices are elderly, intellectual-looking men.

We heard two cases argued. One was of a man who had been killed by the explosion of a steam engine while he was standing near watching it. The engine was being used by some men improving a road. The road had become muddy and passers-by had been in the habit of going inside the field near the engine by permission of the owner of the field. The man killed was following the beaten way inside the field when he stopped to see the machinery at work. One side argued that the owner of the engine, which was known to be defective, was responsible for the man's death and liable for damage, and that the case represented a large number of possible cases from the use of automobiles, etc., on the public highway, and therefore that the public interest was involved. The other side argued that as the man was not employed there, had no business there, and went out of the highway to get there, there was no liability for damage.

The other case arose from an injunction issued by a lower court restraining a reducing company outside the City of Cincinnati. This company had a contract to destroy the garbage, dead animals, etc., from the city and had an extensive plant costing $160,000. A man half a mile away, who had lived in the same place ever since the plant started operation twenty years ago, three years ago entered suit, charging that offensive gases and odors from the reducing plant were a grievous nuisance. It was claimed by the other side that the injunction should not have been granted, as it injured the company more than the nuisance injured the man, and that the proper remedy would have been damages payable once for all.

While these cases were being argued, various justices made inquiries of the lawyers pleading, took notes of the cases, and then passed on to other hearings, reserving their decisions to be made up at leisure, no doubt through discussion among themselves. It is no easy job that a supreme court justice has on his hands.

Some of us visited the First Congregational Church served by Rev. Washington Gladden for 36 years, and of which he is still pastor emeritus, though he is now over eighty years of age. Rev. Carl Patton is now the acting pastor. The church has twelve hundred members, though the Sunday school attendance is less than 300. It was explained that most of the members live far away and that their children go to nearer Sunday schools.

A young lady is employed constantly by this church as the pastor's stenographer and assistant. She has a list of the members on cards resembling library cards. She makes notes on these cards for the information of the pastor to enable him to deal intelligently with each case as occasion may require.

There are three Methodist Protestant churches in Columbus which we wished to see, but time failed us.

We arrived at Zanesville in time for supper and found forty or fifty already gathered.

The editor finds himself fortunate in being assigned to a home in the house by the church—the home of Richard Boyce and his wife. Bro. Boyce is a good Irish brother who is greatly interested in recent events in Ireland, and who is glad the rising republic was suppressed. He saw in it oppression of the Protestants by the Roman Catholics.

Our party enjoyed the trip and some are already expressing satisfaction with their homes for the Conference. More anon,

J. F. McCulloch.

Zanesville, O., May 19, 1916.

General Conference opened with delegates present from Ala., Ark., Texas, Ga., Ind., Iowa, Kansas, La., Md., Mich., Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Penn., Tenn., W. Va., Ky., Mo., and Japan.

The opening sermon was by Rev. H. L. Elderdice. (We hope to print it soon.) Pres. Davis and Secy. Beck read their reports for the quadrennium. President Davis made an eloquent plea for devotion to the Methidist Protestant Church. He compared it among other ecclesiasticisms to the Swiss Republic among the nations of Europe.

The election of General Conference officers came on Friday afternoon. Bro. Davis was re-elected president on the first ballot by a vote of 117 to 13. (The 13 votes were divided between two other brethren.) Rev. C. H. Beck was unanimously re-elected Secretary and Treasurer. Rev. C. S. Johnson was elected Statistician.

To-night we are to have a sermon by Rev. J. H. Lucas, chancellor of Kansas City University.

The Children's Home will receive attention next Monday forenoon.

More next week. Editor.

THE CHURCH OF GOD A BEGGAR.

The Church of God is made to appear in the role of a beggar frequently because of indifferent members. Let a stranger visit our earth from some far-away planet and attend lodges, churches and other meetings; he would readily reach the conclusion that the Church was by far the greatest beggar on the planet.

The preacher would be heard pleading with people to make regular contributions, such as to keep the Church from falling into disrepute. And his plea would be made to folks who had stoutly professed that they would do anything for the Lord—anything that would not cost them money, time, or labor.

The official boards would be seen in twos and threes pleading with the members to make contributions to the salary of their beloved pastor so that he would not starve before arrangements could be made to get rid of him and secure his successor. This plea would be made to those who professed to love the Lord with all their souls, mind, and strength.

Sermons would be heard from the text, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," and for weeks and months the people would have to be begged to take a half a cent out of each dollar that came into their hands to extend the heavenly kingdom.

Dishes would be heard to rattle and certain elect ladies on some vacant lot would be seen serving out ice cream, with a very small spoon, at a dime a dish. When asked what they were doing, the reply would suggest that the church needed paint and the parsonage was one of the shabbiest houses on the street and that both had to be looked after and times were so hard.

Should the Christian's Book be examined carefully, it would be ascertained that the people of the Church were not giving according to its teachings. The people would be seen to be robbing the Church and robbing God.

No real estate man would take his prospectors to Church and show them the nickels and coppers in the plates to demonstrate the prosperity of the country. The treasurer of the Church would not be asked to show his books as a sample of the prosperity of a country in which the people loved the Lord and gave as their God had prospered them. If such records were shown, the prospector would conclude that he had come to Poverty Lane.

In the olden days the people were directed by Moses to give a tenth and then to begin making their offerings. Until the Church of God in modern times, with the wonderful electric lights of the most wonderful century in the world's history, is doing as well as patriarchs at the dawn of a far-off era, the Church of the redeemed will be made to appear in the eyes of the observer as a pitiable beggar.

How the Church needs some voice to shout: "Prove me now. Give me a tenth I'll open the windows of heaven." In response to such an appeal the Church members need to fall at the mourners' bench and repent for having robbed God. Then there would dawn an era of habitual liberality. There would be fewer unpainted churches and churches made sway-backed by heavy mortgages. Then finance committees and official boards would not be in danger of the mad house. Then business men in official relation to the Church would have the respect of their business associates, and the pastor would habitually wear a smile.—Wallace M. Crutchfield, in Christian Advocate.

BRINGING DOWN THE BOYS.

Much is being said or written with regard to the pressing problem of bringing up the boys. Every boy is to its elders a gift, a burden, a challenge, a peril, a promise, and a riddle. Whatever be the training given to a child it must be administered at once, for the boys represent humanity on the wing—they have a way of quickly turning into men. Many parents wistfully watch the rapid growth of their children, and regret the passage of the days when only their little ones could be folded in their arms. Some one has given this turn to a familiar passage of Scripture: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and away he will go!"

But while the boy is with us as a boy is the time to mold his thoughts and manners in imitation of an ideal pattern. Part of this bringing up of the boys consists in bringing them down. A lively lad is at times too lively. Oftentimes he is like a locomotive with an overplus of steam—blowing off extra vapor through the safety valve; or he may be gifted with an enterprising imagination soaring too near the sun, which will be apt to melt his wax wings, so that he falls into sudden disillusionment, if not destruction. Again, the little lad may show too much temper, and, in obedience to a vague ideal of "honor," resent supposed affronts at which he should laugh rather than fume. For many reasons—not always for the same reasons—the boys need to be brought down, as well as up. Into their lives, in other words, must enter the principle of control, as well as inspiration, impulse, initiative.

How to curb the lads without crushing them, how to restrain their enthusiasm without lessening their ardor for noble action, how to abate their vanity without weakening a legitimate self-respect, is the problem. The first thing to do is to recognize that a boy's energy, while it may at times be excessive, is his capital in trade, with which he is to make his fortune when a man. If he has a strong will and backbone, all the better—for then he may, if willed to the good, prove a mighty factor in the life of the world. A child's will should never be "broken," but only bent. While it is true that the tree takes the direction of the growing twig, there will never be a tree at all if the twig, instead of being gently pressed to a proper position, be snapped in two. In general, the enthusiasm of young people should be taken for granted as a fact, and then utilized as a factor, being directed into channels where it may put itself to work for useful ends, rather than blow itself to pieces like a boiler in which the steam has been too long pent up. When, too, a boy is over proud and vain, it may be possible, by discreetly showing him how such exaggerated egoism has in the past led him into ridiculous or perilous situations, to cure him of his "bumptiousness," and render him thereafter more humble and cautious. We all of us learn by experience, which is bringing us down while it is lifting us up. After a man-boy or a boy-man has made mistakes many times over and sorely suffered therefrom, he is more apt to walk humbly with his God, and respectfully toward his fellow men.

Whether it be in this way or that way, gently, firmly, and tactfully the boys must be taken down when they go too far. "Spare the rod and spoil the child" is an adage whose force and applicability abide from generation to generation, even if the method of physical punishment be no longer approved. There is reason to think that today the tendency is too much in the direction of a liberty for children which easily runs into license. In many households the young people run up, out, and around like scraggly brambles, instead of maturing with the steady strength and elegance of the oak or the elm. Pruning is as necessary for youngsters as for vines or saplings. Such discipline, imparted after much study of the boy (to whose solution modern psychology and pedagogy may contribute some valuable hints) should tend not so much to repression as expression, and ought to mingle copious portions of praise with some visiting of censure. As a rule the "do's" ought to be more than the "don't's;" for life, in a sense, began in a promise, not a prohibition (Gen. 2:16, 17). Give a boy plenty of rope, but never enough to hang himself with. Allow him scope, yet make him feel his responsibilities as a moral being. Lead him rather than drive him, but point out to him with all plainness his faults, that he may not repeat his failures. From time to time gently, tactfully, and sympathetically bring him down that you may help him eventually to mount to a position very far up in the scale of living.—Zion's Herald.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT FOR PROF. MARTIN H. HOLT.

Whereas, Prof. Martin H. Holt, a most highly esteemed member of the Methodist Protestant Church and a most efficient member of the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home of said Church was on the 26th day of November, 1914, called from his earthly labors to his heavenly reward; and

Whereas, the members of the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home in their annual meeting the 11th day of Nov., 1915, desired to pay a tribute of love to his memory, and to tender their heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family;

Therefore be it resolved,

First, That although we recognize the hand of merciful and wise God in the taking away of our Brother Holt from us, and bow in humble submission to His will, yet it is with a deep sense of personal loss and bereavement that we contemplate the death of our friend and brother. His wise counsel, his strong personality, his deep interest in the Home will be greatly missed in the future meetings of the Board.

Second, That while we cherish his memory as a brother and emulate his virtues as a Christian worker and teacher,—for he gave his life for the young of our land,—we shall commend his deep interest in our Church and in the Home to all our people; praying that the blessings of Heaven shall keep fresh and sacred the good deeds and lofty purposes of our departed brother; that although dead, yet he may through these continue to speak unto us.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Board as a part of our permanent records; that a copy be sent to the family of our departed brother; and that a copy be sent to the M. P. Herald for publication.

Signed,

R. M. Andrews,
T. A. Hunter,
Mrs. WM. C. Hammer,
Committee.

MY APOLOGY TO THE INJURED.

Our genial chairman of Finance Committee informs me, through our Conference organ, that I should apologize to the brethren, and as he is one of the number I will cheerfully include him. Dear brethren of the ministry and laity: Of you whom I have caused to have nightmares, troublesome dreams and fearful forebodings, I most humbly beg pardon. Truly, brethren, I did not have the remotest idea that I was making havoc of your peace of mind, while I was innocently writing those little articles. If those of you who are wounded the deepest will only let me know, through the Herald, who you are, I will make amends to the best of my ability. You are right, Mr. Chairman, Bro. Moton is in no way responsible for Odd Sheep's capers. He is with you in opinion if I see straight or read plain print. I did not get any of what you call "thunder" at Annual Conference. I never plough another man's heifer without giving him due credit for the same on the spot. I plough my own little calf. Poor and scrubby I admit, notwithstanding I feed it the best I can. Brethren, do you not realize the fact that it is a fearful thing to attack an old, mouldy, soured and moth-eaten policy of ridicule, that served its day years ago if indeed it ever deserved recognition? It has reached the degree in which it looks like the first cousin of coercion which is the father of aversion. Remember, I criticize the method and not the man or men. I expected a storm of protest from its advocates but instead of offering one reason in its favor they are after my wool. The chairman thinks he has found the sheep. I am quite glad. About when are you going to shear him, Mr. Chairman? Sincerely yours,

The Odd Sheep.

Many new friends were made for the Home. Here too, as at other places we have gone a splendid dinner was served.

Our school closed Monday night with a splendid exercise by the children. It is a pleasure to tell our people that we have had another year of splendid work by the children. Mrs. Harrell is devoted to the work. Her energy and thoroughness will tell when the children go out into active life.

TO PASTORS.

If life and health permit I expect to be on Vance Circuit the second Sabbath in July and the following week; and while in that part of our State will gladly assist any brother or brethren in one or more special meetings who may need and desire my help; provided they notify me in due time. The first to call, the first served!

YOUR HEALTH.

"Take with you these two essentials to good health and practice them diligently—the sanitation of your environments and the sanitation of your mind. The first includes cleanliness of the body, of clothes, of food, and of your surroundings, while the other includes cleanliness of the thoughts that enter your mind. Young friends, you dare not allow anything that is not good, that is not clean, and that is not wholesome to enter your mind. Whatever you receive and entertain in this sacred chamber becomes a part of you. You cannot think evil thoughts, much less practice them, without their leaving their impress upon you. Your thoughts make or unmake you."—William Rainey Bennett.

FARM LIFE INSURANCE.

The best life insurance the farmer or rural dweller can take out this summer is that that will insure him and his family protection against three of the most comman and serious of summer diseases—typhoid fever, diarrhœal diseases and hookworm. This particular kind of life insurance, probably better termed health insurance, as explained by the State Board of Health, is based upon three home conditions—the home water supply, the home method of disposing of sewage and the protection of the home against flies.

The water supply must be free from pollution. It should receive no surface drainage and should be on higher ground than any stables, out houses or privies. The hands should never come in contact with bucket or chain. For this reason pumps and wells having closed tops are much safer than open wells. The farm home privy to be safe, must be flyproof and so constructed as not to pollute the surrounding soil. The pit type of privy with a closed back has been recommended to meet these needs. The farm home, furthermore, must be screened. Where it is impractical on the farm and elsewhere to keep flies from breeding altogether, it is practical to screen all the doors and windows of the house, the back porch included, and be free from flies.

"In conclusion," says the Board, "the three things needed for a farmer to have freedom from filth diseases this summer is to look well to his water supply, to the safe disposal of human waste, and to thoroughly screening his home."

"THE OPPORTUNITY AND TEST OF AMERICAN CHRISTIANITY."

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has addressed a message to the Christian Church, proposing for its consideration and co-operation—"(1) A nation-wide effort for the relief of the sufferers by the war in Europe and Asia, and (2) A movement that shall prepare our Christian Churches to play the vital part that belongs to them in the period of reconstruction and reconciliation that must follow the close of the war."

From Dr. Chas. S. Macfarland: "We should prepare to make this work of reconciliation and reconstruction our largest effort for the immediate future, and prepare our minds and activities for it. . . . The one thing which has been our strongest asset of influence has been the relief work of America and the American churches. But it has not been adequate or proportional."

Look at the needs: Belgium—"Three million destitute people kept alive in Belgium by the relief furnished through the Commission for Relief in Belgium." Northern France—"In the invaded provinces of France the stock of clothing and supplies has been practically exhausted, and the situation has become critical in the extreme." Serbia—"Five millions of people deprived of their living and of chance to make it." Poland—"Three and a half millions are in a condition of starvation, with certain death facing them unless relief comes speedily." East Prussia—"East Prussia has been overrun by the contesting armies, the people suffering whether the Russians or the German forces were victorious. The conditions are such as to call for sympathy and help." TheArmenian Crisis—"All relief committees strongly urge larger remittances."

To Christian ministers:

"This is a time in which there are no precedents. The Divine call is upon the Churches to do something large, worthy of their Master and Lord, something that shall manifest His spirit to the world and prove the reality of Christian discipleship and brotherhood. We feel sure that when you know the steps that led to this action by the Federal Council, and realize the immediate needs and the yet wider and more lasting service that our Churches may render when peace has come, you will join us in the effort to bring the entire membership into co-operation in this noble work, even to the point of sacrificial giving."

"The Federal Council, in view of the facts herewith presented and the immediate necessities of the situation, urges you to bring this matter before your people on Memorial Sunday, May 28, 1916, or on as near a Sunday as may be practicable, and take an offering as an initial expression of sympathetic interest."

SOME THINGS THAT WILL HELP US TO BE MORE SUCCESSFUL SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

(Read by Miss Lena Gill at Granville Ct. Sunday School Rally at Mt. Carmel church, May 14, 1916.)

The position of a Sunday school teacher requires your presence every Sunday. You cannot stay away even once without making your class feel your absence. If you set the example of being absent, they will surely follow, and irregular attendance is soon followed by withdrawal from the school. If it should be absolutely necessary for you to be away, provide a suitable substitute.

Come early, get there before school opens. You must not think that getting there in time to teach the lesson will do. If you come late the scholars will soon fall into the same habit. No class is well treated when the teacher is late. Coming early offers a splendid opportunity to become acquainted with individual members of your class.

Give your entire attention to your class. Let them feel that your heart and soul are wrapped up in them from the moment you enter the church until you leave it. Do not let any outside matter claim any of your time or attention. Give each member a hearty greeting and especially the ones that come in late.

See that the class has a hearty interest in the exercises of the school, but we must first set the example, by taking part ourselves.

If you happen to have a scholar that is a bad one, why not make him a good one instead? You must not let your work in the class be ruined by disorder. Most classes to start with have some restless, unruly spirit that causes all the trouble. Find where the trouble is, and get rid of it. It is usually one person that causes all of the trouble. It is the intense, restless, active wide-awake boy, or the thoughtless girl. Never reprove them in class, if it can possibly be avoided. The bad boy generally knows that he is bad, for everyone has told him so. Look for his good traits, and find something to praise him for before the class. Never shun him, but try to gain his love and confidence. Make him feel that you love him and want to trust him. Get hold of his heart. Turn his energies in proper directions. Pray for him, and let him know that you need him to stand by you in helping to have a good class.

Another thing to strive for is the attention of the entire class. You surely are not doing your whole duty when you do not interest all. The fault is not with the class, but with you. You are responsible if you allow scholars to remain in your class whom you cannot interest. Gather your class closely around you. Have them so near that all can hear. Question individually, not the whole class. Question rapidly and interestingly. Try not to be dull or monotonous.

Teach the lesson with an earnest God-fearing vim. Do not wander off on some pet notion or theme of your own, or talk on some subject foreign to the lesson. Try to keep members of the class from doing this, especially when it is not profitable.

It is better to question than to lecture, because when there are no questions asked there is very little thinking done. Ask the printed questions to induce them to learn the lesson at home. Make additional questions of your own, but be sure that they are thought-provoking questions.

Teach the practical side of the lesson. Do not waste time on hair splitting questions or go off on new ideas, but stick to the important teachings of the scripture.

Study the members of your class. Talk with them individually, about their wills. difficulties, failures, etc., and bring out from the lesosn the truths that will meet their needs. Teach the practical side rather than the theoretical or historical.

Be sure your teaching is effective. If you are doing your duty, you can leave the results to God. We may plant, another may water, but God giveth the increase, and will give it in his own good time. Be careful, however, to prepare the ground so well that no thorns will come up to choke the seed; to remove all rocks so that the sun will not burn it; to plant so deeply that the birds will not pull up and take it away. This can be done only when you get near to your scholars' hearts and lives. You can then make every word count.

Use the Bible all you can with your class Urge them to study the Bible at home. The more they see for themselves what God tells us, the stronger will be their faith, the more substantial their experiences, the more effective your work.

You must educate them to bring a contribution every Sunday. We say educate them, because it is generally forgetfulness when they do not bring a contribution. The reason that most churches find it hard to get along and pay their debts is that the people have not been educated to give regularly and systematically. Let us start them right in the Sunday school. The scholar feels more interested in the school if he gives something towards its support. Almost everyone can give something if it is only a penny.

It is absolutely essential that you love your class. Your success will be measured by your love. You can have no success without; "For though I have all knowledge and have not love I am nothing." Without love you will be as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal, and your work will neither yield you any happiness nor the class anything in the way of Christian attainment. Love can be cultivated. There is no one so bad that you cannot love him in the name of Christ. How warm and comfortable will be the lessons, how earnest and pointed will be the truths presented, how strong and convincing the appeals, when you love your scholars with your whole heart. Such love will forever settle the absentee question. Your love will show itself in every look into their faces, every word you speak, every tone of your voice, as well as in the pressure of the hand. You ought to love each one so much that you would become the ruling moral force in their lives and actions—the one they would go to for advice and council; the one they would try to imitate; and, through you, Christ; the one earnest, loving face ever before them, inspiring them to higher endeavor; the one kindly friend to rest them in trouble and comfort them in affliction. The true Sunday school teacher is called to be a spiritual brother and sister, father and mother, to the class. If you fill the place, it will be a happy place, your class a happy class, and a success. The teacher that loves much will do anything for her class, and her class will do anything for her. If you find that you must fail in loving your class, give it up.

One of the most difficult problems is to combat the influence of bad companions. It is our duty to teach them that they are in the world but not of it; to choose the good and scorn the evil; to be leaders and not led; to have courage to say "No", and stand by it; to be wary of bad companions; to have nothing to do with any vile person.

You should live near the Savior, and keep yourself unspotted from the world. Avoid every appearance of evil. Let your life be a fit example for each of them to follow; never let one stumble over your failings. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Give your best works to God. Don't say, "I'll give God my spare moments." Do not insult him by giving him the odd bits of time not needed for anything else. Never let other duties trespass on their sacred time. Be a success in what you undertake for God, no matter what you are in other matters. Let your work you do for him be better than that you do for anyone else.

Give God your first work; let the "first fruits" be for him. Give God your best work, your perfect work; let the "lamb without blemish" be for him.

OBITUARY NOTICE.

Fritts.—Bro. John Henry Fritts, an esteemed and faithful member of Mt. Carmel church, and a citizen of that community, was found dead in his barn-yard on May the 8th. Bro. Fritts was 57 years, one month and 17 days old.

He was converted at the age of 18 and joined Bethesda Methodist Protestant church. Afterwards he moved to Mt. Carmel community and joined at Shiloh. Later Mt. Carmel church was changed from a Reformed to a Methodist Protestant church. Thus a M. P. church being near his home, he moved his membership from Shiloh to Mt. Carmel. He was assistant superintendent of the S. S., trustee and class leader at date of death.

He leaves a wife and one son to mourn their loss; but their loss is his gain.

His funeral was conducted by his pastor at his church, after which his remains were laid to rest in Mt. Carmel cemetery.

May God bless the bereaved ones.

H. L. Powell, Pastor.

High Point—

In the absence of the pastor, the pulpit was filled last Sunday by Rev. O. B. Williams of Graham at both morning and evening services. This young minister made a fine impression on the congregation, and his sermons showed deep spirituality and great earnestness. He referred to the fact that he joined the N. C. Conference at this place in November, 1913. Mr. Williams was accompanied by his wife, and they were guests of Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin.

Sunday last Mr. H. A. Garrett and Mrs. Harrell took a number of the children from the Home to Mt. Pleasant, about 7 miles distant from High Point. They secured a nice contribution to the debt on the Children's Home. It seems that these bright boys and girls make a wonderful impression on the people wherever they go, and purses, as well as hearts, are touched by them.

The ladies' missionary societies, both home and foreign, held their monthly meeting on Monday at the home of Mrs. J. J. Welch.

Mr. R. T. Pickens came in from Jesup, Ga., last week, and left Wednesday morning for Zanesville, Ohio, where he goes to attend the meeting of the Executive Committee, just prior to the first session of the General Conference. Rev. C. A. Cecil, Capt. A. M. Rankin, Mr. H. A. Garrett, and Mr. V. W. Idol of this place are in attendance as delegates from the N. C. Conference.

Richard Reitzel, a student at Oak Ridge Institute, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. J. R. Reitzel. B. A. P.

Fairview Circuit—

Second quarterly conference was held at Fairview on the evening of the 13th. The attendance was not what it should have been; however, the conference was a very interesting one. The reports were very encouraging. The working condition of the church so far as the pastor can judge seems to be good. We are expecting a very prosperous year. Bros. W. J. Jennings and W. J. Squires were selected as nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

Fairview Church.—The second Sunday for Fairview was one of unusual interest. The S. S. was perhaps above par in interest; the attendance was 107. The eleven o'clock service was observed as "Mothers' Day." The floral display was most beautiful, under the direction of Sister Lee. The program consisted of recitations from the children, a short address by the pastor and also one from Bro. Taylor. This was followed by communion, in which a goodly number participated. A number spoke of the service as being the most interesting and touching service they had attended.

The evening service was well attended and the service a good one. The interest at Fairview church now seems to be splendid. We are looking forward for splendid revivals in all my churches.

J. H. Bowman.

Fairview.—Fairview S. S. is doing fine for there are so many churches close by and every Sunday something special at some one of them. We usually have a smaller attendance this time of the year, but last Sun., May 14th, our attendance was 107, collection 74c; May 21st the collection was 69c. Our Mothers' Day service was fine. We are preparing to have an extra good Children's Day service and have dinner on the church ground and service in the afternoon. I see there was a mistake in the report about the fence for Fairview Cemetery. The fence cost us $230. We will announce later the date of Children's Day.

Oak Ridge Circuit—

Sandy Ridge.—Our president was with us yesterday and preached an excellent sermon. He certainly gave us good advice and if we will do as he told us our church will make better progress in the future. We were indeed glad to have him with us.

Our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, has filled all appointments with helpful, inspiring sermons. It seems he preaches better every time. We think he can't be beat. Our revival meeting will begin the second Sunday in July with Rev. R. S. Troxler to do the preaching. Pray for us that we may be preparing for it and have a glorious revival.

Our S. S. is doing fairly well but there is room for improvement. Let's get a move on us and do better.

Granville Circuit—

Rehoboth Church.—Rev. D. R. Williams filled his regular appointment Sunday, the 7th, and preached an excellent sermon to a large crowd. His subject was Christian Living. We are to be fruit-bearers, walk and live in the Spirit. By so doing, we get joy in this life and also life everlasting. We are to have peace, not always worrying, because we must remember that we are children of God. So let's try to be Christ-like, bright and smiling Christians as we perform our duties. We must be long-suffering, gentle and kind; search the Scriptures and get something out of life worth while, then we will be laying up treasures in heaven. We are also reminded to watch the little things: they make up life. Little sins creep in; big sins were once little ones. If we are true Christians, we must be fruit-bearers, also watch, work and pray.

Our S. S. in progressing nicely. We have good attendance. We regret giving up one of our teachers, Miss Perrow, but have a good one in her place, Mrs. Harry Wright. Our people show that they are interested in their work. Let's keep it up. Pray for us. Crystal Bobbitt.

Piedmont Circuit—

Spring Hill.—Having been in Sunday school two times Sunday and having heard the word of our blessed Master preached three times it makes my heart feel glad this morning, regardless of the dry weather. It makes me feel more obedient to my Lord. It seems to me that obedience to God is the sublimest characteristic of life. It is the blessed principal that we can all possess, and will give us force of character here and a diadem in glory. God blesses his obedient children so wonderfully. He makes their lives happy and sunny, and gives them a foretaste of heaven all along the way. There springs up in the heart a fountain of perpetual joy. No wonder the psalmist could say, my cup runneth over. I would rather have this said of me, "She was obedient to God," than to have a whole volume written without it. I want this to be my biography. May I so live and teach my Sunday school class that they may be obedient, too; and if God should spare us to stay here many years, may I meet them with the same sweet smile on their faces as I meet them now.

Bro. Self filled his appointment Sunday and is going to visit in this community this week. He has not been in many of the homes, so we hope he will get to visit a good many of them this week.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Montgomery, from Lebanon, to worship with us Sunday. Come again. Also Miss Gladys Jones, from High Point.

I attended the school-closing exercise at our Children's Home. It was just fine. I wish every member of our Church could have been there, and especially our Sunday school scholars. I am sure you would be more interested if you could see the children and Home, and I believe that our collections would be more next time.

Lincoln Circuit—

Our work here is moving along very nicely. We have four good Sunday schools, with about three hundred and forty scholars, and the schools well organized with good efficient teachers and officers. We now have two evergreen Sunday schools, that is, Laurel Hill and Knob Creek. We organized Laurel Hill Sunday school the first of January, with thirty or forty scholars and we now have 120 on roll. We are now planning to organize a county Sunday school convention, which will be a great step toward perfecting the Sunday school work in this part of the State, or as we believe, will help to more thoroughly systematize the Sunday school work. This is one of the greatest needs throughout this part of the State.

This organization will begin at Bess's Chapel M. P. church. The interest is growing very rapidly in the Sunday school work. We held our Easter service at Laurel Hill the fourth Sunday in last month, which was a grand service, and did us all good, because all the children of our Sunday school at that place who had any part in the service did so well. There was not a blunder made throughout the service. The entire service showed that there had been efficient work done by the faithful teachers and leaders, and then our choir, I think, sank the sweetest that day I ever heard them sing, in fact everything was just fine that day. We raised $3.37 for Home Missions that day, as a free-will offering.

Relative to our congregations,—we are having fine congregations at all the churches. Our congregation was unusually large at Bess's Chapel last Sunday, the 14th. Our special meeting will begin at Bess's Chapel the third Sunday in August, Rev. J. H. Moton, pulpit help. My churches are all doing a very good work now, except Macedonia. It was dead when I came on the circuit and I haven't been able to do anything for the church since I've been here except to do my pastoral and ministerial duty. In fact the church never has done any good.

This church has not a membership sufficient to fill its offices. The members of that church have had a man serving as church trustee who never has made any pretentions of religion, and has never belonged to our Church, nor any other. Our constitution says a church shall be regarded as extinct when the membership shall become so reduced that it has not sufficient members to fill its offices, etc. See Constitution, page 130, Article 6. I have tried to redeem the church, but I see now it is a hopeless case. I have secured the church property until the third quarterly conference. When I made my quarterly report to the president of our Annual Conference for the second time, I asked him to advise me in this matter, but haven't heard anything from him yet. I guess he has been so busy that he could not reply. I am hoping to hear from Bro. Holmes in regard to this matter very soon.

Our nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference are as follows: Bro. Frank Baxter, from Bess's Chapel; Bro. Charlie Davis from Laurel Hill.

Since my last report to the Herald there has been a nice stove placed in Bess's Chapel, at a cost of $10. We have just completed the painting of our parsonage inside and outside, which adds much to the beauty of our home, as well as comfort and satisfaction to the pastor and his family. This work cost $64.25.

My people here are rallying right to the front, and I believe that the time is not far in the future when Lincoln Ct. will rank second to none. Hurrah, hurrah! for old Lincoln Ct.! Come on, come on, brethren of the Lincoln Ct., and let's show to the Annual Conference, and to the world around us that we are bringing things to pass on this field of work. The ex-president of our Annual Conference said to me last Conference, "You people on Lincoln Ct. did a great work this year." We did the very best we could considering the condition of this field of work at that time. We cleared our circuit of all debts last year, except back-salary, and in fact we failed to raise a part of our general interests, but that was due to the fact that this circuit was assessed too much and our people here were discouraged over it and therefore they failed.

I believe that my people here will raise every dollar of their general interests and pastor's salary this year. I also believe that they will do a pretty good part by the Children's Home at High Point. We have paid $11.70 on the indebtedness of the Home, and I believe they will pay a great deal more this fall.

The greatest trouble I've found with our financial system here is the stewards have failed to see the individuals and call upon them for their dues. The stewards need to get busy and call on the membership each month and pay their pastor monthly or at least quarterly, so that he will not have to borrow money to run on all through the spring, summer and fall. For the pastor to borrow money or go in debt means to keep him financially embarrassed all the time, and no pastor can do his best when he is financially embarrassed. This is what has kept Lincoln Ct. in the back-ground for all these years, and I want to ask, and I am now asking, each steward on this circuit and on all other circuits and charges to steal away somewhere and then pray this prayer: namely, "O Lord, help me to feel the responsibility that now rests upon me as a steward for Jesus Christ, and for the extension of his kingdom. O Lord, help me to care for my pastor, and his family, as I should or as thou wouldst have me to care for them. Have I neglected my duty, and let my pastor, and his family go lacking the necessities of life and comfort, when I could have prevented it if I had only been faithful in the discharge of Christian duty? O Lord, if I have not done the very best I could, forgive me of the sin of omission, and negligence, and I promise thee now to take better care of my pastor and his family. This I will do for Jesus' sake. Amen."

With best wishes to the entire Annual Conference. Very truly yours,

D. M. Loy.

Our revival begins next Sunday. Rev. Mr. Stubbins of High Point will assist Bro. Pritchette in the meetings. Reporter.

Randleman Circuit—

We have not written for some time, but we have been busy all the while. We held our second quarterly conference at Worthville, May 6th. Good attendance, and a good spirit was manifested among the brethren. Reports on finance not flattering, but in the main it will come up later. Bros. W. F. Ivey and R. W. Giles were put in nomination for delegate to Annual Conference.

Sunday, May 14th, was our Memorial and Mothers' Day service at Bethany. We had a good day. Yesterday, May 21st, was our Memorial and Old People's Day at Mt. Lebanon. It was well attended and the services were good.

Sunday, June 18th, will be our Children's Day and Old People's Service at New Salem. They are planning for good things then.

We must say of our Ladies' Aid Society at Mt. Lebanon that we have a working society of ladies. They are who can and will, for they are doing things all the time. We reported that they lighted the parsonage. They have now screened our home and are puting in window shades to all the windows and curtains for one room, which will make two rooms that will have curtains, Sister Matthews having curtained one room some time ago. They are also building a stove flue to make our rooms more convenient. They are doing good work and we are proud of them.

Now this is not all. We are proud of our young people, too. They do things, also. Some time ago they gave a play at the Auditorium and made $44 to pay on the parsonage debt; and on Saturday night, May 20, they gave an ice cream supper and made about $18 for the same purpose, making a total for parsonage debt of about $62. This helped the pastor in his collecting on the debt wonderfully. God bless the ladies and the young folks: if it were not for them much work would be left undone.

We believe we have now one of the most comfortable homes that any of our circuit preachers can boast of. We have been working harmoniously together and our development has been slow but manifestly sure all the while. Hope and confidence in their ability has inspired our people.

Littleton Circuit—

Hawkins Chapel.—Our pastor filled his appointment here Sunday and preached another one of his good sermons to a right large congregation. We are always glad when we look forward to our preaching day. The message that he brings to us is good and helpful to the thirsty souls. When we do what we can we feel good. I am glad to report my brother is improving right fast. He thanks you all for your earnest prayers. We also thank the people for their kindness all through his sickness. All that saw him while he was very sick didn't think he would ever recover. We feel very thankful that he is now able to move about some.

The Sunday school prayer meting is in very good condition. There have been many sick ones in this neighborhood. I am glad to say they are improving.

Greensville Circuit—

Matthews Chapel.—Bro. Morgan was with us again last Sunday. He preached an excellent sermon to a very good congregation. We are always glad to see Bro. Morgan, for he has a word for every one. The Lord's Supper was administered, quite a number partaking.

We were also delighted to have Prof. D. T. Surratt to worship with us; wish he could come more often. But sorry to learn he will leave us now soon.

Our S. S. is doing very well, but is not what it should be. Our people don't seem to realize what going to S. S. would mean to them. Do wish we could get them interested, and what a lively S. S. we would have!

We are planning to have a S. S. convention in the near future; trust all the S. S.'s will join us, and let's all plan for a good time. We will publish the date later.

The second Sunday was Mothers' Day in our S. S. A good many white roses were worn.

We expect to have our church painted before the special meeting, which will be the fourth Sunday in July. Pray for us that we may have a successful meeting. Much success to Herald and its readers.

St. Paul Circuit—

Liberty.—The S. S. of Liberty M. P. church elected officers on the first Sunday in May. Supt., R. E. Patterson; Asst., G. C. Smith; Teachers—Rev. W. C. Kennett, E. B. Moore, Mrs. W. F. Bowman, Mrs. R. E. Patterson, Mrs. C. P. Smith, Mrs. Joseph Swaim, and G. C. Smith; Organist, Mrs. Florence Elkins; Miss Daphney Bowman, Asst.; Flavius Amick, Secy.; Asst., W. M. Hanner; A. S. Pickett, Treasurer.

Bro. R. E. Patterson has been superintendent of the Sunday school in Liberty seventeen years. Years ago he was superintendent at Tabernacle M. P. church. His record as superintendent will not be often duplicated. May he live long and continue his good work as superintendent of the S. S., and excellent record as a man interested in the church along every line. He has passed the 75th mile-post of life, but his interest has not abated.

The teachers and officers are all well fitted for their places. Rev. Mr. Kennett, at 81 is active in church and S. S., and stands as erect as the boy in his teens. The pastor is delighted with this noble body of officers and teachers and church members. He does not forget their kindness and help promptly given, and prays for the blessings of our Lord to continue upon them.

G. F. Millaway.

Alamance Circuit—

On the third Sunday in May the W. F. M. S. of Bethel met to hold the annual Thank-offering Service. The attendance was fairly good. Several interesting readings were rendered, after which Bro. Ledbetter made a splendid address. A collection was taken which amounted to $7.32. The report for last year is as follows: Dues, $18.75; China, $1.00; Branch Contingent, $1.45; Executive Conting., $1.45; Thankoffering for last May, $8.50; making a total of $31.50. The report shows a decrease in membership since last year, as several have moved away, but we are glad to note an increase in finances. We have not by any means reached the standard yet, though we feel encouraged to press forward and try to do better next year.

At the present writing, Mr. James Holmes and Miss Mary Thompson are in the hospital, having been operated on for appendicitis. We hope for them a speedy recovery.

On the third Sunday in June there will be all day services. The Children's Day exercise will be given in the morning and the pastor will have charge of the afternoon service. Let everybody come out and enjoy the day. Tacy J. Woody, Rep.

Haw River Circuit—

Friendship.—We held Memorial Service here Sunday. It was a success. This was the first memorial service that was ever held here. We think it will not be the last. Bro. Kennett preached us a sermon that was suitable for the occasion. All were glad to have him here once more, and may the Lord bless and strengthen him in his old days here upon earth. At the close of the sermon the flower committee, which consisted of about fifty boys and girls, proceeded to the cemetery and placed flowers upon the graves of our loved ones. In the afternoon Bro. E. O. Pritchett was with us. He preached us a splendid sermon on Memorials. Told us how we should appreciate our mothers, honor and respect them. We were indeed glad to have him with us for everybody at Friendship is interested in him, first, because he is doing the work God called him to do; second, he is from our community and church. May God be with him daily is our prayer.

On Thursday, May 18th, Mrs. C. A. Stanfield entered into rest. She leaves two sons, one daughter, and a number of grandchildren, besides a host of friends to mourn their loss. She will be missed greatly in her church, home and by all who knew her. She was a woman of noble Christian character and was loved by all. She was a kind neighbor and was always ready with a willing hand to comfort the sick and those who were in distress. Though she is removed from our presence the memory of her noble life and good advice still lives.

Our S. S. is progressing nicely. We have good attendance which makes it interesting, but we still feel that there are more who could come and take part.

Revival services will begin here third Sunday in July. Bro. H. L. Powell is to be our help. Pray for us that we may do our part in helping to bring souls to Christ. Kathlyn Small, Reporter.

Mocksville Circuit—

Elbaville.—The failure to report from this church does not say that we have "closed out" altogether, it was just neglected, as news of interest has been scarce. We are still trying to move onward in our S. S. and it was very encouraging to have Mrs. D. C. Kurfees and Miss Ella Orrell of Winston-Salem with us again in S. S. on last Sunday. Still, we regret very much that we've had to give up one of our members, Miss Lola Ellis, who was married to Mr. Guy Shoaf, of Lexington, N. C., on April the 29th.

Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, fills his appointments every third Sunday evening, and always comes with a helpful message for us. Reporter.

Flat Rock Circuit—

Palestine.—Sunday was our regular preaching day. Our pastor was not with us. He was attending General Conference. We missed him so much, but hope it will not be necessary for him to be gone again. However, we had good services. We had our Sunday school as usual, a song service and also a good talk by Mr. McGee.

Our S. S. is doing nicely, also our prayer meeting every Sunday night. Since our last report death visited our church community and claimed one of our S. S. men, Mr. Henry Morris. We regret to give him up, and we miss him in our S. S., and also his wife and little boy, who have moved away since his death.

We have some sickness among our members. "Uncle Jim" Sharon, as he is generally known, has been very sick; he is improving some now. Mr. James Landreth is also very sick; there is but little hope for his recovery.

Since our report we also attended the Young People's Convention at Burlington, which we enjoyed so much; and now we want to have a service at our church that will imitate the convention, in order that the people who never attend a convention like this one was, may have an illustration of what the convention means. We know we cannot have a service like it, but we can pattern after it. We know it is a good pattern and we will try to make it fit.

We took a collection for the orphan children Sunday which amounted to $1.

Reporter.

Yadkin College Circuit—

On Saturday, May 13th, we held our second quarterly conference at Bethesda. The day was fine. When we reached the church we found everything swept and garnished. The brethren and sisters of that community had met and beautified the church grounds, built table to serve dinner, etc. Soon a large number of officials were there, also the community turned out well. The pastor preached to this attentive congregation at 11 o'clock. At about 12:45 a splendid and bounteous dinner was set by the ladies of that community. Every one ate till they wanted no more and many basketsful of the fragments were taken up.

The business of the quarterly conference was next. The business was transacted in the most harmonious spirit. I heard several remark that it was one of the sweetest-spirited conferences they were ever in. Reports were good. There seemed to be an increased interest along almost all lines of church work. Some noted improvements had been made. There were some resolves to inaugurate more system and method in reports. Several good and interesting talks were made by Bros. A. H. Evans, W. M. Byerly, Grady Leonard, and others. Bros. H. A. Leonard and J. W. Walser were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference. There being no further business, on motion conference adjourned to meet with the people at Friendship.

A good day at Shiloh.—Sunday, May the 21st, was appointed for Decoration Day. Some of the near-by people met previously and fixed up the graves of their dear ones. Well, Sunday A. M. was clear and beautiful. The people commenced to gather early and decorate the graves of their loved ones. The floral display was beautiful. I met with some people who told me that they had relatives buried there but had not been to Shiloh in twenty years.

At the appointed hour the efficient superintendent, H. A. Leonard, called together the S. S. There were 155 in classes, and a number of visitors present. Offering for the children at the Home was $2.96. School closed, giving a short recess.

At preaching hour they began to reassemble for worship. They came till the large auditorium was packed and a goodly crowd on the outside that could not be accommodated with seats. Prof. Emmet Fritts presided at the organ and some beautiful and appopriate music was rendered by the choir and audience. It being our regular communion day, the pastor opened the door of the church for reception of members and asked if parents had children to be dedicated to the service of God by the ordinance of Christian baptism. Bro. and Sister Julius Byerly brought forward their infant daughter and the three daughters of Bro. A. H. Evans came forward for church membership. Miss Mabel, the eldest, came with a certificate from the first Presbyterian church of Lexington. Mary Noble and Drusilla came on the profession of faith. These two received the ordinance of baptism and were cordially received to the communion and fellowship. These are beautiful and bright young girls and will, I have no doubt, make great workers in the kingdom of God. May the good Lord abundantly bless them.

It was, indeed, a sweet sight to behold the beautiful innocent infant face of the little daughter of Bro. and Sister Byerly as the pastor took her in his arms to the sacred altar to dedicate her little life to her Saviour.

Now the pastor preached as best he could a specially prepared sermon—from Ps. 116:15, "Precious in the sight of the Lord, is the death of his saints." The congregation was very quiet and attentive and in the true spirit of worship. Now comes the communion service. The largest number of communicants I ever saw, consisting of Methodist Protestants, Methodist Episcopals, Lutherans, Presbyterians, and Reformed Church members; no Baptists, of course. I wondered what they will do when we reach our home up yonder! It was a gracious service. After adjournment I went with Bro. Bob Sink for dinner. Ate a good dinner. I enjoyed a pleasant conversation with Bro. Sink, wife and children. Before I left we baptized Beatrice, the infant daughter. Bro. and Sister Sink are true Methodist Protestants and believe in the doctrine of infant baptism. This made the fifth child I have baptized for them in these seven years I've been their pastor. May God bless them and assist them in bringing their children up in the way they should go.

Buncombe Circuit—

Our second quarterly conference was held on Saturday before the second Sunday in this month at the Central M. P. church at Democrat. All seven of the churches were represented and the business was transacted in a good spirit. It was a good day, old-time religion being manifested, and it made every one happy. There was good attendance, there being about 500 there. Our pastor, Rev. T. E. Martin, had the good fortune to have Rev. J. H. Moton with him that day, which was a pleasure to all, for Bro. Moton is not forgotten by us. We were glad to have him with us again and know that he enjoyed the day; he said it was one of the best quarterly conferences he had ever attended in his 34 years in the ministry. We pray that this is just the beginning of good times for us this year. Come again, Bro. Moton, and help us enjoy some more of the good things we are expecting, for if we are faithful we know we shall receive. Pray for us that we may be faithful in the cause. Best wishes to our Herald.

GRANVILLE CIRCUIT SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY.

The S. S. rally at Mt. Carmel May 14 was truly a success from beginning to end. Beginning about 10:30 A. M. and closing for the day about 3:15 P. M., the time was well taken up with recitations, papers, special songs, songs by congregation and speeches.

The address of the day was made at 11 A. M. by Mr. S. R. Harris. Of course this, as expected, was good. It was stated by one that he believed that to be the greatest speech he ever heard Mr. Harris make. So you can judge by this what it was.

Some of the papers, if not all, you may see in the Herald and will be worth reading. The recitations were very good.

In the afternoon a talk was enjoyed from Mr. T. T. Hicks, who followed Mr. E. C. Harris of Rehoboth. The pastor closed the service with some remarks.

Better a good word than a battle.

A HEBREW NOBLEMAN.

BY PAULINE CLARK.

About three thousand years before the Christian era, in Ur, a flourishing and idolatrous city of the Chaldeans, a child was born, destined to be the father of many nations. Abraham, the son of Terah and a descendant of Shem, flourished in a very remote period, in the days of Hammurabai, the great King of Babylon, on whose monument was found the first writing on stone.

In studying Abraham's life, we find a majesty and dignity seldom equaled. His moral courage and deep religious convictions show a divine spirit. While his unshaken faith in God's word has been the wonder and admiration of all nations in all ages.

God's many covenants with him and their frequent renewal tell us how highly favored he must have been. God blessed him with numerous flocks and herds and abundantly in silver and gold, but with all this wealth, he made no vain display. He wore the plainest dress and in his humble home we find no costly furnishings.

Abraham was a tent-dweller, and his tent a 'moving temple'. Wherever he pitched this 'moving temple,' on the sandy plains of Egypt, or among the green fields of Shechem, in the beautiful vale of Hebron, or on the olive-crowned hills around Jerusalem, there arose a simple altar of unhewn stones, and with the incense of his sacrifices ascended his prayer of thankfulness.

Though Abraham was a nomad, Hebron in the vale of Mamre was his favorite residence. Here Ishmael was born, and here while he rested in his tent door at high noon, came three strangers. Abraham welcomed them with an obeisance, and hastened to bring water and bathe their feet. While entertaining them under a spreading oak, with milk, butter, a tender kid and cakes of fine meal, baked by Sarah, Abraham's wife, he was told by his guests a son would be given him as a staff for his declining years.

Bishop Marvin, in his travels through the Holy Land, saw in Hebron, inclosed with an iron railing, an aged oak, its lower limbs supported and some of them nearly dead. This tree the natives claimed to be the same under which Abraham entertained the angels; Marvin himself thought it probably a scion of the mother tree.

Abraham's generosity is shown in his dealings with his nephew Lot. When their possessions had become so great they could no longer dwell together in unity Abraham said, "Let there be no strife between me and thee, and between my herdsmen and thy herdsmen," generously offering Lot choice of all the land before them. Lot chose the well watered plain of the Jordan and Abraham found a resting place in his beloved Hebron.

When the angels informed Abraham of their intention of destroying Sodom and Gomorrah, he pleaded earnestly for the safety of those wicked cities. The next morning, as he went from his tent-door and looked toward the cities of the plain, "The smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a great furnace." And Abraham knew that the visitants had fulfilled their threat.

Abraham displayed his kindness, as he came flushed with victory, from Chedorlaomer. After having rescued all the spoils and the captives that the four kings had taken from the king of Sodom, he accepted nothing.

"I have lifted up mine hand unto the Lord, the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth," said Abraham.

Did God intend that Ishmael should die, as Hagar wandered alone with him in the wilderness of Beersheba? "I will make him a great nation." When the bottle of water was consumed and Hagar could find no more, she laid Ishmael under a bush, saying, "Let me not see the death of the child!" While she wept aloud God opened her eyes and showed her a well of water. Carlyle thinks the well Zim Zim, "named," he says, "for its bubbling sound," was the well where Hagar eagerly refilled her bottle. So, Ishmael was saved to be the father of the great tribe of Ishmaelites.

After a useful life of one hundred twenty-seven years, Sarah, who had given Abraham so much happiness, Sarah, the highly favored of God, slept her last long sleep. When Abraham had deeply mourned for her and laid her tenderly to rest, he married Keturah. His union was blest with six sons. These with their descendants, the numerous Edomites and other Abrahamic tribes, including the great host of the Israelites that went up from Egypt to the Promised Land, show how fully God kept his promise to Abraham concerning his seed.

"In blessing, I will bless thee, and in multiplying, I will multiply thee, and thy seed shall be as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore for multitude." Truly Abraham was the father of many nations.

Now we are come to the sublimest picture in the life of the grand old man. God did tempt him, not to commit sin by slaying Isaac, but only as a severe test of his strong faith. It seems Abraham thought God meant him to kill Isaac. What must have been his feelings in preparing to slay his only child? For Isaac asked him, "Father, where is the lamb for the burnt offering?" With a faltering voice and an almost bursting heart, methinks, I hear Abraham answer, "My son, God will provide himself a lamb for the sacrifice."

When Abraham had bound his obedient son and laid him on the altar Isaac's own hands had helped to build, when he had raised the knife to take the life so dear, an angel's hand arrested his, and an angel's voice broke the awful silence.

"Lay not thy hand upon the lad, neither do thou anything unto him."

Looking behind him, Abraham saw a ram caught in the thicket. When the lamb had been slain instead of Isaac, Abraham was enabled to see clearly why God had given him this severe trial. In fully testing his faith, it was necessary for God to conceal his true design from his servant. What a devout, what a consecrated man, Abraham must have been, so meekly to obey the most terrible command God was ever supposed to give to man. Truly Abraham deserves the appellation of Saint Paul, "faithful Abraham," and the words of Guthrie, "Voices addressed him from the skies, angels paid visits to his tent, and visions of celestial glory hallowed his lowly couch and mingled with his nightly dreams."

HOW MORAL COWARDICE MAY BE OVERCOME.

Physical cowardice all of us do not have; indeed, it is rarer than we think. But moral courage is another thing. To dare to do just what we know we ought to do, without being in the least hindered or disturbed by the presence of men who, we know, will either hate or despise or ridicule us for what we are doing, that is rare indeed. Many think they have it till the test comes. Why, there is in this community to-day an amount of right conviction which, if set free into right action by complete release from moral cowardice, would be felt through the land.

Cowardice wrings the foul and profane word from the lips that hate it while they utter it. Cowardice stifles the manly and indignant rebuke at the piece of conventional and approved meanness of the college or shop. Cowardice keeps the low standards of honor traditional and unbroken through generations of boys. Cowardice holds the young Christian back from the frank acknowledgment of his Lord.

"I will walk at liberty because I keep thy commandments." O those great words of David. What an everlasting story they tell of the liberty that comes by lofty service. They tell of what the young people need, at the very outset of life, to save them from cowardice. Not by despising men will you cease to fear them. People's worst slavery very often is to the things and people that they despise. Only by loving God and fearing him with that fear whose heart and soul is love; only by letting Christ show

God to you so that you must see him; only so shall you tread your cowardice under your feet and be free for your best life.—Phillips Brooks.

WHEN TOMMY TOAD BLOSSOMED.

Tommy Toad awoke one bright morning. He yawned. He blinked his beautiful eyes. He stretched first one leg and then the other. No, not the other, but *an*other and *an*other and *an*other.

"Where am I?" asked Tommy of himself. "Hmmmmm—why-eeeee! I'm in my house, of course. I remember now. The flies and the bugs and the worms all went away, and I had a dreadfully hollow feeling. But soon I became so cold that all I could think about was getting warm. So I came into my house—way, way in—and then I grew so sleepy that I forgot all about being hungry or cold. And that's the last I remember."

Tommy yawned and blinked and stretched some more. Suddenly he stopped and stuck up his funny nose. "What's that I smell?" asked he of himself. "Hmmmmm—why-eeeee! It's spring. Nothing else in the world smells like spring. How long I must have slept! Now I must make up for lost time."

He started to climb out, stiffly and slowly. Suddenly he stood still and tipped his head to one side. "What's that I hear? Why-eeeee. It's old Mrs. Robin. I remember that funny little crack in her top note. Now I hear old Pa Robin too. I must have overslept dreadfully. Now if it had been Billy Bluebird, it mightn't be so bad. But these robins! I must hurry."

Up and up he climbed, growing sprier and sprier at every step. Soon he stood on his own gray doorstep, puffing and blinking. O, but the sky was blue, and the sun was bright! Close by his doorstep some crocuses lifted up their shining heads. A little farther away the daffadowndilly family were just beginning to bring out their precious stores of gold. Daddy Robin and Mother Robin were bustling about, looking at the remains of their last year's nest and deciding not to use it, but to work hard and to have a beautiful, brand-new one. They looked very gay and bright themselves, perfectly spick and span. Everything around sparkled or shone or looked fresh and clean.

Tommy Toad looked down at his coat sleeves. They were positively shabby. He looked down at his shirt front. It was dingy, so dingy. He craned his neck so as to peek over his shoulder at his coat. "Disgraceful!" cried Tommy Toad. "And it feels uncomfortable too—stiff and queerish. Hmmmmm! Let me see. Did I feel like this last spring? Hmmmmm! Yes, I did. I'm sure I did. What did I do? Hmmmm! O, I remember now! Of course! Here goes!"

Then Tommy Toad began to wiggle and wiggle and stretch and twist, and in a few minutes what do you think happened? Why, that rusty coat slipped a little bit, then a whole lot, then from one end to the other. Then it began to peel off. Tommy Toad tugged at it with his stout little hands—O, how he tugged!—and soon he pulled it right over his head. Then what do you suppose he did with it? Well, perhaps he thought it would never do to leave such a dusty, rusty-looking thing around where everything was so fresh and bright; so he ate it all up. Yes, he did. And under it what do you suppose there was? Why, a lovely new suit; and it fitted beautifully. It was just as bright and fresh as the crocuses and the daffadowndilly and Daddy and Mother Robin.

"Just like last spring!" chuckled Tommy Toad.

Just then his little friend, Elizabeth, came running out to the garden. He was swallowing the last bit. He got it down with a funny gulp and sat staring at her with very bright, new-looking eyes.

Elizabeth hopped right up and down. "O mother!" she called. "Come—come quick! Tommy Toad is blossoming!"—Minnie L. Upton, in the Christian Register.

WE LEARN FROM TUMBLES.

It does not matter how many tumbles you have in this life, so long as you do not get dirty when you tumble. There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures in life, said Huxley. You learn that which is of inestimable importance—that there are a great many people in the world who are just as clever as you are, . . . and you very soon find out, if you have not found it out before, that patience and tenacity of purpose are worth more than twice their weight in cleverness.—Continent.

—Paul's beautiful yieldingness in every matter that touched his own opinions or his own practises, taken along with his iron will in what was not his own—these two things must be taken together to know Paul. Luther hits the whole matter here in a way that would have delighted Paul. "If two goats meet each other in a narrow path above a piece of water, what do they do?" asks Luther. "They cannot turn back, and they cannot pass each other; there is not an inch of spare room. If they were to butt at each other, both would fall into the water below and be drowned. What would you do? Well, nature has taught the one goat to lie down to let the other pass over it, and then they both get to the end of the way safe and sound." Now, Paul was always meeting goats on narrow ledges of rock with the sea below. And so are you, and so am I. Will you lie down and let me pass over your prostrate body, and then we shall both be saved?—Alexander Whyte, in The Apostle Paul.

MIRACLES OF HEALING IN TUNGCHOU.

By Delia D. Leavens.

Chinese women have to stand a great deal in the way of domestic difficulties, but when life becomes quite unbearable they use the only method they know, and cut the Gordian knot, or in other words, their throats. Three such cases came to the notice of our Tungchou hospital this spring. One had not succeeded in doing much damage with her dull scissors, and her recovery was rapid, yet her stay at the hospital was long enough to give her a new outlook on life. The other two girls were sisters, betrothed by their parents much against their wills. As the time drew near they felt that they could not submit. Better a double suicide than a double wedding. Time—night, by the light of a small oil lamp. The only witness—a baby asleep on the k'ang. Knives this time instead of scissors, and more successful cutting, clear through to the windpipe. All might have happened just as they planned had it not been for the lamp, which, being upset, gave the alarm by setting the house on fire. The family was aroused, but too late to save one of the girls and the baby. The other would-be suicide they brought to the hospital, horribly burned in face, hands, hair and scalp, besides the awful gash in her throat, and with an attitude toward life worse than any of her wounds. Far from helping the doctor's efforts, she hindered, by refusing to eat or do anything that would make for a recovery. Wasn't living just what she wanted to escape? The doctor persisted, bandaging her throat and grafting skin on her burns. The matron was kind and friendly. Everyone seemed to want her to live. In fact, these people were different from any she had ever known before. Life meant something different to them, and little by little it began to mean something different to her. As her poor burned face began to heal, a new expression crept into it. Her cure had gone more than skin deep.

The operations performed in our hospitals at home have not ceased to be a marvel to us unprofessional people, and when the same things are done by a doctor in China with no equipment, no assistance, in the most upprepossessing of surroundings, it seems little short of a miracle. Two confinement cases in Tungchou this spring illustrate this point and at the same time show how even a little more money spent for medical work might have saved two babies.

One of the cases was the wife of a man who has had opportunities of knowing about Christianity, for many of his relatives have been prominent in the church and in Christian education. The girl's family, however, was very conservative and anti-foreign, and it was only after they had given up all hope for their daughter, and after the repeated persuasions of one of the Christian relatives, that they would consent to let the foreign doctor be called. It was a first baby, and the girl had been in convulsions for eight hours, when late in the evening the doctor arrived. The mother refused to do anything to help along methods of which she did not approve. Our hospital does not boast a nurse, so there was only the husband and his cousin (a man) to lend a hand. An operation would have saved both mother and child, but it was out of the question, for lack of instruments and a properly equipped operating room. As it was, a night of hard work right there on the k'ang in the girl's own home pulled her through. That was so much beyond the wildest hopes of the family that their prejudices disappeared at once. The mother, when she saw that her daughter's life was saved, not only cared for her by the doctor's direction, but invited the Bible women to come and tell her about this doctrine she had been so misjudging. If it could teach men how to save lives it must be good all through. Her gratitude to the doctor found expression in a touching sentiment embroidered on satin and in contributions to the hospital treasury.

The other case was also in a heathen family, introduced by a Christian relative, but this time the initiative did not come from the relative. He had been ostracized long before when he adopted the new religion, and it was only in their time of extreme need that they sought him out to invite the foreign doctor for them. Everything they had tried had failed. The woman had been in labor three days, and the pains had stopped. Chinese knowledge could suggest nothing more; it was too late for foreign skill to do any harm, and a bare chance that it might do some good. Again, there was little to be gained by moving the patient to a poorly equipped hospital, and again the doctor had to utilize unskilled help. This time it was women, and they were willing to do as they were told. One of them gave the chloroform, and the doctor, kneeling on the k'ang, directed her, and performed the operation—a difficult one at best, but, in spite of every handicap, successful this time. The doctor, still intent upon his patient, tried to give directions for the care of the little girl baby, but the room was cold, there was no hot water, and the women kept saying, "Never mind the baby, only save the mother." A few more simple appliances, and some one who could use them,—not very much, but it would save many babies. The mother made a perfectly normal recovery. Her husband sold some corn and paid the fee with great promptness, and brought friends and neighbors to the hospital for treatment. During the operation a reconciliation had been going on. The ostracized relative had been received to the family, religion and all. They need no further proof of its worth, only more knowledge.

The prize case of the hospital this year, both from a professional and evangelistic point of view, was that of a woman with a breast abscess. Perhaps it is stretching a point to call a girl of seventeen a woman, though there can't be much of the girl side of her left after this experience. Her baby died of starvation, because of the condition of her breast. and the abscess kept spreading till it reached back of the shoulder and nearly to the waist in front, exposing bones and heart. When she came to the hospital in this perfectly unspeakable condition, the doctor gave her about three days to live. Nevertheless he went to work to clean her up, and in spite of everything, including the unkindness of her mother-in-law, who made a great fuss about her being there, and often refused to send her food, she slowly improved. Her own mother came to take care of her, and proved to be an unusually clean woman. It is not easy to be antiseptic, or even ordinarily neat in our hospital wards—regular Chinese rooms with the brick platform, where both the patient and the one who is taking care of her sleep under their own dirty bedding. Cooking is done in the room, and the corn-stalk fuel makes an excellent breeding place for flies, which in turn find a happy hunting ground on the food which is generally kept on the floor. Not ideal conditions, but all we have at present. We are dreaming of a nice clean woman's ward. We have the room, in fact, but that's another story.

To return to our patient; suppose we return after five or six months of hospital life. You would not know her. She is up and dressed, has shed her horrid bandages and the drawn look of pain has gone from around her eyes. The matron will tell you with pride how she has learned to read, and finished a phenomenal number of books. Better yet, she believes what she has read, and so does her mother and her husband, who has been often to see her. Even the mother-in-law has grown kinder, and is willing to listen to the new doctrine that wrought such wonders for her daughter-in-law. Isn't she a splendid proof of the need and the value of medical work for women in Tungchou?—Life and Light.

WHAT ONE TESTAMENT DID.

From a colporteur in France who had been distributing Testaments among the soldiers, comes the following story which shows the good that was done by one copy of the Book:

"A soldier who had received a New Testament fell upon the battlefield in front of his captain, who said to him, 'My poor friend, what would you like me to do for you?' The soldier answered, 'There is nothing to be done, captain. Perhaps you will be so good as to tell my mother that I die in peace. I go to meet my Saviour. It is this Book which gives me the assurance that I shall go to Heaven.' In writing of this incident the captain added, 'A Book which helps our soldiers to die must be very precious, consequently I take the liberty of keeping this Testament.' "

If you wish to assist the World's Sunday School Association in its effort to provide "one million Testaments for one million soldiers," please send remittance to the headquarters of the Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City. 450,000 Testaments have been provided for at this writing at a cost of a nickle each, and these have been distributed among the soldiers by the American Bible Society and its foreign Agents.

THE ARMENIAN PEOPLE.

In a recent widely quoted article written for the Boston Advertiser, Rev. James L. Barton, D. D., Foreign Secretary of the American Board and formerly president of Euphrates College in Harpoot, gives some concise and illuminating facts as to the nature and history of the Armenian people. We quote a few paragraphs:—

"The Armenians, whose extermination by the Turks is now threatened, are one of the oldest races of history. The earliest Biblical mention of the land occupied throughout their entire historical period is the allusion to Ararat. Armenia furnished Tyre with horses and mules, as reported by Ezekiel, and the king of Armenia was an ally of Cyrus the Great in the overthrow of the Babylonians in the sixth century B. C.

"Their own traditions take them back to Noah and make them members of the Japhetic branch of the human family. As a race they have a varied history. They were an ally of Rome in 67 B. C., and in 261 A. D. became again subject to Persia. Their last kingdom was in the Taurus Mountains, in Northern Cilicia, until 1375, when Armenia lost its last vestige of separate national existence.

"They were the first race or nation to adopt Christianity as a national religion, and so the Armenian Church is the oldest of all national churches, dating back to the

HOW THE STRIKE WAS SETTLED.

"Scab! Scab! Scab!" came menacing voices from either side, and the gladness in Rolfe Tisdale's eyes became surprise, and then understanding. His lips closed firmly.

He was already swerving in toward the mill entrance when the first call came, and had thought the loitering figures outside the gate to be employes like himself, going to their work. The yells of "Scab!" undeceived him. He bent over his wheel and circled through the gateway and round to the office, to the same door where he had sought for work just before sunset the evening before. A pleasant-faced man, but with grim lines about his mouth just now, was noting the men as they came in and passed to their work in the various departments. As Rolfe entered the quick eyes swept to him.

"Who—" the man began. Then, "Oh, yes, one of the new hands. You will go with Johnson—the man ahead of you—and let him show you about running a spinning frame. As soon as you get an idea of the work, you must take charge of as many frames as you can manage. I had intended you for the yard, but we happen to be short-handed just now. Thompson, you will—" The superintendent was already giving directions about another arrival, and Rolfe passed on with the man ahead of him, through one room and up two flights of stairs to where the cotton spinners did their work. There was employment in this room for fifty hands, and only ten had reported for work. Even the overseer was with the strikers. Rolfe had been surprised the evening before at his easiness in obtaining employment. He understood the reason now. The man Johnson turned and regarded him with something like a grin.

"Guess we'll sort of kill time till noon, he said. "That won't give the boy time enough to learn anything, so he may as well hunt out an easy place an' go to sleep. I'm second-hand here, so I s'pose I'll be boss till the overseer gets back. But noon will see us all out."

"It won't me," spoke up a young man near him, shortly. "I've engaged to work, and I shall do it in spite of the strikers. I don't draw pay without doing something for it."

"Nor me," "Nor me," "Nor me," agreed others of the men, emphatically.

"Oh, well, it's all right to say so now, Cutler and the rest of you," good-naturedly; "but this noon will see the end of workin'. I wouldn't have come in myself if I'd known how many were goin' to stay out. An' the strikers are right, too."

"Right or wrong, there isn't much difference, and so long as that's the case, I shall work for my pay the best I can. The owners are some to blame; but they are good business men, and just. If the strikers had gone to them in a manly way and stated their grievances, I believe everything would have been fixed up all right. But they wouldn't do that; they demanded four times what any sensible firm could give, and they didn't get it, and they won't get it. If the strikers hold out, it'll be a hard time, for there are hardly any of them who can afford to lose their wages. It seems to me the nearest right thing is to work, and I shall stick to my job."

"Every man to his own ideas," retorted Johnson. "I don't want to mix in any fuss, so after this noon I shall stay out and work in my garden. You and your friends may stick on here—if you can—an' the boy an' me an' such others as are of our mind will loaf till the skies get more clear. We—"

"I shall work, too," interrupted Rolfe, quickly. "I don't know anything about the strike, and I'm more than satisfied with the pay offered me. I shall try to work hard enough to earn it."

"Good for you!" exclaimed Cutler. "There's more than one way to look at duty, and ours seems to me to be right in this case. Now, as Mr. Johnson won't have time to teach you about spinning, suppose you come with me to my frames. I will do what I can."

Rolfe had already begun to like the broad-shouldered, steady-eyed young man, and he looked at him gratefully.

"Thank you," he said, "I shall be glad to learn with you."

As they went down between the long rows of spinning-frames, Cutler looked at him inquiringly.

"I don't remember seeing your face anywhere," he said. "You don't live in the village, do you?"

"No, sir. Our place is seven miles out. I'm John Tisdale's son."

"John Tisdale—the man who was hurt last year in a fire? I remember an account of it in the paper."

"Yes, sir. Father was bringing our neighbor's horses out of the barn, and a piece of timber fell on him. He's never got over it. Since then I've been trying to look out for the farm."

"How happens it you are here, then?" with some disapproval in the grave voice.

"I couldn't make it," quietly. "We only have a few acres, and they are rocky and a long way from market. I worked as hard as I could, but there was the doctor and medicines and a living to get. I would have tried for work outside before, but there was none near, and the village was too far away for me to walk back and forth. Last week a cousin came to see us on a bicycle. He said he was going to buy a new machine, and offered to sell me the old one on installments of a few dollars a month. I refused at first, then yesterday a new thought came to me, and I borrowed the bicycle and rode down and got this job at ninety cents a day. Last night I bought the machine, and now," with a warm look in his eyes, "I can send Charlie a few dollars every month and have enough left for the home expenses."

"And you ride back and forth every day?"

"Of course. I have to help mother look after father in the night, and then there are the chores. Besides, I don't like to leave them by themselves long. Father might get worse."

At noon Johnson and several of the old hands left, though a few new ones came in. But like Rolfe, they knew nothing of factory work, and had to be taught. It made a good deal of confusion, with much of the machinery still.

When they left work at night, they found many of the strikers lingering outside the big gates. Rolfe kept close to his new friend until they reached the street, then bent over his bicycle to shield his face and pedaled away at full speed. But before he reached home he stopped at a brook to remove several stains of blood and mud from his face.

The next morning Rolfe came an hour earlier to avoid the strikers, and at night, by advice of the superintendent, the hands slipped through a small gate at the back of the mill yard. But before he had gone many rods, he saw a number of the strikers after him, several of them on bicycles. Evidently they were in worse humor than the night before.

As he swung down a side street, however, the nearest toward his own home, there came a sudden scream of terror from a house opposite. It was a child's voice, and there was no one in sight, at any of the houses or along the street. Apparently all the men and women, and the children old enough to walk, were out with the strikers.

Rolfe did not hesitate, even with the menacing sounds of pursuit behind. Springing from his bicycle at the gate, he rushed through the open doorway and up a flight of stairs, following the terrified sound of the screams until he came to an upper back room. When he threw open the door a cloud of smoke and flame rolled out. The portieres draped back from the inside of the doorway were on fire, and a baby carriage and what appeared to be a pile of papers and magazines just beyond. To enter the room he would have to pass through the sheet of flames, but still Rolfe did not hesitate. Only, as he plunged in he dropped his head into his arms to shield his face. The opposite end of the room was comparatively free from smoke, which was forced back by the breeze entering a window. On the floor near this was crouching a boy of two or three years, screaming with fear. Evidently he had found matches somewhere, and with them had made a fire of the papers and magazines, then in terror of what he had done had retreated to the window.

Snatching a blanket from a bed which the fire had not yet reached, Rolfe wrapped it around the boy and plunged back with him through the sheet of flames. He would have tried to extinguish the fire itself, but it had gained too much headway for him to subdue singlehanded. Only the fire department could prove effective now.

On the way downstairs he heard excited voices from the street. The pursuing strikers had overtaken him, and as he stepped into view in the doorway derisive calls greeted his appearance. Then they noticed the child in his arms, and almost at the same moment the freed smoke beginning to pour from the chamber windows above, and their shouts died away in exclamation of inquiry.

With a sharp cry a tall, heavily-bearded man sprang up the walk and caught the child from his arms. Rolfe did not know him then, but later he discovered that the man was the spinning-room overseer and the leader and organizer of the strike.

Other men were now crowding into the burning house; and for the moment unnoticed, Rolfe slipped past them to his bicycle. But as he picked it up, he uttered a low cry of surprised anger, instantly checked, however, as he realized that he was only one and they were all against him. The front wheel of the bicycle had been broken and bent by stones until it was utterly ruined. For an instant, he had a wild thought of turning back upon them and demanding satisfaction. Then he swung the broken machine upon his shoulder and trudged off toward his home, seven miles away across a rough country.

But the next morning he was back at the mill, earlier even than on the day before. He could not risk any trouble with the strikers now. The ruined bicycle was to be paid for, and the living at home to be made. He must keep his job at all hazards; and to do it he must walk the seven miles twice a day and curb all feelings of resentment. It would be a long time before he could afford another machine.

As he passed into the mill he noticed a number of men in the office. Some sort of consultation seemed to be going on. But the spinning-room was empty.

However, when an hour or more passed, and the last bell was commencing to ring, there came a sudden tramping upon the stairs, and men and boys began to file into the room, ten, twenty, forty, fifty, and among them was the black-bearded man who had snatched the child from his arms. This man came straight to him.

"You are Rolfe Tisdale," he exclaimed. "I have been inquiring about you at the office. Last night you saved my boy from an awful death, and it—it, well, it sobered me up a good deal and set me to thinking. This morning we have been talking in the office, and have arranged the striking trouble, with a little concession on both sides. You need not fear any more trouble on the street. And, oh, yes, I have ordered a new bicycle for you, of the best make. It will be at the office this afternoon, in time for you to ride home."—Frank H. Sweet, in Sabbath Reading.

HAYSE.—John T. Hayse, a young man just in the prime of life, answered to the call to go to the world beyond May 13th, aged 27 years, 5 months and 16 days. He was married in 1909 and his companion had preceded him to the glory world about 3 years ago. Two children were born to them, one of whom is living.

John, as we called him, fought a dreadful disease as long as he could and still had hopes of getting well until perhaps six months before he died. He was converted last September in our meeting at New Salem, joined the church and lived close to God the remainder of his life, and died happy in the Lord. He had many friends and nothing was left undone by his own people or friends that would bring relief or comfort to him during his sickness.

The relatives have the deepest sympathy of all their friends. Talmage, the little orphan boy, will find a home with his grand parents, Bro. and Sister Hayse. God bless the little boy. J. B. O'Briant.

TEMPY CORNELIA STEEL.—Sister Steel was born April 20, 1831. In 1852 she was married to John Allred. She became the mother of eleven children, nine girls and two boys. Two of these preceded her to the spirit world. Nine are still living. She was also the grandmother of twenty-three children, five of these having passed on before her.

She joined the M. P. Church in her girlhood days. She was a good mother and was always deeply interested in the success of her children. Before death she gave the assurance that all was well. The funeral services were conducted in her home at Alamance by J. A. Burgess, and her body laid to rest in Friendship cemetery on the evening of the eighth of April, 1916.

J. A. Burgess.

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

● The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XXII. GREENSBORO, N. C., JUNE 1, 1916. NUMBER 28.

THIS GENERAL CONFERENCE.

It is yet too early to form a mature judgment of the work of our late General Conference. But our present feeling is that this was the most earnest session we have ever attended in the matter of pushing forward the work of our denomination. There was manifest a disposition to sink differences and unite forces in the work God has given us to do.

Our church, judged from this representative body, seems to be entering into a new consciousness of its misison. President Davis compared our church among the churches to the little Swiss Republic among the greater nations of Europe. What friend of mankind could wish to see the little republic blotted out or absorbed by the monarchies that surround it? What friend of mankind could wish Methodist Protestantism to be crowded out of existence by systems that have gathered more numbers but have failed to recognize the dignity and rights of the individual man?

It is true that good Dr. Kelly used the fatalistic argument in favor of Methodist union, but that was the only real argument he used, and it is not convincing to believers in liberty.

This General Conference agreed to enter upon a forward movement this quadrennium, aiming to add 25 per cent. to the membership of the church, and in a special campaign to raise one million dollars for missionary and educational work. Rev. Crates S. Johnson, of Columbus, Ohio, was chosen as executive secretary for this work against his own protest, but we hope he will accept the work. He is a young man of grasp and penetration and enjoys the confidence of the church and will have general co-operation in it, we believe.

A board of education was authorized to succeed the board of ministerial education having in hand not simply the work of helping find and equip men for the ministry but the broader work of both lay and ministerial education, and an oversight of our educational institutions. Rev. Geo. H. Miller, for seventeen years pastor of our church in Steubenville, Ohio, was chosen as Secretary of this Board, Rev. Geo. R. Brown wishing to retire from this work.

Dr. F. T. Tagg, editor of the Methodist Protestant for 24 years, retired on his own motion, and Dr. F. T. Benson, of Maryland, was elected to succeed him. Dr. Benson delighted some of our people years ago as a department editor, and now that he has become editor-in-chief, he will no doubt measure up to the hopes already excited. We wish him much satisfaction and abundant success in the editorial chair.

Doctor Lyman E. Davis was unanimously re-elected editor of the Methodist Recorder, Dr. C. E. Wilbur of our Sunday school literature, and Mr. Reiner publishing agent at Baltimore. Mr. F. W. Pierpont was re-elected publishing agent at Pittsburgh by a large majority.

It was decided by this General Conference to have one denominational treasurer for all the boards. This will save time to the secretaries, it is hoped.

The personnel of this Conference, while containing many of the familiar faces, also included quite a number of new men. It was an earnest, working Conference, and although, perhaps, some minor mistakes were made, we believe upon the whole we have reason to thank God and take courage because of the actions of this General Conference.

The Zanesville Methodist Protestant Church was a pleasing surprise to many of us, both in its building and its attendance. The house of worship is perhaps the best in the denomination. No church in Greensboro equals it in convenience of arrangement and artistic appearance, though some churches here cost more money. It was built, however, by the Muskingum Conference, and the Annual Conference generally meets there. The Sunday school at Zanesville is also one of the largest in the denomination. There were 1,177 present on May 21st. The number frequently exceeds one thousand. The present pastor is a comparatively young man, Rev. Geo. G. Schurtz. He is capable and popular.

Our North Carolina delegation was short three men. Those present were: Ministers—Andrews, Bates, Bethea, Cecil, Dixon, Forelines, Holmes, Johnson, McCulloch Taylor, Whitaker; Laymen—Garrett, Harris, Harrison, Hunter, Idol, Rankin, Swain, Whitaker.

By pushing business, the session was shortened somewhat. The end seemed so near on Friday evening that most of our N. C. delegation felt justified in starting for home, to avoid Sunday travel. Our party of eleven reached Greensboro at 6:33 Saturday evening.

Better a good word than a battle.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE—WILL YOUR PASTOR GO?

As time for the Summer Conference fast approaches the charges that will pay the expenses of the pastors should be reported in the Herald at once. What charge will be first? Entertainment and platform expense $2.50 and the railroad fare to and from High Point.

At least twenty of our charges should send their pastors this year, paying all the expenses of the trip. But somebody must start this work on your circuit. Whether you are an official or not, if no one else is interested, gentle reader, you can do this yourself, circulate a little subscription list among your friends and the work will be done your pastor will be happy, the conference will be better, your charge will be helped, and you will have the consciousness of doing a worthy deed.

Please to report in Herald next week. Conference meets June 26th.

Fraternally, R. M. Andrews.

Suppose that "when the roll is called up yonder," I am there myself, but that all through the eternal ages I am unable to find a single person who is there because of my having led him to Christ—how much will heaven mean to me?

Suppose I were asked how many persons I had persistently tried to win to Christ during the past month, or even during the past year, what would my answer be? How many have I even spoken to? How many have I on my prayer list now? If I am not interested enough in the salvation of others even to have a daily prayer list, is it any wonder that I am not a soul winner?

It is said that a minister once dreamed that he saw rows of beautiful diadems studded with precious jewels. "Is that big one for me?" said he, remembering that there had been many conversions in his church. "No, not for you." the angel said, "that one is for the poor old deaf man who used to sit by your pulpit stairs and plead with God for souls in the congregation while you preached to them."—From "God's Plan for Soul-Winning."

We are told that those who go forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them. (Psa. 126:6.) Will those also come rejoicing who have no sheaves to bring?

OUR FATHERS—WHAT WE OWE TO THEIR MEMORIES.

BY DR. J. W. KIDD.

At the close of the American Revolution we are told that John Wesley gave his consent to the separation of the Methodists in the United States from the Church of England in the following words: "As our American brethren are now totally disentangled from the state and the English hierarchy we dare not entangle them again with either the one or the other. They are now at full liberty simply to follow the Scriptures and the primitive church, and we judge it best that they should stand fast in that liberty wherewith God hath so strangely set them free."

The letter containing this permission was sent over by Dr. Thomas Coke, he and Francis Asbury being designated as joint superintendents of the work in America. I will make no comment on the statement made by Wesley about the strange manner in which the Methodists in America had been set free, and then undertake to designate the men who should govern them, without asking them their consent.

When Dr. Coke arrived in America a conference of traveling preachers was called to meet in Baltimore (December, 1784) and an independent church was organized under the title of Methodist Episcopal Church, and Francis Asbury and Dr. Coke were made bishops. You will remember that this was at a time when the colonies had just thrown off the yoke of Great Britain and a republic had been organized and started on the principles that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, and that all men were created free and equal. The Methodist preachers in the United States, however, didn't seem to take much stock in the theory that the governed had anything to do with it, at least in church matters, and they organized a church in which the laity had no rights whatever, except to support their self-appointed rulers and task-masters.

We are informed that no provision whatever was made for the laymen to vote on any question at any meeting of the church From the nature of things we would naturally suppose this would have been a first-class time to have organized a "Laymen's Movement," and a Laymen's Movement did materialize, but I can assure my hearers that the Laymen's movements in that day had a much rockier time than similar movements at a later day. Our fathers of the laity and a portion of the ministry believed that "One is your master even Christ and all ye are brethren," and they believed that no man or set of men had any right, according to God's Word, to lord it over their brethren, and they protested vigorously against this combined monarchy and oligarchy which had thus been set up in this land of the free.

When the General Conference met in 1824 a number of petitions were presented praying for a representation of laymen in the law-making department of the church but the petitioners met with no encouragement. The only answer was, "Pardon us if we know no such rights; if we do not comprehend such privileges."

Union societies sprang up all over the country, the object of which was to bring a mighty and combined influence to bear on the next General Conference to ask for the admission of laymen into the councils of the church, but at the next meeting they got this reply: "The great head of the church himself has imposed on us the duty of preaching the Gospel, of administering the ordinances and maintaining discipline among those over whom the Holy Ghost in these respects has made us the overseers."

In monarchial countries they believe, or profess to believe, that kings rule by divine right; that God has appointed the monarch to reign and rule over his subjects. We who live in a republic laugh at such foolishness, but the answer our fathers received was equally absurd, equally ridiculous and equally lacking in common sense. Our fathers at first did not protest against the episcopacy, but the lack of lay representation, and if they at that time could have secured some show of rights, another church would not have been organized lacking bishops.

But the "Mutual Rights," a Methodist paper, devoted to the interests of laymen was started, and then the bishops and those of their choosing began to show their authority. They began to expel those who belonged to the union societies and who read the "Mutual Rights." Mind you, this was in free America, a country where free speech and a free press were supposed to be rights of the people. Yet our fathers, against whom no charges of immorality or heresy could be brought, were expelled from the only Methodist Church in America, as if some great crime had been committed by them.

After their expulsion there was nothing left for our fathers to do but to organize another Methodist Church, and what is now known as the Methodist Protestant Church was organized, and, of course, the laymen were given their rights in the new church; and as they had seen so much trouble from the arbitrary actions of the bishops, they decided they would have none, and they organized a church without a bishop, in a land that has no king.

Please remember that I am not trying to abuse the Methodist Episcopal Church. My earlier years were spent among the members of that church, and I cherish memories of their kindness to me and mine, and I have often talked over with them the earlier history of their church. I have no ill will against them or their church; this is a free country, and every one has a right to belong where he pleases.

I have not written anything for "harm-sake or hate-sake," but I have given the facts of history, because it is absolutely necessary for the vindication of our fathers, whose memories we revere and whose examples we are trying to follow.

Our people are not much given to telling others about our fathers, or of dwelling on their characteristics as they should, and I am sorry to say that members of the other Methodist Churches are absolutely uninformed as to the true character of our fathers.

I read some years ago that at a meeting of our general conference at Pittsburg the great Senator Dolliver appeared as a fraternal messenger from the Methodist Episcopal Church and commended the work of our fathers, but deplored the fact that a new church was organized, and said, "If you had stayed with us we could have whipped them into it—lay representation—twenty-five years sooner.

And when I read the report I was mortified that not a member of the conference explained to the Senator that it was not a matter of choice with our fathers, but of necessity. They had either to organize a new church or go into other churches with whose doctrines they were not in accord. The Methodist Episcopal Church, or perhaps I should say the two Methodist Episcopal Churches, now have lay delegation, but not to the extent yet that our church has.

And while we wish that all branches of Methodism may grow and prosper, we owe it to our fathers to stand fast in the liberty with which God has so marvellously clothed us.

"O liberty, can man resign thee?
Once having felt thy gen'rous flame,
Can dungeon bolts and bars confine thee,
Or whip thy noble spirit tame?"

We owe it to our fathers to teach our children to love liberty, both in church and state.

[This paper was read before the West Virginia Conference, and a resolution requesting its publication was adopted.]

—Rev. R. M. Andrews was elected by the General Conference as a member of the Board of Education, and Bro. J. Norman Wills was re-elected a member of the Board of Foreign Missions and also as a member of the Seminary Board.

THE RESTLESSNESS OF HUMAN AMBITION.

BY ROBERT TURNER.

"O that I had the wings of a dove; for I would fly to yonder, and be at rest." Psa. 11:1 and 55:6.

An object, to be seen at greatest advantage, must be at a distance from the eye of the observer. The hovel with its surroundings of disgust, not a thing pleasant to the near observer, but if seen at a sufficient distance, may appear a sweet and very desirable cottage. The thistle field strewn with brambles may delight the eye of a distant spectator by the loveliness of its verdure. The dead sea whose waters are corrupted and whose banks poison the air by their putrid exhalation, may charm the eye of an enthusiast, who views it from an adjoining eminence, and dwells with rapture on the quietness of its surface, and on the beauty of its outline—its border fringed with the gayest coloring of nature, all is the effect of distance. The poor man's house it can transform into a paradise of beauty.

Have not some of you had an idea that other people were more happy than yourself—and really wished that it were possible for you to be buried in a distant grove, and forget for a while, in silence, and in solitude the distraction of the world? Have you not in your own imagination seen yon beautiful rivulet and longed to repose there on its bank and enjoy the peace and quietness of its concealment? In a word is not there a secret aspiration of the soul for another place than the one you actually occupy?

But what is most to be observed is that when you are approaching the long-wished-for spot, the fairy enchantments in which distance has so beautifully arrayed it, gradually disappear; when you at last arrive at your object the illusion is entirely dissipated. You find you have carried your principle of restlessness with you.

What is true of the natural landscape is also true of the moral landscape, which is presented to the eye of the mind when it contemplates human life. The position which I myself occupy is seen and felt with all its disadvantages. I see it before mine eyes, with a vision so near and intimate, as to admit of no coloring, and to preclude the exercise of fancy.

Am I unlearned? I feel the disgrace of ignorance, and long to be a philosopher. Do I stand upon a literary platform? I feel the vexation of rivalship. Am I poor? I long to be wealthy. Am I rich? I think how happy I would have been if born in poverty with its peace and innocency. Am I immersed in business? I envy those who have every hour at their disposal. Am I single? I feel the dreariness of solitude. Am I married? I am tormented with the ingratitude of those around me.

This is a principle of human ambition, but the truth is, that we are never satisfied. We all have something to look forward to, and something to aspire after.

It is true man should engage in pursuits —even if trifling—if innocent, but it is far better to look to a pursuit which is not trifling—which leads to some lasting gratification. Man must have an object to look forward to; without this incitement the mind languishes. But let us compare this same principle to the children of light and those of darkness. One labors for immortality. The other for perishable and vain objects.

There is no resting place to be found this side of time. It is the doctrine of the Bible

I do not ask you to listen to the complaints of the poor, or the murmuring of the disappointed. Take your lesson from the more fortunate, visit him in his stage of fame and grandeur, go with him to his solitude, mark his dissatisfied eye, no rest.

Then let's look for that rest which God has promised and for that country in which there are no sun, moon, and stars to give light to our habitation, but the glory of God shall lighten it forever more..

LOVING THE PREEMINENCE.

In Third John, 9:10, is graphically portrayed the unholy ambition of Diotrephes in being first in everything regardless of the means employed in obtaining the first place, or the consequences resulting therefrom. Instead of his belonging to the class of people whose efficiency and usefulness is largely destroyed by their timidity, modesty and unassertiveness; he belonged to the other extreme class whose forwardness, domineering and egotistical ways make them almost unendurable. The natural, child-like state is the happy goal for all, thereby avoiding either extreme.

"Chickens come home to roost" is literally fulfilled in John's troubles with Diotrephes. This preeminence seeker, no doubt, almost vexed the very life out of the aged apostle, through his constant endeavor to be first in all things. John was being "paid back in his own coin." He would recall to mind the many times the disciples had vexed the soul of the Master through their strife over who should be first among the disciples and how his own mother had interceded in trying to procure the highest seats of honor in Christ's kingdom for John and James.

Diotrephes was a gallery speaker, in the legislative halls; a grand-stand player on the base-ball field; the gas-bag in the country store, and the imperious boss in the committee room. He prayed to be heard of men and gave alms and fasted to be seen of men. Like Peter, he became an offense to his Master, seeking and doing those things that were of man and not the things that were of God. Diotrephes, like Judas, was the devil in that local church, tormenting the very soul out of the Elder; the beloved Gaius, who walked in the truth; and Demetrius who had good report of all men, and of the truth itself. The regrettable feature is that most churches are cursed with a few just such men and women as Diotrephes.

The motto of Diotrephes was, "Rule or Ruin" and there was nothing so base, contemptible and treacherous that he would not do when it would assist him in gaining the preeminence. When messengers were sent to this church by the apostles, Diotrephes would neither receive them himself, nor permit others who would. He denied the authority of the apostles, refused to obey their instructions and destroyed letters sent to this church through him. Members whom he could not rule he cast out of the church.

Diotrephes was one of those little souls filled with unholy ambitions and lime-light lovers, who have to be carried, cared for like babies in order to keep them in good humor. If the church desires to have his name, means and influence on her side, unusual discretion must be used to keep him in the most prominent office; let him have his way, pat him on the back for everything he does, and have a large quantity of "soft soap and "soothing oil" on hand in case of emergency, lest he chafe and gall under the collar. He followed for the loaves and fishes, on the shoulders of others in order to be above the masses. He opposed everything that didn't originate with him, place him foremost in it, or have the stamp of his approval on it.

Diotrephes held some dominating office in his local church; no doubt, given to him in order to get him to join it; hoping to line him and his friends up on the side of right; which office and position of influence he abused as badly as Judas Iscariot ever did Unlike Elisha, "The man of God," Diotrephes directed all his powers as ruler, officer and leader to advance his own selfish interest, pacify his cravings for prominence and to feed his vanity. I have known of many little folks to leave their local church, their denomination in order to become a Class Leader in another church, or officer or teacher in the Sunday school. Many leave their church and community to attend church in another in order to become an organist or to get to sing in their choir. What a pity that St. Peter could not have kept that four cornered sheet, handing it down to us to carry such people around in.

During this time there were forming among the churches of Asia Minor strong anti-Pauline and anti-Jewish parties threatening the very existence of the church itself: John, the peace-loving man of God, was endeavoring to get the factions together, thereby escaping the harmful results and shameful divisions that were impending Diotrephes saw an opportunity to suddenly gain some notoriety, and regardless of harmful consequences, he allied himself against John and the Union Party. He welcomed schism at all times when it would result advantageously to him. So far as is known he was perfectly orthodox in his creed; the charge of heresy couldn't be brought against him; but he was schismatical in all his dealing. His light, prating, poisoned tongue backed up by a misguided hand and evil heart wrought much harm

Diotrephes in his mad desire to be first lost sight of the secret and joy of true greatness and happiness. He failed to see the blue in the glass of water, the glory in the lily of the valley and the wisdom of the chief's being servant of all. He lived for what he could get out of life and not what he could put into it. His narrow, contracted and self-centered life is in open contrast to the noble life of the Apostle Paul, who instead of "having to be first or nothing," said. "For though I be free from all men, yet I have made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more—I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. This I do for the Gospel's sake." No people so degraded, in circumstances so low nor tasks too mean nor humiliating to shame or baffle the great heart of Paul, who came third in all his calculations, with God first and his fellow men second.

MARTHA! MARTHA!

Thou art careful and troubled about many things, but one thing is needful and Mary has chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her.

Now I have not started this article in answer to any one, or to use any personalities, but for all of us to study the general workings of our church and the equality of the finance matter, both in pastor's salary and general interests. I see an article in the Herald of May 18th —A Layman's Job and Who Will Take It. I would say all of us ought to take it, and to consider it well, for there is serious trouble somewhere.

I am now in my 80th year, and have spent about two-thirds of that time in the M. P. Church, and have all the time been satisfied that some of our preachers were not getting the support they ought to have had. Some of us old people well remember the struggles of our church after the civil war, and almost all of us were poor and had little or no money, and when most of our pastors got only $150 to $300 a year,, and had to take part of that in provisions and clothing, for we did not have the money, but we all lived some way. But the church has grown and prospered, and God has blessed us with plenty, and yet I don't believe the preachers are paid in many places any better according to ability or necessity of the times, than they were 50 years ago, and with less equality and satisfaction than then. But where is the trouble and what is the remedy? Let us stop and inquire.

Turn to 2 Kings 22nd chapter, and find the last book and inquire of God. Get the church right with God, get things on an equality according to ability; but that is a job for us all, and the preachers not excepted.

I believe we have as good people as there are any where in our church, and they want to do right by each other, and they think they are, but "Money, Money," and criticism and sharp rebukes can never do any church any good, or the ones that read them, but makes matters worse. We must find some other remedy. How can any preacher know the financial strength of any field only the one he travels, or how can the finance committee know the strength of the different fields with the light they have, to make the assessment by the number of members can't be fair. To make it by the amount paid pastor is only to guess at what the charges are able to pay. I believe many of the country charges become discouraged and think they are overcharged according to strength. Now let us try to find the cause if there is any. A great deal of the strength of the country churches has gone to the towns and cities in the last twenty-five years and left many of them weak. They have been dunned for money to help build churches in the towns at a cost of from ten to forty thousand dollars, when many of them were not able to build for themselves at a cost of one thousand dollars. Has the main part of the church extension money gone to the towns and cities where they have preaching every Sunday, while many places get preaching only once a month? Is the Bible or any part of our church neglected in any way? I am not saying all these things are so, but let us have seventy deacons appointed or as many as are needed to look after these things, and let our ministers give themselves wholly to preaching the word. I believe if things could be got on equality and our people could be got to see it, they would be willing to pay a living salary.

With love to all concerned, I am yours in the work of the Master.

OUR DUTY.

I feel it my duty to write to our paper. I am a poor orppan child left in this unfriendly world with no sister or brother to love and comfort me. I have no education. What I know is just what I have learned by my own study and my Heavenly Father's help; but amid all the troubles I can only look back on my past life and thank and praise my Heavenly Father that it is as well with me as it is. Bless His holy name, he has guided and brought me thus far, and I trust that he will lead me safely home.

I feel that if I have any talent, it is for personal work. I try to win souls, but I have been rejected by some, as they despised their Father's instructions; others receive my message in honest hearts and rejoice and say that they love me because I share their burdens when no others ever had.

I want to call the attention of some who are out of their duty to mother and father, sisters and brothers. So many will wait until mother is dead; they will go to the grave and carry flowers and cover the grave and grieve and say that they know that they had the best mother in the world, and if they could only call her back they would never grieve nor treat her as they had any more. But it is too late, they are forever gone and you can never call her back.

Let us weep with those who weep and rejoice with those that rejoice. O how I long to see love flowing from breast to breast.

Why do I love the church first? Because Jesus is the head of the church and I know He first loved me. I love my church and brothers and sisters and I love all true churches and all Christ-like members, and I love the souls of sinners, but not their sins.

I am sorry to say that my church (Harris Chapel) has no pastor, but Bro. Durant (he is a M. E. preacher) seems to be a good man and I like to hear him preach; but none is as consoling as the M. P. to me; but poor me! I have to do as the rest say. Pray for my church, Harris Chapel.

A GREAT BATTLE LINE.

The reading world is becoming accustomed to long battle lines. There are battle lines in the present European war extending hundreds of miles. But the battle line in this country against the saloon is thousands of miles in length, extending, literally, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf of Mexico to the International boundary.

Some of the great central states occupy critical positions in this line. Indiana, for example, where the liquor interests literally spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in their battle for the preservation of their saloons during 1915. During this period they succeeded in re-opening only twelve saloons in communities which had formerly voted dry, but in the same period of time the dry forces succeeded in closing a total of 120 saloons. This is a wonderful record when one considers the fact that this work has been done under city and township local option laws which were created in the interests of the brewers and distillers.

The city of Indianapolis is considering the possibility of calling a local option election. Friends of the dry cause point to the fact that if Minneapolis and Boston can come so near to closing their saloons as a result of local option elections, Indianapolis will stand a still better chance of going dry. Prominent men in that city claim that it can be voted dry by a majority of 20,000.

The National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America will be held in Indianapolis from June 26th to 29th inclusive, 1916. Coming as this Convention does, so soon after the National Conventions of the great political parties, it will be one of the most momentous gatherings of temperance forces ever assembled in this country. Plans are now on foot to make it a great school of methods where the latest and most scientific word concerning the war against beverage alcohol will find utterance. Men of national and even international fame wil be on the program. Recognized leaders in the fight against the saloon throughout this country will be there and will have prominent parts in the proceedings of the Convention.

SENATOR GORE'S PEACE RESOLUTION.

Resolved by the Senate of the United States (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress and the people of the United States are desirous of maintaining an honorable and lasting peace with all the nations of the world, and pending war among other nations are desirous of maintaining even-handed and undiscriminating neutrality.

Second. That the Congress and the people of the United States will support all efforts on the part of the President to preserve such a peace and to observe such neutrality.

Third. That the Congress and the people of the United States earnestly desire and would hail with profound satisfaction the return or restoration of permanent peace to the warring nations of the Old World.

Fourth. That the Congress and the people of the United States would approve and support all seasonable efforts on the part of the President to encourage or to facilitate the establishment of a permanent peace among the warring nations upon such principles as would best conserve the interest of civilization and insure, so far as may be, international peace and justice for the future.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTIONS.

The number of Christian Endeavor Societies in N. C. has increased 100 per cent. in the last two years, and the hundreds of Endeavorers all over the State are looking forward with high anticipation to the coming Convention, to be held in Charlotte June 2nd-4th. One thing which will be agitated on this occasion will be the First All-South C. E. Convention. This will be held in Atlanta, July 13-16, 1916, when it is expected that 2,000 Dixie Endeavorers will be there, and a wonderful program will be carried out. The Convention Theme will be "Training for Christian Service." There will be great, stirring addresses, practical conferences, inspiring singing, good fellowship, and spiritual blessings. The following great speakers and leaders have already given their promise to be present, and they alone would insure a wonderful program:

Rev. Francis E. Clark, founder of the C. E. Society and Pres. World's C. E. Union, will come to us after a series of conventions in Hawaii, Korea, Japan and China. Daniel A. Poling, President's Associate of the United Society of C. E., "a real orator."

Karl Lehmann, Southern States Secy. of the United Society of C. E., "The World's Greatest Authority on C. E. Methods."

E. P. Gates, Field Secy. of the Illinois C. E. Union, "The greatest State C. E Field Secy. in America."

Mrs. Wm. Thorne, of McKenzie, Tenn., "A Junior worker of power and efficiency.". Edgar F. Garwood, Field Secy. of the Brooklyn, N. Y., C. E. Union. "An Expert on Local Union Methods and Work."

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCHES TO UNITE.

These are great days for American Methodism. Glorious history is being made and made rapidly. With great joy we gave to our readers a week ago the very brotherly response of the Methodist Episcopal Church to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, on the subject of unification. Even as the senior bishops of the two churches clasped hands during that memorable scene in the General Conference which none who saw it will ever forget, so have the denominations joined hands through the acts of this representative body. The two churches are one in heart.

And now the question has been raised Why wait four years for the consummation of the union? It is not necessary at all. Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of the Church South, whose presence at the General Conference has been a potent influence in the crystallization of the church-wide sentiment for union, brought that body to its feet in a demonstration of approval of marked enthusiasm when he suggested that a special session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church might be called in 1918, when the General Conference of the Church South is held, and then and there, the details of the plan of union having been worked out by the Joint Commission, the two churches would be formally and forever reunited.

It seems too good to be true. But it is a fact none the less. The break of 1844 is about to come to an end. The General Conference received Bishop Hendrix's suggestion with such aproval that resolutions were immediately introduced providing for the special session. In view of the vast legal interests involved in the union of the two churches, the resolutions were first sent to the judiciary committee, of which Judge Henry Wade Rogers, of the United States District Court is chairman, to protect every constitutional step in the momentous issue This committee having made a favorable report on the legal points involved, the Conference unanimously authorized the bishops to call a special session at such time and place as may be deemed wise, the exact date not being fixed in order to provide for all possible emergencies. The plan as suggested by Bishop Hendrix, and as it is in the mind of the Conference, is to meet at the time or immediately after the adjournment of the Southern General Conference that passes on unification, and consummate finally the union of the two churches, within, of course, the constitutional provisions of the two denominations that will need to be complied with in bringing about the complete union in all details. Baltimore, birthplace of the denomination, is already suggested as the appropriate place to witness the reunion.

Every consideration of sound churchmanship demands an early reunion. The two churches at work in common territory will be hindered if the union is not consummated at an early date. They will be living in a state of expectancy, not knowing exactly what to do and what not to do. Moreover, denominational readjustments in the general work demand that all haste consistent with the magnitude of the task be made. Great problems are pressing upon the churches now as never before in the history of the world. A new world era is dawning. Methodism must be in a position to meet the challenge of the new day, and she must set her house in order as soon as possible to this end.

Bishop Hendrix's suggestion we are certain is of God. And it will commend itself most heartily to both the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as such, even as it did to the General Conference. And there will be great rejoicing throughout Israel in consequence. In the calendar of American Methodism 1918 will be writ large.—Zion's Herald.

AN UNSOLVED PROBLEM IN OUR AMERICAN HISTORY.

Nothing is harder to verify than some of the things relating to the history of our country that many believe to be authentic while many others are doubtful in regard to them. This is true of some of the events relating to our American independence. If you were to go to the little town of Charlotte in North Carolina you would find in front of the courthouse of Mecklenburg County a towering monument erected to the signers of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence which antedates the famous Declaration the anniversary of which we celebrate on the Fourth of July. The people of Charlotte will tell you that the Mecklenburg Decaration was signed on May 20 in the year 1775, and that it is that day instead of July 4 that we should celebrate as our national Independence Day. Just as some of the people of Provincetown believe that it is that town instead of Plymouth that should be set down in history as the first landing place of the Pilgrims, so do the people of Charlotte believe that to their town should be given the distinction of being the birthplace of our American Declaration of Independence. Those who have made the most careful investigation into the facts connected with the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence feel that there is a good deal to support this contention.

If you were to go to Charlotte on May 20 you would find the people celebrating that day for the same reason and in the same way that we celebrate the Fourth of July No one can deny that the spirit of patriotism and of resistance to British rule or misrule ran as high in Mecklenburg County as in any part of the country. It ran so high that the British referred to it as the "hornet's nest" of America. Nowhere were there more loyal men. Nowhere could one find men more ready to do and dare anything to secure independence for the American colonies. The contention of those opposed to the claim of those who feel that May 20 should be observed as our real Independence Day is that the Declaration signed on that day was but a local affair, and that the one signed on July 4 was the action of all of the colonies. But the people of Charlotte will not have it that way.

The convention from which resulted the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence assembled in the courthouse at Charlotte on May 19 in the year 1775. Prof. H. Addington Bruce, who has made an exhaustive study of the whole matter, says: "The original purpose of the meeting, it seems, was to pronounce the annulment of all laws and commissions in consequence of the King's address of February declaring the colonies in a state of rebellion; and to make provision for a temporary form of government 'until instructions from the Provincial Congress regulating the jurisprudence of the province shall provide otherwise, or the legislative body of Great Britain resign its unjust pretensions with respect to America.' In this expectation an elaborate set of resolutions had been prepared for submission to the convention. But before action could be taken the procedings were interrupted in a most sensational way."

The sensation was nothing more nor less than the appearance on the scene of a courier riding fast with the stirring news of the battle of Lexington. Excited by the uproar outside created by the news that American blood had been shed by the British, the convention adjourned to hear all that the courier had to tell about the matter. Naturally enough the news brought by the courier caused the spirit of rebellion and independence to run still higher. The convention resumed its session, which lasted until the next morning. The resolutions first prepared were set aside and the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence took their place. The only trouble with all this is that historians have grave doubts in regard to the convention meeting as stated above, and of the action resulting from it.

Not until many years after the Fourth of July Declaration of Independence had been declared and accepted was there any claim made for the Mecklenburg Declaration. On April 30 of the year 1819, a man calling himself "John McKnitt," who was a son of the secretary of the convention held in Charlotte on May 20, 1775, published in the Raleigh Register an account of the convention and what he claimed was the text of the Declaration of Independence adopted at that time. The resemblance of some of the pasages in the Mecklenburg Declaration to those in the Fourth of July Declaration caused a great deal of unfavorable comment, and charges of plagiarism were made But some declared that it was just as reasonable to suppose that the Fourth of July Declaration had been borrowed in part from the Mecklenburg Declaration as it was to contend that the Mecklenburg Declaration had been borrowed in part from the Fourth of July Declaration. Many men of erudition have held to this contention.

Naturally enough, the insinuation that he had borrowed from the Mecklenburg Declaration when writing the Fourth of July Declaration aroused the ire of Thomas Jefferson, who repudiated the whole Mecklenburg Declaration entirely in a letter written to John Adams, who was disposed to believe in its genuineness Mr. "John McKnitt" had it boldly implied by many outside of North Carolina that he had an imagination so vivid that it suggested his direct descent from Ananias. From that day to this there have been believers and unbelievers in regard to the authenticity of the Mecklenburg Declaration.

One will find no reference to this Declaration in some of the standard histories of the United States, while other historians have made but slight reference to it. But North Carolina "stands up" for the Mecklenburg Declaration, and the old town of Charlotte sets its bells to ringing and unfurls its flags to the breeze on May 20 in honor of what it believes to be the first Declaration of Independence. Truth to tell, the people of Charlotte have in recent years uncovered evidence that seems to give strength to their contention, and many people outisde of the state of North Carolina are now disposed to believe the whole story of the Mecklenburg Declaration. A strong bit of newly-discovered evidence for the Mecklenburgers was found in a copy of the Raleigh Register printed ten years before "John McKnitt" wrote his letter in 1819. This evidence is in the form of a newspaper report of an oration delivered by a boy pupil of Sugar Creek Academy In his oration this alert boy said:

"On the 19th of May, 1776 [obviously a misprint for 1775], a day sacredly exulting to every Mecklenburg bosom, two delegates duly authorized from every militia company in this county met in Charlotte. After a cool and deliberate investigation of the causes and extent of our differences with G. Britain, and taking a view of the probable result; pledging their all in support of their rights and liberties; they solemnly entered into and published a full and determined declaration of independence renouncing forever all allegiance, dependence on or connection with Great Britain; dissolved all judicial and military estabishments emanating from the British crown; established others on principles correspondent with their declaration, which went into immediate operation: All which were transmitted to Congress by express, and probably expedited the general Declaration of Independence. May we ever act worthy of such predecessors."

So it is that this mystery in the history of our American struggle for independence remains unsolved to the full satisfaction of all concerned. There are not lacking many who believe that the Mecklenburg Declaration was the first one ever issued, and it is a pity that it is not in existence to help to support this contention.—Ellis Evans, in Zion's Herald.

THE GIFT OF A LOVING HEART.

"I hate to go to church this morning!" moaned the girl in the blue dress, with a piteous curl to her red lips. "This is missionary day. The minister will be calling for gifts, folks replying, the secretary writing down names and offerings on the blackboard, where folks can see, and they'll expect me to give when I can't pledge one cent. I just believe I will stay away!"

"I wouldn't do that, dear!" counseled the invalid mother, tenderly. "You have done the best you could. The Lord knows and looks only on the heart."

"People don't," retorted the girl, bitterly; "if you can't dress decent and keep up appearances in everything you are not in it. Every one has given something for the new church except me. I am positively ashamed to meet Miss Caroline when I remember what she has done. She bought the lot, paid for the furnishings, and I don't know what all. What must she think of a member like me who professes to love, but does not do one thing? I'd rather stay away forever."

The girl in the blue dress did not mean a word she was saying. You could scarcely have kept her away from the sunny Bible workshop, where she taught a class, played the organ and acted as soloist. She enjoyed the services. She enjoyed doing her many duties. Her heart heavy with longing, ached when she went about her work. The lesson was unusually interesting. The pupils were unusually attentive. For a time she forgot the blue dress which she had despised, and her empty purse. When the services were over she left the noisy crowd and slipped contentedly into the corner of the pew with Miss Caroline.

"I do enjoy everything so, but I suppose I really have no right!" she whispered; "nobody knows how anxious I am to give, but how can I when I have nothing?"

"Nothing to give?" Miss Caroline's brown eyes looked reproachfully into the girl's sorrowful face, and her slim white hand took the plump one and patted it lovingly. "Why, my dear, of whom are you talking?" she asked.

"Myself!" choked the girl, bursting into tears. "I never have anything to give, and it makes me feel so little and mean."

"Never say that again!" interrupted the older woman, almost severely. "I give money. You give your youth, your enthusiasm, your wonderful gift of song. Do you not know that these things are better than gold?"

The girl in the blue dress looked in amazement as the gentle voice trailed on: "I gave a house, but it would be useless in the Lord's hands without lives. I can not teach or sing or get others to come. You do. Which is worth most, wealth or work?"

"I—I do not know!" stammered the girl flushing like a pink rose.

"The solo you gave this morning brought forward a man for whom our pastor has been praying for months. He was watching you with rapt expression, and his lips were moving. I knew then what he was planning to do. Your song gave him the courage to come forward."

"I am so glad!"

"Brother Robb was terribly discouraged a short time ago. Your speech at Endeavor meeting in regard to the young people attending the mid-week and regular service encouraged him, and when the young people acted on the suggestion, the good man was uplifted I can not tell you how much."

"I only said what I thought. If I were a preacher I'd hate it awfully if the young people walked away and forgot the church services, and I wouldn't think it a bit inspiring to preach to empty benches," defended the listener.

"No one but the pastor knows how hard it is!" said Miss Carolina, thoughtfully. "I heard him praising some one who helped address the circulars anr papers which he was sending out. I wonder who it was? Little girl in the blue dress, your offerings can not be measured in dollars and cents. Am I not right, parson?"

The girl had not heard footsteps behind her, but now as she looked back frightened she saw that the church was empty except for Miss Caroline, herself and the pastor His face was beaming.

"The value of such offerings can not be estimated," he declared, joyfully. "You have kept me in the field when I was ready to give up in despair. You have indirectly brought dozens into the church. Money is useful; we could not do without it but there are some things still better—the gifts and sacrifices and favors which come by the way of a loving heart. Continue in his love for the glory of God and the salvation of the world and never again say that you have nothing to give. Will you promise me this?"

And the blushing, happy girl in the blue dress nodded her head as she silently sent up a prayer of thanks to God.—Grace Boteler Sanders.

CONCERNING BOOKS.

Books are born, not made. A real book is created, not merely constructed—such a book, for instance, as had its birth in the brain of Dante and which he tells us kept him lean through many years. There are many counterfeits of a book—so many printed pages beautifully typed, exquisitely adorned, and finely bound. But these things do not make a real book. Some books are stillborn and lie in dead and delicate beauty on the bookshop counter; others eke out an anaemic existence for a few years and then silently slip into neglected graves; the vast majority are obsolete or forgotten in the course of a generation, and only a few have a niche in the gallery of the immortals. The vitality of a book is determined not by its printing, adorning, or binding, but rather by that subtle something imparted to it in the process of intellectual gestation. The Psalms of David, the visions of the prophets, the letters of Paul the sayings of Socrates, the dreams of Dante, the sonnets of Shakespeare were not made in any mechanical sense or fashion: they are creations—the offspring of intellectual and spiritual travail. After long and patient brooding some night, some morning, the fancies and imaginations, the visions and yearnings of a man's mental and spiritual life co-ordinate and distribute themselves; the eternal principles relate themselves to the age spirit, and a harmonious whole fused in the crucible of the brain, pours itself forth at pen point, bearing to all men a mesage of truth and life. A book is born! And nothing is more wonderful. Through this creation a man immortalizes himself. He passes on; his form and features are forgotten; he becomes the merest and vaguest tradition; but the truth of his book abides. It becomes a part of the indestructible wealth of the world—a spiritual and intellectual legacy bequeathed to the race by its creator. To such creators and for such creations the world is vastly in debt. Through such we have become "the heirs of all the ages in the foremost files of time."

A recent newspaper editorial states: "Mastication and digestion are processes as essential to getting the full value out of literature as they are to getting the full value out of dinner. A thoughtful man benefits more largely from reading James Oppenheim or Leonard Merrick than a fool does from reading Meredith and Shakespeare. A discriminating mind puts one issue of a daily paper to a better use than a slovenly mind can do with seventy-five monthly magazines. We don't need to read more half so much as we need to read more intelligently."

This emphasizes a truth and points a danger. There is today such a mass of printed matter that slovenly reading is a growing characteristic. And what is worse and perhaps more to the point, much that is printed in papers, magazines, and books is not worth any kind of reading, slovenly or otherwise. The fact is that the reading of the ephemeral, reading for the sake of news or to keep in touch with the passing novelty of the hour, has very largely taken the place of reading for culture and for mental discipline. A competent authority has recently pointed out that, notwithstanding the large increase in the number of books published in the last thirty years, the number of people who read books of an earnest and serious character has not perceptibly increased. Here is a danger against against which we must all be on our guard. Reading, to be of value, must be intelligent and earnest; and, still further, it must be reading of worthy and valuable literature. While admitting that a thoughtful mind may derive benefit from the reading of mediocre material, it is, nevertheless, true that even such a mind is liable to deteriorate and become unfitted for its best work by the mass of ill-digested, bizarre, and unbalanced material now proffered to the general reader. It is not only true that whatever is read should be read with intelligence, but also and even more emphatically true that every reader should exercise the most intelligent discrimination in the selection of what he reads, always remembering that "some books are to be tasted others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested."—Christian Advocate (New York).

A GAME POSTPONED.

In the shade of a big maple that grew by the side of the road sat a small boy with a very sour look on his face. In one hand he held a baseball. The other rested on a bat that lay by his side. In the field across the road a few boys of about his own age were playing; along the road were passing little groups of children with flowers in their hands. A brass band had gone by a few minutes before, with a line of white-haired old men trailing after it; but even that had not driven the sour look from the face of the boy under the tree. The music was slow and queer, and the old men dragged along, some of them out of step, and all of them looking worn and tired, and very little like the men in uniform who usually march behind a band.

Every one seemed to be going to the burying ground that lay next to the ball field. When most of the people had passed, an old man came along the road. He walked slowly and with a cane, and in one hand carried a large bunch of lilacs and lilies of the valley. Roddy Wikinson, the boy under the tree, saw that the old man wore a broad brimmed black hat like the other old men who had gone by, and had a little copper button in the lapel of his coat; but it did not interest him.

When the old man saw the big maple, he stopped and took off his hat and wiped his forehead, for the day was hot. Then he went over toward Roddy, climbed the little slope of the bank, and sat down.

At first he sat still and said nothing; but in a little while, seeing the ball and the bat, he looked down at Roddy with a smile, and said, "Going to have a little game?"

"No, sir," Roddy answered. "I was going to, but my father told me I mustn't—at any rate, till afternoon. I don't see what difference it makes—just because a lot of people want to take flowers to the graveyard. I didn't know any of those soldiers."

"No, of course not," said the old man, in a kindly way. "You didn't know them and they didn't know you, but they thought about you a good deal."

"Who—me?" asked Roddy, with a puzzled look.

"Yes, about you and all the other boys who were to come after them. That's why they did what they did. They had to look a long way ahead, and think of others instead of themselves. If they had thought only of themselves, they would have stayed at home.

"Now there was Johnnie Cramer. He was only sixteen—a boy just like you, who liked to coast and skate and play ball, when he didn't have to work to help his mother. He went as a drummer boy, and they said that before the year was out he was the best drummer in his corps. But one night, after a big battle, he was missing, and some of the men went out to look for him with lanterns. They found him lying dead across his drum, with the sticks still fast in his hands. He lies just over the wall there," and the old man pointed toward the graveyard.

"And there was Larry Owen. He was the color sergeant—carried the flag, you know—and when they were charging up a hill and a bullet cut the flagstaff in two, Larry caught the colors and carried them on half way up the slope. As he fell he passed the flag to his chum, Joe Woodman, and then Joe carried it. He fell just as his regiment took the hill.

"Of course, not all the boys were killed A great many of them came back, but some of them were crippled, and all of them had lost four of the best years of their life. They found it hard to catch up with those who stayed at home; so most of them have been poor, and have had to work hard since. But they have never been sorry; they did what was right, and no one is ever sorry who does that.

"I think the only thing that could make them sorry would be the feeling that we had forgotten them, or had never understood what they did and why they did it. They felt sure that we would always remember, and especially that the boys who came after them would learn from them the lesson of how to do the hard thing if it is the right thing.

"That is why I always come over here on Memorial Day. It may not do any good to those boys that lie over there in the grass under the trees, but it does me good. I go over there, and say to myself, 'Johnnie Cramer, we have come again because we have not forgotten; here's something to show that we still keep you in mind.' 'Larry Owen, the country remembers, and sends these flowers.' 'Joe, you fought a good fight, and your name shall not fade.' "

The old man got up slowly, and said, "It will not be long till afternoon, and then you can have your game."

But Roddy had got up, too, the sour look gone from his face, and something of eagerness and of shame glowing there instead.

"I won't play!" he cried. "I don't want any game! Give me some of those flowers and let me go with you!"—Edward W. Frentz, in The Youth's Companion.

—Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, became seriously ill with an attack of pneumonia while attending Christian Endeavor conventions in Korea, according to a message just received from Mrs. Clark. Before he had fully recovered from a previous illness, he undertook the long journey to Hanchow, China, to attend the All-China Christian Endeavor Convention. He was able to attend but one session of the convention when new complications developed. Dr. and Mrs. Clark had planned to leave Hanchow for home April 22, but the revolution against Yuan Shi Kai broke out and all trains for Shanghai were discontinued They hoped to be able to get away in time to sail May 19 on the "Empress of Russia" for Vancouver, which would bring them to Boston early in June.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Davidson Ct.—We held our second quarterly meeting last Saturday. The business was transacted in the usual way. The nominess for delegate to Annual Conference are W. J. Morris and F. M. Cook The churches were all represented but one; that was Alleghany. The meeting was enouraging. Yours in the work,

J. W. Hulin.

Rockingham Charge.—Our meeting at Pee Dee began the 5th Sunday in April and continued until first Sunday night in May. Rev. D. A. Braswell and Rev. D. L. Surratt did the preaching. The preaching services were good. All seemed to enjoy the meeting. Bro. Braswell preached exceedingly well through the entire meeting. Mrs. Braswell and their little grandchild attended the meeting. Several of Bro. Braswell's relatives are living at Rockingham. Mrs. Surratt and my father stayed until Friday morn. We were glad to have them with us. The pastor tried to make them all welcome. We want them to come again.

The meeting resulted in seven accessions to the church. The church is in a better spiritual condition. May God give us victory over sin. Rev. D. A. Braswell and my father are true Methodist Protestants.

No. present at Pee Dee Sunday school, 119. We are planning to have children's day service sometime in June.

Burlington.—Our failure to report last week was due to negect on the part of the reporter and evidenced no inactivity in our church. We had splendid attendance at both Sunday school and preaching services Sunday, May 21st. At the morning service the following persons were received into the church on profesion of faith: Mrs. Cora Lee Isley, Mrs. Clara Hunley, Mr. C. P. Paul, Miss Verla Garner, Mrs. Nannie Wells and Mr. L. R. Pickard.

Last Sunday was observed as "Philathea Day" in the Sunday school and morning preaching service. The church was beautifully decorated with red roses. A program of interest provided by the Sr. Philathea class was rendered, which consisted of special music and an address by Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., a minister of the Christian Church. Dr. Long is an aged minister, and told some interesting historical facts concerning the first Sunday school in Alamance county. He said that the Methodist Protestant Church was due the credit for the first Sunday school in Alamance county. He interested the children with some catechism of the Bible. The exercises were continued into the preaching service. Bro. Pritchard preached a special sermon to the Philatheas, using as a subject, "Ruth, the Ideal Woman." He spoke of the splendid character and life of Ruth, and insisted that the Philatheas strive to possess such a character and live such a godly life. At the close of the service the following persons were received into church membership by letter, coming from Mt. Pleasant M. P. Church: Bro. Z. V. Coble, Mrs. Z. V. Coble, three sons, Will, Jennings, and Worth, and two daughters, Misses Bertha and Bernice, and Bro. Arthur Amick. With the reception of these there have been 48 persons united with the church since the close of our revival We are indeed glad to have all these persons join with us and thus share in the great work of extending and building up the Kingdom in this community.

We were glad to have as visitors in the Sunday school and church services Sunday Misses Panthea Harrison and Emma Lewis Vinson of Brinkleyville (Halifax Circuit), who spent a few days the guests of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard. They attended the closing exercises of the State Normal College at Greensboro and stopped over on their return home to visit their former pastor and his good wife.

Next Sunday we will have the regular communion service, it being the first Sunday. We hope to have a good attendance.

Mt. Zion, Buncombe Ct.—Another one of our faithful members has passed from labor to rest. Mrs. Martha Eller Roberts, daughter of Mr. Joe and Mrs. Susan Eller, was born Jan. 20, 1859, and died April 24, 1916. March 17, 1881, she became the wife of Mr. D. W. Roberts, and they moved to his home on Ivy and lived there for some years. Then he bought property at Jupiter and moved there where they enjoyed the pleasures of life together till the Lord said, It is enough, come up higher. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter; Mr. Charles Roberts, Mr. Kenneth Roberts, and Miss Ada Roberts, to mourn the loss of a mother. She also leaves a step-mother, Mrs. HarrietEller, who was very dear to her; two brothers and a sister: Mr. Albert Eller, Mr. Lush Eller, and Miss Kate Eller; and many other relatives survive her.

At the age of 13 years she made a profession of faith in Christ, was baptized by Rev. T. J. Ogburn and joined the M. P. Church at Mt. Zion, where her membership remained. She was always found faithful and ready to do her part, always at church and S. S. when able to get there. She delighted in seeing her church prosper.

She always went to see the sick in her community and did whatever her hand found to do that would relieve or help them in any way. When any one was sick they always expected her to see them. But as she is gone, everybody will miss her. I had a letter from an aunt of mine in California. She says: "I even miss her here." She had not been well for two years or more, but kept trying to go till about a month before her death. The amount of pain she bore no one will ever be able to tell, but she seemed to bear it with patience. She said during her sickness that she had no fears or dreads, that Jesus would go with her all the way. Dr. W. F. Robinson, of Mars Hill, was her regular doctor. Dr. Purejoy of Asheville was called to examine her, but all doctors and loved ones both could do was not enough to keep her here when the Lord called. Such as this is only enough to make us try more and strive harder to get to see our dear ones in that beautiful home above. Rev. C. W. Bates conducted the funeral services, after which her body was laid to rest in the Mt. Zion Cemetery.

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep
From which none ever wakes to weep

Last Sunday was our regular eleven o'clock service at Mt. Zion. Our pastor, Rev. T. E. Martin, gave us one more of his good warm sermons; everybody seemed to enjoy it. We had a large congregation. Our Sunday school is the largest it has been for years and we all enjoy the Sunday school.

Our second quarterly conference was held at Democrat May 13th. Every one present seemed to enjoy it. Rev. John Moton who has preached for 34 years said it was the largest quarterly conference he had ever attended. He preached at eleven Saturday and Sunday. We certainly did enjoy both sermons. It was so good to have Mr. Moton with us one more time.

Vonnie Roberts

St. Paul Circuit.—Our special meeting began at Liberty on Monday night after the first Sunday in May. Closed on the night of Wednesday after the second Sunday. The revival spirit in the meeting was very good. There were eight conversions, eight accessions. Rev. D. A. Braswell was our help. His great earnestness, his preaching, his general knowledge of the Scriptures, deeply impressed the people of Liberty. His work in the homes he visits is impressive and will be long remembered.

G. F. Millaway.

May [illegible], 1916

Creswell.—Our second quarterly conference met at Woodley's Chapel May 6th. We had a pleasant session. Bro. H. H. Bateman was given license to exhort. He is superintendent of our Sunday school at Woodley's Chapel and a very useful man in the church. He and Bro. W. E. Blount of Rehoboth were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference. The Creswell High School closed May 26th, and the pastor feels more freedom after teaching nine months. Dr. W. E. Swain preached our commencement sermon on May 21st. It was a very fine sermon and we appreciated his coming, but regret very much the automobile accident as he was going back to Plymouth to spend the night with his sister. He has our sympathy.

We have not definitely arranged the plan of meetings but will do so as soon as possible. J. H. Abernethy.

May 29th.

Oak Ridge Church.—On the 2nd Sunday night Bro. Holmes treated us with an excellent sermon. It was especially to the young people and every one was very much enthused. He left a great impression on the Oak Ridge people.

Yesterday Bro. Gerringer filled his regular appoinoment. We are always glad to get to hear his sermons—they get better all the time.

We have been working hard on the orphanage debt this past week. Many of the members paid their part and others will as soon as possible. We hope to pay all we are due at once.

The Ladies' Aid Society has certainly been at work to raise money for our church debt and are having great success with their ice-cream suppers, etc.

Our S. S. is the best it has been in years and we are working to keep these members so new ones will come.

Best wishes to all the readers.

Spring Church Circuit

Spring Church.—The fifth Sunday in April Bro. Hethcox preached for the children. We older ones enjoyed the service and gained equally as much from it. One of the children's classes in Sunday school is supporting a little blind girl in order that she may stay in school. They are doing very nicely with it, I think. It is good for us to keep in mind while we work, "God loveth a cheerful giver." We had one young man to join the church on that day. We hope he may prove faithful.

On the second Sunday in May Bro. Hethcox preached to us from St. Luke 12:2: "For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; neither hid that shall not be known." So many of our lives are in secret to our fellow-man. But there is One who knows us in secret as well as openly. He is our dear Heavenly Father.

Last Sunday Bro. Hethcox preached to us one of the best sermons. Sunday school is coming on nicely now; the report for May was not as good as we had a little previous. But we are hoping and praying that it will progress during the summer months.

Our prayer meetings are still going on and help us so much. Our last meeting was called a reconsecration service. We had many to reconsecrate themselves to God and express themselves as wanting to do more and more for Christ. The service helped us all; there were some who didn't get up and tell of their reconsecration, but yet felt it in their hearts.

There will be Children's Day Service at Spring Church on the fourth Sunday in July.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

MARRIED.

On Thursday, May the 25th at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. J. A. Kennett, of Concord, N. C., and Miss Pattie McAdams were united in marriage, in the parlor of the State Normal college, in Greensboro The editor of THE POSTAL CARD officiated at the marriage. The newly married couple are spending their honey moon at Black Mountain, N. C., and after the 15th of June will be at home in Concord. Mrs. Kennett is an Orange county woman, greatly beloved by all who know her. For a number of years she has held a responsible position in the State Normal college. She is a member of Hebron church. Mr. Kennett is a former Guilford county man; but for a number of years has lived in Concord, N C., where he is in the cotton brokerage business. Their many friends will wish them much happiness.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The memorial service at Hebron, the 3d Sunday in May, was largely attended. There was a short talk by the pastor at 11 o'clock, after which we went to the cemetery where a short service was held and the graves were decorated with beautiful flowers. This idea of remembering our sainted dead annually is a very beautiful one and we commend it to others. The service was a very impressive one. In the afternoon there was preaching by the pastor.

Thomasville—

We have been greatly blessed during the past week in our revival service. The church has been strengthened and many souls saved. Forty-four gave their names to Bro. Pritchette and some others were converted who did not give him their names. Bro Stubbins came and spent the week preaching and working. He gave us some fine sermons, and it was such a pleasure to have him in our homes. Mrs. Stubbins came down on Friday evening and entered into the work. She impresses one as being "at home" in any church where there is work to do. We appreciated her, too; only wish she had come earlier.

Sunday morning they had to return to their appointments, also Bro. Pritchette had promised to preach for Bro. Dixon in his church at High Point, so we didn't have preaching Sunday morning, but had a fine sermon at the evening service, when our meeting closed.

Every evening a "Christian Workers' Conference" was held in the Philathea class room before service (except Saturday evening), to plan and pray for the service and for individuals whom we were especially interested in, which was helpful. We are only sorry that more of the Christians did not attend the workers' conference.

The Junior choir furnished the singing for the afternoon services and did well, too. Miss Alta Pickett of High Point was with us one afternoon and rendered a beautiful solo, which we enjoyed.

The Ladies' Aid will meet Thursday at the home of Mrs. D. R. Loflin. We must get busier if we are to get our parsonage ready for a bride soon. We have repapered the sitting room and are planning to do some other things for our minister's comfort.

Bro. Pritchette and his troop of boy Scouts are planning to leave Wednesday for High Rock on a few days' camping trip. The boys are so anxious to start in their adventures. Am sure they will enjoy every hour of the trip, and Bro. P. expects a rest, but—? Well, it will be a change for him any way. We wish them good luck; he is doing fine work with our boys and they appreciate his interest in them. We parents do, too.

—Ten states in the United States have abolished the death penalty; they are: Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, North Dakota Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Tennessee; with a total population of 16,000,000 people.

"LISTEN! DENTON HIGH SCHOOL IS COMING!"

Our commencement was May 20th-23d. We had good exercises. The graduating class exercise was Saturday night and was attended by a large crowd. Rev. J. D. Williams, of Winston Salem, preached the annual sermon. He preached an excellent sermon. Bro. Williams added $30.31 to our church funds of which $10 was given by the Ladies' Aid of Winston, and the remainder by the church. We want to thank them for this donation.

Monday night was the exercise by the intermediate grades and Tuesday was commencement day. In the morning was the societies' contest, and in the afternoon Dr. G. T. Rowe, of High Point, delivered the address. This certainly was good. Tuesday night a play was given of which the proceeds went to the school.

We have had a good school throughout the year, and we hope each succeeding year will be better. The largest class that has ever graduated from this school graduated this year, and if nothing prevents there will be a still larger class next year. There will be seven next year, five girls and two boys.

Let every minister, or layman of the M P. Church canvass during the summer months for students to Denton High School We mean by canvassing that every pastor in Conference knows of Denton High School, so every pastor could kindly let their people know, and then write to Bro Reynolds for information. Please encourage anyone that speaks of going to high school to come to Denton. It is our school —why not help support it? This is what we meant by "Denton High School is Coming."

Our Sunday school is good now, but of course we will miss many from our classes now as school is out. Rev. H. F. Surratt preached for us Sunday night as Bro. Reynolds was unable. We enjoyed his sermon very much. Nannie Hill, Reporter.

Chestnut Ridge.—Our Home-Coming is having special attention at this writing and we hope all former pastors and members can be with us second Sunday in June.

A memorial service will be observed in the cemetery at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. R. K. Pender was received in membership today. Our S. S. is progressing nicely for a country school; 125 present. Mr. C. H. Jones, our superintendent, is doing good work. Mr. Johnson Sykes, who had the misfortune to lose his dwelling by fire, is now living in the parsonage.

Hill Bros., Denton, being thoughtful of our needs sent us two bushels Irish potatoes and a case of corn.

Mr. J. H. Harrison, Jr., a promising young layman on the Halifax Ct., having visited our Children's Home, has become so much interested that he has assumed the obligation of clothing one of our little boys for at least one year.

The trip to the General Conference was a pleasant one. It was a pleasure to note the interest that some of our brethren in other conferences are showing in our work. We will receive more substantial aid from other conferences next year than we have in the past, because they have learned more of what we are doing. Those of other conferences who have visited the Home spoke in the very highest terms of what the people in the North Carolina Conference are doing for fatherless children. Let us go forward. H. A. THE LECTURE NEEDED.

On May 23, at night, Rev. R. L. Gay lectured here at King on prohibition., and I write this article hastily in order to urge that all who may have an opportunity will hear the good preacher lecture.

One of the great things that he will tell you is that the way to have prohibition right is to make it nation-wide. I hope that numbers of those who may hear Bro. Gay will report. It is no venture to say that hundreds who hear the lecture will say that it was and is the best on the line that they ever heard.

A thing that should be urged is that much lecturing is needed. Most people do some reading, and most of us hear preaching as a regular thing—but men who are well able should travel over the State and lecture to the people. Hearing lecturing is as taking the food fresh and warm out of the pot, and I again urge that all who can will secure the man as recommended above and hear for yourselves, and if so you will be more than glad of this humble report.

AN ANECDOTE OF PRESIDENT WILSON.

Frederick Davenport tells in the Outlook an anecdote of President Wilson when he first came to Wesleyan university, in Middletown, Conn., as professor of Political Economy. Mr. Davenport was a member of the first class he met. As the new professor called the alphabetical list of the class, he came to Mr. Noe and he pronounced it Mr. No—one syllable. "That is not the way I pronounce it, sir," said the young man. "It is No-e, two syllables." Down the line the professor came to Roe "Mr. Ro-e," he called. "No, sir," said the young man: "my name is pronounced Ro." And so the class had a jolly laugh at the blushing future President of the United States.

A WISE STATEMENT OF JOHN R. MOTT.

At a Laymen's Convention lately held John R. Mott made this striking and truthful observation: "An alarming weakness among Christians is that we are producing Christian activities faster than we are producing Christian experience and Christian faith; that the discipline of our souls, and the deepening of our acquaintance with God are not proving sufficiently thorough to enable us to meet the unprecedented expansion of opportunity and responsibility of our generation."

—Rev. Dr. Rocket (that is not his real name) was absent from his pulpit on Sunday. An accommodating brother was secured for a supply. Returning on Monday, he chanced to meet Mrs. Fobbs, and asked her how she enjoyed the sermon yesterday

"Well, sir, to tell you the truth," said Mrs. Fobbs, "it was too plain and simple to suit me. I like those sermons best as jumble up the judgment and confound the senses. Oh, doctor, there's no one who comes up to you for them."—Bishop Berry in Zion's Herald.

—Twelve leaders of the late rebellion in Ireland have been tried by court martial and shot.

—Rev. Josiah Strong, president of the American Institute of Social Service, died recently in New York. He was a Congregational minister, also an author and editor. Some years ago he published "Our Country," a book which attracted much attention.

—Bro. I. W. Barber returned with his children and house-keeper to his home in Mt. Airy after a week's rest in Virginia visiting relatives of Mrs. Barber.

ADENOIDS INJURIOUS TO HEALTH.

So injurious are the presence of adenoids in growing children considered by the State Board of Health that it has prepared for free distribution a bulletin on "Adenoids, What They Are and How to Treat Them." The bulletin says that about 10 per cent. of all children have adenoids to some extent and while they may decrease and possibly disappear by the fourteenth year that during their existence they may cause deafness, impair efficiency, or mar health, stature and character for life.

Adenoids, acording to the bulletin, are smtll swellings or little tumors that grow in the throat just above and back of the opening of the nose into the mouth. Not until they become diseased and enlarge, thereby filling up the throat cavity, which cuts off the air supply to the ears and prevents breathing through the nose, do they become injurious.

Removal is the remedy suggested in the bulletin for adenoids. By the time they are suspected they are doing harm and should be removed by surgical operation. The bulletin especially stresses the need of all intelligent parents recognizing this disease in their children and giving it the attention its seriousness demands.

TUBERCULOSIS PATIENT SPEAKS.

"Teach the public in every available way to preserve health as a means of preventing tuberculosis for it is of first importance," writes Miss Sibyl Morris Teague, who herself has been a victim of tuberculosis for three years. "Teach them that only the trained and practised ear can detect incipient tuberculosis, and then ask the medical schools to furnish the ears properly equipped."

Miss Teague makes of her case a general type and says: "As I look back over the years and think of all it has meant to me to have tuberculosis, I wonder what would have prevented it. It seems to me had I been taught at home and at school the relation of fresh air and proper nourishment to health; had I been taught in plain words how to avoid tuberculosis by keeping my "resistance" up to normal; had I been made a "fresh air child," I believe tuberculosis need never have claimed me as a victim.

"Suppose when I had "walking typhoid fever" it had been properly diagnosed and known as incipient tuberculosis (which it really was) and I had been told how to live and how to care for myself, is there not good reason to believe I would have escaped the desperate fight I have had? Granted that this was several years ago, but what of the thousands of cases today that are being diagnosed as malaria, stomach trouble, liver trouble, and what not?

"I refer, of course, to the far-too-frequently found general practitioner, and the occasional so-called lung specialist, whose failure to correctly diagnose tuberculosis has long been a weariness to the flesh—and worse. I wish I might tell you the stories that have been told to me by victims of this very incompetence. Since I am one of the victims, I think I have the right to feel strongly about it."—State Board of Health.

CARE OF THE BABY AFTER THE SECOND YEAR.

(Prepared by the Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor.)

When the baby reaches the third year he should be fed four times a day at regular intervals, having the heaviest meal in the middle of the day.

It is of the utmost importance to teach him to chew his food carefully and thus to take plenty of time at his meals. But since his tiny teeth can only partly masticate his food, this should be properly prepared for him. Meat should be cut into small pieces, vegetables either mashed or put through the colander, and all the cores, skins and seeds should be removed from fruits.

He should not be allowed to drink while eating solid food, lest he fall into the habit of washing down his food before it is thoroughly chewed, as do so many of his elders.

The following foods are recommended for children from two to three years; and a daily program is suggested for the convenience of the mothers:

7:30 A. M.: Cereal—well-cooked oat, wheat or corn preparation, with thin cream or milk and very little sugar. Cereals should be boiled three hours in a double boiler, and flavored with a little salt when being cooked. Glass of whole milk, warmed in the cool months of the year. Egg, soft boiled, poached or coddled. Toast, or dry bread and butter.

10:00 A. M.: Fruit—use one orange and strain the juice,—or a baked apple, and two graham crackers; or warm milk, one glass, with dry bread or toast.

2:00 P. M.: Vegetable soup—one teacupful,—or, meat broths with rice or arrowroot. Meat—beef, mutton, or chicken, broiled, roasted, or boiled; or, fish, cut into small pieces, flavored with a little salt. Use no peper, sauces or condiments. Potato—baked, mashed with a little salt, butter and milk, or salt and cream; or, boiled rice or spaghetti, both thoroughly cooked; with butter or cream. Green vegetables—either carrots, asparagus, string beans, peas, spinach, young beets, or squash, each cooked until very soft, with a little salt in the water; strained through a colander or mashed. Dessert—Apple tapioca pudding, or baked apple, or apple sauce or stewed prunes, or plain custard, or junket. Drink—water. No milk at this meal. Stale bread—with butter.

6:00 P. M.: Bread and milk; or cereal—farina, arrowroot, or wheat,—or milk; or milk toast; or dry toast or bread with glass of milk. Raw fruit juice and milk should not be given at the same meal.

Do not give a child of this age any of the following foods: Pork in any form or salted meats or salted fish; cabbage, onions, celery, radishes, lettuce, cucumbers or raw tomatoes; hot breads, or griddle cakes; sweet cakes, pastry, or jellies; nuts or candies; bananas, nor any green or overripe fruit; tea, coffee, wine, beer, cider or soda water. Mothers are apt to err chiefly in the matter of sweets in feeding children. An excess of sweet food, not only upsets the young stomach but destroys partially the appetite for plain food.

Children should be taught to eat simple well-cooked food, but should not be forced to eat when they have no appetite. If a child shows a disinclination to eat some special food, which he ought to have, this should be given first at the meal, even if only a small quantity is eaten. Do not fall into the error of scolding the child at meal times, which should be one of the pleasantest hours of the day, full of fun and joy. A little judicious coaxing will usually result in the child's taking the right food in sufficient quantity.

Methods of preparing meats, vegetables and soups for young children are given in Infant Care, a little book, which is sent free to all who ask for it, addressing the request to the Chief of the Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, Washington, D. C.

STARTING A BALKY HORSE.

Of all vices that equine flesh is heir to, the most annoying to the average horse owner and driver is balking, or near balking, which consists in rearing or plunging when first asked to start, particularly after a few days' rest, or what is still worse, trying to start with a jump when only half hitched. The main reason that I think it is so aggravating is that so few know how to combat it. A balky horse has the most sense, the confirmed runaway the least, of any horse.

I have bought more balky horses than those with any other vice for that reason. Once they are broken of balking, they make the best of horses, not afraid of the objects that usually scare those of other temperaments.

The little simple trick I am going to describe and that has proved so satisfactory in so many cases is not intended to break the horse of balking, which in most cases involves a lot of time, patience, and more or less thorough knowledge of horse nature, but rather to help those who have been caught, perhaps with a new horse that started away from home all right but has now balked, because the conditions under which he has balked before have again presented themselves.

The average driver, when caught in this way, starts in by petting and coaxing the horse and winds up by losing his temper and beating it until stopped by passers-by or some policeman.

A horse has only one idea in his head at a time, and in this case he has decided not to go any further with that particular load, and the coaxing and patting are not sufficient to cause him to think of anything else. The whipping only makes him more stubborn and determined not to move. Now we have got to find something that will give him something else to think about.

All horses, and mules more so than horses, hate to have their ears hampered. In fact no horse ever decides upon a different course of action without first moving its ears from the normal position, and here is the key to the whole idea. As soon as it balks get down from the seat and deliberately take one ear and push it under the crown piece of the bridle so that it is fast and leave the horse to its own devices for a few minutes. He will commence shaking his head and doing everything he can think of to get that ear loose, until he has forgotten all about balking and his whole thoughts are centered upon freeing that ear. Now let the driver get back on the wagon, call on the horse to start, and off he goes. I have proved this trick to be successful with cow-horses that thought it necessary to buck and pitch when first mounted in the morning, and with rearers in the saddle and horses hard to hitch. Leave the ear where it is for about twenty minutes, then stop and free it. Let the horse have time to shake his head and be satisfied that everything is all right again, and off he will go as pleasantly as possible.

As I said before, this trick will not break a horse from balking, but it will invariably start one that has balked on the road, provided he hasn't already been whipped and abused to a point where nothing matters.—Alfred H. Pope in Our Dumb Animals.

IN MEMORIAM.

Price.—Mr. J. T. Price was born in Rockingham Co., N. C., December 24th 1866, and died in St. Leo Hospital, Greensboro, N. C., April 18th, 1916. On October the 14th, 1914, he was united in marriage to Miss Goldia Simpson with whom he lived happily for the brief period of life which remained unto him and who cared for him very faithfully and tenderly during his illness. Mr. Price was merchant, mill man and farmer. At the time of his death he owned a roller mill near his home, a number of farms and a store. For some 30 years or more he engaged in the mercantile business at Geneva, Rockingham Co., and part of the time he had branch stores at Stokesdale and Summerfield. He was not only a good business man; but he also took a deep interest in civic matters. He read much, and was well acquainted with the history of the past, and kept well posted in regard to the conditions and issues of the day. He represented his county in the legislature during the session 1903. He was also a good church man and from boyhood had held membership in Flat Rock Methodist Protestant church. He loved his church and could be always counted upon to contribute to the interest of the church. He was ever a friend to the pastor and was not slow or negligent in expressing his appreciation of his pastor's labors, both as minister and pastor. Until some two years before his death he had been apparently a strong man physically. There were three of the Price brothers, all of them strong men and yet in the space of a few years all of them have gone hence, J. T. being the last to go. Mr. Price's body was laid to rest by the side of his mother and his brother in Flat Rock cemetery. I regret that I could not be present and preach his funeral, especially as he had requested that I should do so and as I had preached the funerals of his mother and brother. During a number of conversations with Mr. Price covering much of the time of his last sickness he expressed himself as being prepared to go and yet as anxious to stay. I believe that he was ready for the great change and that he has found sweet rest and perfect health in that far country. For seventeen years I was his pastor and he was my friend. I shall expect to meet and greet him over on the other shore. He will be greatly missed at Flat Rock and by a host of friends scattered all over Rockingham Co. and parts of Guilford. Peace be to his ashes. W. F. Kennett.

Mebane, N. C.

Sharp.—Lettie Sharp was born on the 13th day of May, 1882. She died May 15th, 1916. She was thirty-four years and two days old. She was married to Connie Sharp August 17, 1905. To this union two children were born. Both survive her. She accepted Christ at the age of 16, and became a member of Belmont, Methodist Protestant Church, to which she was faithful till removed by death. She bore her sickness with patience, and passed into the most immediate presence of God with a smile on her face. She was a true Christian, a faithful wife and a good mother. What greater work could she have done? Certainly she has not failed to get the crown.

Her remains were laid to rest in Belmont cemetery on May the 16th at one o'clock. Funeral services conducted by the writer. J. A. Burgess.

Loy.—On the third Sunday of May, 1916, at Mt. Hermon, the little two-months-old child of Bro. Richard Loy and wife was laid to rest. We are sorry for these parents, and trust that the Lord will make good to them their loss in his own way. We are glad to think that heaven is made up of those who are as pure as little children.

CITIZENSHIP SUNDAY, JULY 2

Appointed by the U. S. Department of Labor.

Realizing that the churches could aid materially in forwarding the good citizenship movement, the Bureau of Naturalization has approached, in a most earnest manner, the churches of all denominations all over the country, in an endeavor to have at least one Sunday in each year set aside as Citizenship Sunday, on which will be preached at the morning service, in every church in the country, a sermon on Citizenship. The response to this feature of the Bureau's activities has reached its highest expectations. On every hand the highest praise has been given these efforts. Many pastors, while stating that their churches were slow to adopt "Special Sundays," have assured the Bureau that favorable consideration would be given to Citizenship Sunday. Sunday, July 2, of this year, has been selected as Citizenship Sunday, because it is the Sunday nearest Independence Day, which means so much to American citizens.

Richard K. Campbell,
Commissioner of Naturalization.

ABOUT COLDS.

Dr. W. A. Evans, the famous health man of Chicago, gives the latest approved methods of avoiding the most common infection, the common cold. To these are added suggestions for home treatment of colds in case you fail to follow the doctor's advice about avoiding the disease.

Colds are catching mostly from others, therefore avoid people who have colds. Avoid people who have recently had pneumonia (within two years). Avoid crowds. Avoid hot places. Avoid badly ventilated places.

Colds can be caught from one's self, therefore—

Keep the mouth, nose, and tonsils clean. Avoid gorging with food or drink. Avoid alcoholics.

The germ is a factor, but the human body is also, therefore—

Avoid getting overwarm or overcold in the entire body or any part thereof.

Colds cannot be caught when resistance is high, therefore—

Build up heat-making powers by sleeping out, taking cold baths and eating moderately. Exercise daily in the open air.

If you have contracted a cold, do not spit carelessly. Do not sneeze or cough carelessly. Destroy all nose and mouth secretions.

If the attack is accompanied by aches and fever, avoid pneumonia by going to bed, decreasing eating, and by taking a purge. Take medical counsel. — State Board of Health.

—Doctor C. O. H. Laughinghouse advocates two ways for preventing what is commonly termed hardening of the arteries: first, a rational plan of daily living, and second, a physical examination twice a year. He says men must be taught that they are entirely dependent upon their circulatory system, that they are as old as their arteries and that moderation in all things must be the rule. Besides habitual personal hygiene, proper diet, exercise and sufficient sleep and rest, the writer makes a plea for frequent mental changes. He further advises every business man to go twice a year to his physician to know whether this and other diseases have set in, that he may check them in their curable stage and prolong the most useful period of his life.—State Board of Health.

—Bladen County is to hold on June 24, at Elizabethtown, the first county health commencement ever held in the State and probably the first ever held in the country. This occasion is to be the culmination of the three months' health campaign that has been conducted in that county by that energetic health worker, Dr. T. M. Jordan, against pellagra and preventable diseases. The nature of this celebration is to be a combination of a picnic and a county school commencement. Everybody in the country is expected to be there. There will be addresses by prominent men of the community, essays and speeches by the young people and a basket dinner for all.—N. C. State Board of Health.

—Bascom Baynes, of our church here, and newly elected superintendent of our Sunday school, was last week operated on for appendicitis at St. Leo's Hospital. He is reported as recovering nicely.

—Prof. James Holmes, son of President Holmes, was recently operated on in a Richmond hospital for appendicitis. He is reported as almost well now.

—Rev. Robert Troxler is preaching at St. Paul Church in a series of meetings now in progress.

—The latest report shows that in the month of April, 1916, Southern cotton mills consumed 298,186 bales, an increase over last year of 21,268 bales, or 7.68 per cent., while mills in all other states consumed only 276,918 bales, a decrease of 3,561 bales, or 1.5 per cent., as compared with last year. For the nine months ended April 30, consumption in Southern mills increased 17.42 per cent. over last year, while in all other states the increase was only 15.06 per cent.

PLAYING THE GAME.

The following article is taken from a letter from a missionary in charge of a girls' school in Baroda, India, and printed in the Woman's Missionary Friend. It shows how the war game is catching even the girls in India:

"The most absorbing game just at present is one which the girls have named the 'War game.' Every morning, while out for a walk, they see the soldiers drilling on the parade ground, which is just opposite the school. This may account for the game. They have divided themselves into five divisions; the largest girls represent the English army, the next in size the Russians, the next the Germans, next the French, and the very smallest are the Gurkhas. They seem to have the idea that the business of a king is to sit on the battlefield and watch the progress of the battle, because all the kings are there—or rather, the English king and the German kaiser are seated in a prominent place on the battle field and the king of the Gurkhas comes to join them riding on the back of an elephant—a clever contrivance of the girls. The different armies march before the kings from different directions, making very low salaams, sing their national anthem, and then do their drill. The drill is, I may say, a rather ludicrous imitation of the drill that the girls see the soldiers perform daily. They join their two hands together and snap their fingers in imitation of the shooting of the guns. After the drill is finished they go to battle, and that is a regular football scrimmage, after which the Red Cross nurses appear on the scene, and by the magic of their touch the soldiers are brought to life again. Then they sort themselves out into companies according to the former arrangement, do some more drilling and at last form in one large body, repeat the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians and close with the Lord's Prayer."

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

At the corner of the street just under my hill in Seoul, Korea, lives Cheung. He is a thatch vender, which occupation has rendered him two benefits: one, money to buy drink with; and the other, rest and refreshment. Cheung was no common drinker, with only a red nose and bleared eye to show for it; not he. He was known to his world in general and Seoul in particular as a man who could terrify the onlooking multitudes by the awful manner of his spree. A hard voice he had, a willowy kind of body, too, loosely hung together, that could swing to and fro, double up and right itself, and yet never lose its footing. These exercises were preliminary to a regular periodical outbreak in the middle of the street. He accosted every man that went by. If no reply was forthcoming, he would swing off after the passer with ugly menacings. For a demon of uproar, nothing surely ever surpassed Cheung. The police, like the Levite, went by on the other side, and the street periodically yielded itself up and lay prone while Cheung had his innings. Suddenly a day came when it ceased. Cheung was gone. Some one looking a bit like him, but refined and purified, was seen going by with quiet and softened step to a neighboring meeting house. He carried a New Testament and was seen by the same wondering world with his face to the floor praying to God. Month followed month and the old spirit of confusion was evidently dead. How did it come about? A little daughter of his was sent to the mission school. She learned her lessons and her young heart drank deep of the teaching. She learned to pray and read and to tell others of what she had found that was wonderful. How she approached that wild father of hers, what she said, how her child faith grappled with his untamed soul, with what soft influences she wooed him away from his world of wild lawlessness and landed him safe in a region of eternal calm, I know not. She is but a plain, low-class girl, with poor ancestry and a homely face, but the spirit of the Eternal is in her. "And a little child shall lead them."—Selected.

THE WIDENING SOVEREIGNTY OF CHRIST.

One of the most inspiring evidences of the widening sovereignty of Christ is that he has passed over the control of the territory of the world to the Christian nations. According to Gulick's "Growth of the Kingdom of God," in 1600 only seven per cent. of the territory of the world was controlled by Christian nations, but to-day eighty-two per cent. So the growth of Christian control has passed in three hundred years from seven per cent. to eighty-two per cent., while the control of non-Christian nations has decreased from ninety-three per cent. to eighteen per cent.—W. E. Doughty, in The Call of the World.

THE PARADOX OF PEACE.

OPENING SERMON OF GENERAL CONFERENCE.

BY PRESIDENT ELDERDICE, OF WESTMINSTER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

Colossians III: 15. "And let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts."

In the New Testament Peace has many meanings. Sometimes it signifies the blessed state of the righteous in heaven when crowned with "glory, honor and peace." Sometimes it describes the condition of a country free from war: "by thee, most noble Felix, we enjoy much peace"; or, the state of the church free from persecution: "so the church throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria had peace." Sometimes it pictures the harmony between the members of a brotherhood, the concord among persons of the same common faith: "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Sometimes it means merely a farewell blessing pronounced upon departing guests—the old Hebrew way of saying "Good-bye"—and was so used by the Philippian jailer in dismissing Paul and Silas: "depart and go in peace." And sometimes it is descriptive of a general characteristic of the Messianic Kingdom, as in the Prophecy of Zacharias; "the Dayspring from on high shall visit us—to guide our feet into the way of peace"; and as in the song of the Angels on the night of His nativity: "on earth peace."

But the peace of the text is other and more than these: it is peculiar to Christian experience. It is the soul serenity of him, who, "being justified by faith, has peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ"; the mental calm of him who awaits the Second Coming of our Lord with diligence, that he may "be found of Him in peace"; and the spiritual quiet of him who can read his title clear to the last legacy of the Master to His disciples: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you."

My Subject is: The Paradox of Peace. A paradox is that which sounds absurd or seems contradictory and yet is true. The peace of Christ is a paradox in its Time, its Power, and its Price.

In the earthly life of our Lord there was much to awake wonder. The more enraged the mob the more composed His mind; the keener His grief the more subdued His heart; and the fiercer His fight the more restful His spirit. Though He was "a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief", we would hardly expect that when His soul should pass into its crucial strain and stress he could rest in the profoundest peace of all His experience, and yet this is what occurred at His Last Supper. He saw upon the table the treacherous hand of His betrayer and He was "troubled in spirit"; in a few moments He would enter the shadows of Gethsemane, where, in the presence of the favored Three, His "soul would be exceeding sorrowful"; a little later He would retire alone into the deeper gloom of the Garden to agonize in that prayer which would cost sweat like blood; and, in only a few hours, He would be shrouded in the blackest cloud that ever draped the earth—blotting out the light of the noonday sun and hiding even the Father's face. And yet this was the hour when He talked most about His peace, revealed most of His peace, and promised to give His peace to the hot-headed, quick-tongued Peter, to the two fiery "sons of thunder", and to all His own in the ages to come from the restless, revengeful Saul of Tarsus down to the latest rebel who has surrendered his arms at the foot of the Cross.

As with Christ so with Christians. When they have most trouble they are least troubled: when most distressed they are most at rest: when their cares multiply their peace deepens: the more they lose of things temporal the more they gain of things eternal: and the more their plans go awry the more they adjust themselves to God's plan—and then comes calm as when the needle finds the pole. Paul was serenest when Nero's hate was hottest; Luther was at his best when the Diet of Worms was at its worst; Bunyan's Allegory was written in Bedford Jail; John Knox was bravest when Queen Mary raged wildest; Wesley was calmest when most provoked by bishop, king, and mob; Fanny Crosby was blind when she composed the hymns that wing our souls to the gate of heaven; the most eloquent advocate of peace on the American platform is most the master of his assembly when most it clamors for war; and the most militant of modern evangelists is most at home when hell turns loose upon him the Personal Liberty League.

In The Desterted Village Goldsmith tells us of the good parson whose heart and hand were given to his flock but "all his serious thoughts had rest in heaven."

"As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form, Swells from the vale and midway leaves
the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

"In the world ye shall have tribulation." "In me—Peace." This is the paradox of Peace and Trouble at the same time.

THE SECOND PARADOX OF PEACE IS ITS POWER.

In Paul's conception it's that of a Ruler: "Let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts." This is contrary to our common notion of peace; for we regard it not as an active but as a passive virtue, associated not with the ruler but with the ruled, not with the scepter of a king but with the chains of a captive. It is easy to understand how peace may sit as a sentinel at the door of the mind to drive away evil and anxious thoughts; or to stand at the flood-gates of the heart as a breakwater against the billows of grief; or to abide a welcome guest in the chambers of the soul, soothing into silence the jangling voices of vain ambition and wooing into rest our wild, unbridled passions. But to name peace a ruler strikes a discordant note, and the harmony is broken by the war-trumpet, the roar of cannon, and the din of battle. We can conceive of any one of the Three Christian Graces playing the role of ruler: for Faith can "subdue mountains"; "Hope springs eternal in the human breast", and is "an anchor of the soul" holding "sure and steadfast" against the storms of time and fastening its flukes into the harbor of eternity; and Love will find or force its way to any goal on land or sea, for "Love is strong as death": but how can gentle Peace rule?

The Greek verb "to rule" sometimes described the actions of the Umpire of the Olympic Games—presiding over gymnastic contests, preserving order among athletes and spectators, and declaring the winner by placing upon his brow the olive wreath. So the peace of Christ may be the Christian's Umpire in the race of Life—laying out the track, pointing to the goal, and awarding the crown. At other times the word was used to designate the work of a Judge—rendering verdicts in legal disputes, war claims, and other controversies on Civil law. So the peace of Christ may be enthroned in the Christian's heart to arbitrate all quarrels with his brethren and thus preserve the concord of the church. But there was another usage of the verb—"to direct", "to control", to rule constantly in any realm of action. This conception goes beyond the spectacular act of an Umpire on the field of sport before an assembled multitude, beyond the occasional act of a Judge upon the bench in the presence of client and counsel, and describes the work of a permanent power resident in the redeemed heart, inspiring every thought, giving utterance to every word, and shaping every deed.

And this was the kind of peace in our Lord. It was not the transient calm that precedes the storm, nor the momentary stillness of the waves between the ebb and flow of the tide, but that perpetual peace of the sea which prevails down deep below the surging surface. Through the routine of His human experience and in the face of every emergency from the Wilderness to Calvary it reigned supreme—the master of every plan, purpose, and passion. It gave Him mental poise when Satan would seduce Him with plausible Scriptural arguments, when cunning lawyers would entangle Him in the meshes of legal technicalities, when Pharisees would silence him in a dilemma, and when His enthusiastic converts would crown Him king on Caesar's throne; and it held Him firm in spiritual balance when persecuted by Jewish church, when arraigned before the tribunal of Roman state, when forsaken by His chosen preachers, and when "forced to tread the wine press alone".

How did He obtain and retain peace as a Ruling Power? By obedience to the Father's will. "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me." By adjusting all His plans to harmonize with the one great plan of God in His life, trial and trouble, pain and persecution were turned into stepping-stones to higher achievements, and even death was welcome as the gateway to His highest goal: for when the Cross loomed up before Him and the Greeks offered a way of escape, the crucial test brought Him to His knees in human weakness: "now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father save Me from this hour." But peace was still reigning supreme in the throne chamber of His soul and bade Him re-call His prayer for deliverance, and immediately He faced the king of terrors with heroic submission: "For this cause came I unto this hour."

And this same peace, given by Him to His disciples, becomes in them a ruling power. Its dominion is over the mind—inspiring holy and banishing unholy thoughts; over the heart—purifying its passions and sanctifying its affections; over the spirit—curbing its selfish ambitions and speeding its highest aspirations; over the will—subduing its rebellion and leading it a willing captive to the plan of God; and over the hand—directing the toil of the field and the shop, the trade of the market, and all activities of church and state.

All Christians are more or less under the sway of this gentle scepter. Would God it were more! We have all enjoyed momentarily experiences of complete surrender to this unseen ruler and well we remember that all the chords of our soul were tuned to the music of the spheres. Would God they lasted longer! But they come often enough and last long enough to convince us of the blessed reality of an indwelling peace which is not of this world and which we know is that peace which the Master promised to His disciples.

And the Third Paradox of Peace is its Price.

It seems a contradiction of terms but the price of peace is War. Jesus promised it as a gift but it is not bestowed until won, and it can be won only by victory over doubt and sin. "I came not to send peace but a sword. Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell ye Nay: but rather division: for from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. The father shall be divided against the son and the son against the father; and the mother against the daughter and the daughter against the mother." This does not mean that He was an advocate of war: for His reference was not to the purpose but to the inevitable result of His coming. He simply served due notice that it would cost a victorious fight to enlist as a soldier of the Cross and that after enlistment it summoned to a life-long war. But was it not long foretold that He would come as "the Prince of Peace?" When He came did He not preach "to all that are afar off?" and did He not promise to give peace to His own? Yes, but not in a miraculous moment, like manna falling between the setting and the rising sun, nor like Jonah's gourd full-grown in a single night, but it would come as a crown of glory after a well-won war.

Peace through warfare is the law for the Individual. The struggle against self must be triumphant before the soul can rest in the peace of surrender to Christ; and the battle against "the world, the flesh, and the devil" must be victorious before the singing of the convert's Cradle Hymn:

"My God is reconciled,
His pard'ning voice I hear;
He owns me for His child,
I can no longer fear."

Peace through warfare is the law for the Church. The jealousy of the Jewish Sanhedrin, the arenas and catacombs of pagan Rome, the false philosophies of cultured Greece, the fanaticism of Mohammedanism, the curse of human slavery, commercialized vice, and blatant infidelity, the organized liquor traffic, the love of pleasure and the greed of gain, and the indifference of the masses to the appeals of the Gospel, are proofs abundant that the church of the past has been and the church of the present still is the Church Militant: and, unless all world-wide signs fail, the future will find her fighting and winning many more battles before on earth she can be crowned the Church Triumphant. Even within her own borders she must struggle to batter down "the middle wall of partition" which still separates the many households of Christian faith; she must remember that if denominationalism be exalted above the Kingdom it becomes a demon and must be exorcised; and she must sound the bugle loud and clear for a united army against the myriad hosts of hell. There never was a day in her history when it was more timely to chant the dirge:

"With scornful wonder
Men see her sore oppressed,
By schisms rent asunder,
By heresies distressed."

And yet in sipte of the sneer—"a collapsed Christianity" and "a paralyzed church", thank God! there never was a day when her faithful warriors were so eager to mobilize their forces, buckle on their armor and rush forth with the battle-cry:

"The Son of God goes forth to war,
A kingly crown to gain;
His blood-red banner streams afar:
Who follows in His train?"

And would we Methodist Protestants follow in that train? Then we must make the fight of our lives to get together. We must storm and demolish every barrier that separates us; dynamite Mason and Dixon's Line until there shall be no North, no South: blast the Alleghany Mountains so low that there shall be no East, no

West; and bury the records of our quarrels over Church Union so deep that Gabriel's trumpet shall fail to wake them to haunt again our memory: then and not till then shall we be able to keep pace with our sister denominations in meeting the demands of our day, and then and not till then shall we be prepared to do the work of our own denominational consolidation and construction—or die. God grant that this General Conference may usher in the dawn of that peaceful day when it may be truly said of our scattered and alienated Tribes: "Ephraim no longer envies Judah, and Judah no longer vexes Ephraim.'

And peace through warfare is also the law for the Nation. During the military period of the Old Testament there was no such policy as "Peace-at-any-price." It was always "Righteousness-at-any-cost." And we well know at what awful cost of men and substance the Children of Israel entered into their inheritance. We are reminded of the ancient record that "in the days of Gideon the country was in quietness forty years." Why? Because after Gideon had reared his altar in Ophrah and inscribed thereon: "God send peace"—he himself saw to it that peace came "by the sword of the Lord and of Gideon." And we are reminded of another ancient record that Menahem gave a thousand talents of silver to the king of Assyria that "his hand might be with him"—that is, he would bribe him to keep him in safety on his usurped throne. Which inspires Ruskin to remark: "You either win your peace or buy it—win it by resistance to evil or buy it by compromise with evil."

Any nation that seeks peace by subterfuge, by deceptive diplomacy, by stifling the conscience, or by cowardly compromise will learn sooner or later that abiding peace can be found only by the triumph of right over wrong, and unless willing to pay that price it will simply cry "Peace, Peace, when there is no peace." But did not Jesus teach: "Resist not the evil one?" Yes, but He was dealing with petty, personal revenge, "not condemning a fight for principle." He Himself knew how to use a scourge as the symbol of divine wrath in the presence of the money-changers in the Temple. He never cowered before the rulers of church or state but stood His ground, and fought His fight even unto death. When He taught that we are to love God with all our heart, and with all our soul, and with all our mind, He laid down a rule obedience to which implies that with the same spiritual and mental powers we are to hate evil. A recent writer has expressed this view in these timely words: "No man can be a Christian unless he be a good hater—not of men but of things that ruin men. That means that he must be a good fighter; otherwise he will be an impotent coward who dodges every issue. To be a follower of the Galilean is not to be a craven but a man. Cowardice is not Christian humility. Ethical well-being is the first consideration no matter how much pain may be necessary to obtain it. This includes war. It is God's scourge applied to a sinful world. For evil men there must be police. And for evil nations there must be armies and navies. Are we Christians when we fight? We may not be Christians unless we do. It all depends upon circumstances."

This is not a plea for Militarism but a recognition of the fact of history that until nations obey God war is inevitable. Whatever may be the combined causes of the present war in Europe it is a repudiation of the teaching of Christ. It is a conflict between the Gentile and the Galilean standards of Greatness. The one claims that the greatest nation is the one that serves all the others. And until "the kingdoms of this world" accept His standard they cannot "become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ."

Where then is Peace? The Text replies: "In your hearts." We find it where we cannot see it. We look for it upon the thrones of kings and find a proclamation of war; in the council chambers of diplomacy and find "only a scrap of paper"; in the Carnegie Peace Palace in the Hague and discover that it is deserted; we assemble in Constance with representatives from every church and nation to draw up a doctrine for International Peace and before the meeting is called to order Europe lets loose her "dogs of war"; and now we are circulating petitions to Neutral Nations to organize an International League to Enforce Peace! Well and good so far as it goes. But we must remember that "the Kingdom of God cometh not by observation. Neither shall they say: Lo, here, or Lo, there! for, behold, the Kingdom of God is within you."

The challenge of this, the most momentous war of human history, is not so much for world-wide reformation as it is for world-wide regeneration; and the greatest battle-field is not Verdun but the human heart. Social and national salvation begins with the individual. "Acquaint now thyself with God and be at peace." But it does not end with the individual; he passes it to his comrade, until the social unit is pacified and expresses its peace in social customs, civil laws, and international treaties until war becomes a horrible nightmare of the past.

This is the story they tell us of the Christ of the Andes. On the Andean boundary line between Chile and Argentina stands the most significant monument ever reared to peace. But has only stood there for a dozen years. Prior to its erection the two South American Republics had been for years on the brink of war over that boundary line. The contest involved the ownership of 80,000 square miles. The British Ministers tendered their good offices to prevent the threatened war. Then two good bishops, the one from Chile and the other from Argentina, decided to substitute for a proclamation of war a statue of the Prince of Peace. From village to village they went with their peaceful plea until women went wild with poy, strong men followed in their train, legislators fell into line, the King of England was summoned to adjust the disputed territory, armies were disbanded, naval appropriations were turned into good roads, arsenals were converted into schools of manual training, war vessels became commercial fleets, a trans-Andean railway joined the two capitals for trade and travel, and Chilians and Argentines fell in love with one another. At last "the fulness of the time" came—March 13, 1904. On the summit of the lofty Andes, on the center of the boundary line, so long "the bone of contention", the Argentines stood on the soil of Chile and the Chilians stood on the soil of Argentine; then the cannons boomed, the bands played, and music like unto that of the Bethlehem Choir arose while there was unveiled a granite statue upon whose peak towers a figure of the Christ, a cross in His left hand, and His right hand outstretched in blessing, and on the granite base a brazen tablet with this inscription: "Sooner shall mountains crumble into dust than Argentines and Chilians break the peace to which they have pledged themselves at the feet of Christ the Redeemer."

There it stands as a proof of what can be done by Christian nations. And there it stands as a prophecy of what will be done upon every national boundary line when the last ruler on earth shall have accepted the ruling peace of the Last Supper.

And now, brethren, while we celebrate that Last Supper around this table, "Be perfected; be comforted; be of the same mind; live in peace; and the God of love and peace be with you."

Uncle George—Come here, Willie! Don't you know who I am?

Willie—You bet I do! You are ma's brother who stayed her two months one time and never offered to pay a cent for board. Oh, yes; I've heard pa speak of you often.—Indianapolis News.

—Death is busy in the land. The world may last a great while yet, but individual men and women are passing swiftly on!

THE CAUSE OF THE WAR.

The real cause of the present awful war is the Roman Catholic religion and church.

The Roman Catholic religion and church are always political and always encroaching.

All the world knows that the open and on-the-surface cause of the war was the assassination of the Austrian Grand Duke by Servians.

But why did Servians do this? Not till this "why" is known, can the real cause of the war be known. And that is what is here to be told.

It is this: Servians killed the Grand Duke of Austria because by his particular agency the Roman Catholic church and religion were being made the established church and religion of the Servian State.

Austria is the one only remaining power that is devoted to the papacy. And the late Grand Duke who was presently to take the throne was almost fanatically Roman Catholic. An English paper expresses it as "Priest-bound Austria with its Grand Duke the most bigoted Romanist outside the Vatican."

When the Roman religion was to be made the State religion of Servia, this stirred up Russia: because the Russian or Greek Catholic religion has always been the religion of the Servians. Ninety-eight of every hundred of the population are of this religion; and one-half of the remainder are of the Moslem religion.

And when the process of forcing the Roman religion upon Servia was to result in war which certainly would accomplish it, then Russia entered the war.

When Russia entered upon war against Austria, then, because of alliance with Austria, Germany entered it.

When Germany entered the war with Russia, then, because of alliance with Russia, France entered it: and then because of understanding with France, Britain entered it.

An when Britain entered the war, then, because of alliance with Britain, Japan entered it.

That is the cause of the war as it has come about. And the whole train of events has its spring in the invasion of Servia by the Roman church. For nothing less than an invasion it certainly was, when less than one in a hundred of the people were of the Roman religion.

June 24, 1914, there was entered into, a "concordat" between the Roman church and Servia.

A concordat is "an agreement made between the Pope and a sovereign or government for the regulation of ecclesiastical matters with which both are concerned."

This transaction and the document are of signal importance: not only as the cause of the fearful war, but also because of what it means in many ways beyond all that.

It is the latest open and definite manifestation of what the Roman church always and essentially is. It reveals exactly what is meant by Rome in her proclaimed purpose to "make America Catholic" and "do for the United States what she has done for other nations."

The document is too long to print in full in these columns; but its vital provisions will be stated.

The Concordat.

By Article 1 "The Catholic, Apostolic, Roman Religion shall be freely and publicly exercised in the Realm of Servia": which means that no other religion shall be freely exercised there.

By the othe articles, the territory of Servia as it was before the war of 1913, is made "an Ecclesiastical Province" as "the Archdiocese of Belgrade, with its seat in the capital of the Realm."

The new territory secured to Servia in the settlement after the war of 1913, is made "the suffragan Diocese of Uskub" with its seat in the city of Uskub.

These two officials "depend for ecclesiastical affairs directly and exclusively from the Holy See" of Rome.

Each of these is to be paid by the Servian government "an annual allowance": that of the Archbishop to be $2316., "plus an indemnity"—security, insurance—of $772., "with the right to a pension at least equal to that of the employes of the State."

"The official title of the Archbishop of Belgrade and of the Bishop of Uskub shall be 'Most Illustrious and Most Reverend Monsignor." And "Monsignor" means "My lord."

These two officials are to "have full liberty to exercise all the rights and prerogatives of their pastoral ministry, following the discipline approved by the church."

To them "belongs the right, in their respective dioceses, of creating parishes, in accord with the Royal Government." But "to them alone belongs the right of nominating the parish priests."

"The religious instruction of Catholic youth in all the schools is subject to the Archbishop and the Bishop in their respective dioceses."

"In the State Schools this instruction shall be given by catechism teachers who shall be nominated by the Bishop and the Minister of Public Instruction and Worship." The State shall pay the catechism teachers in the State Schools: and "The office of parish priest is not incompatible with that of the catechism teacher." This means of course that the State shall pay the priest.

"In the capital or in its environs there shall be instituted a seminary to which the State shall furnish an equitable annual endowment, in order to form young Servians suitable for the Catholic priesthood." But "the respective ecclesiastical authority is charged with the care of organizing and directing" this State-established and endowed seminary, "according to the canonical dispositions."

"The Royal Government recognizes the validity of marriages between Catholics, and of mixed marriages contracted in the presence of the parish priest, according to the laws of the church": and "matrimonial causes" in all these cases "shall be judged by the Catholic tribunals: except as far as concerns purely civil effects:" and "the Catholic party shall have the right to establish that the children from these mixed marriages shall be brought up in the Catholic religion."

A Judicial Personality.

"The State recognizes that the church, represented by its legitimate authorities and by its hierarchical orders, has a true and proper judicial personality, and enjoys the capacity of exercising the rights which belong to it."

The Church as a corporate body and a judicial personality "has the right to acquire legally, to possess, and administer freely, property, real and personal, for the ends proper to the church and its institution in the Realm." But the property thus acquired and held by the church, is "inviolable as the private property of the citizens of the State."

"The edifices destined for divine worship, the seminaries, and the houses of the Bishops and parish priests, shall be exempt from taxes: and can never be destined or employed for another use."

"Should any difficulty arise about the interpretation of the present articles or about questions which may happen not to be contemplated in them, the Holy See and the Royal Government shall proceed by common accord to an amicable solution, in harmony with the canon law."

"The present Convention shall enter into force immediately after its ratification by His Holiness the Sovereign Pontiff and by His Majesty the King of Servia."

And "the ratification shall be exchanged in Rome with the least possible delay."

The Sum of It.

It will readily be perceived that in every practical provision of that document, the real substance lies wholly on the side of the church. It simply sets up in Servia the Roman church as a superior entity and an exclusive power, of which the State is to be but the ready servant and support.

The thing was put through "with the least possible delay." And with equal rapidity mighty events followed.

It was signed in Rome June 24 by the papal Secretary of State and anambassador of Servia.

Four days later, June 28, occurred the murder of the Austrian Grand Duke.

In just a month after that, July 28, war was declared against Servia.

And in three days less than a month after that, August 25, the war had spread from Servia to the Atlantic and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and has constantly intensified.

And the Roman church is still making gain of it all. She is still the secret but grand center of the whole drama. And this she will remain; for her tentacles are everywhere, and she is ever essentially the same.

Her position and influence in connection with the war have been of such importance as to cause Britain to reverse its course of four hundred years and send an ambassador to the papacy; to cause Holland, once the truest to Protestant principles, also to establish a Legation and Ministry at the Vatican; and also Japan and even Turkey to come to her.

Thus it is the literal truth that the court of the papacy is the chiefest center of the war.

And all this only serves to whet her appetite; for confusion is her capital, and nations' extremity her opportunity.—Religious Liberty.

MILITARISM OR PACIFISM: WHICH WILL WIN?

The militarist is one who believes that his nation should go on making preparation to settle disputes with other nations by the old methods of arms and force.

The pacifist is one who believes that his nation, while supplying reasonable armament for policing land and sea, should be making preparation to settle disputes with other nations by the new methods of judicial procedure, leagues of nations, world courts, and councils of conciliation.

The militarist looks to the past and trusts to the old methods.

The pacifist looks to the future and trusts to the new.

The militarist, as a general thing, quotes the Old Testament. (Note how little the New Testament has been quoted in Europe since the war broke out, also note how little the militarists quote it in America except to make fun of Jesus' teachings as did one of their leaders not long ago.)

The Pacifist uses the New Testament almost exclusively, and finds basis for his gospel, that nations should live by the same principles as those by which decent individuals live, in almost every word of Christ.

There has been an age-long strife between militarism and pacifism since the first great Pacifist, Jesus, enunciated his gospel of good-will among men; the forgiveness of the enemy; love the test of perfection; the saving of the enemy a higher victory than killing him; mission the doctrine of life rather than rights. This, which is the creed of the pacifist, fell into a world where militarism only was triumphant. Curiously enough it made a good many converts, even in the midst of that world, saturated with militarism, and with no law but force. The early Christians would not bear arms. (Practically everyone of the church fathers record this fact.) But militarism soon got control of the Church, and it has controlled it, as a whole ever since. Here has been its great apostasy, and not in the realm of theology.

But there have always been enough prophetic men in the Church to keep pacifism alive. Erasmus spent his life studying the New Testament, and he was driven to the conclusion that the settlement of disputes between nations by war was contrary to the whole word of Christ. He said it was "the methid of cats." Grotius studied the gospels and became convinced that they were opposed to war and he, the first great constructive pacifist, suggested a world court. Emanuel Kant, the first pacifist among philosophers, wrote his great Christian tract "Eternal Peace," in which he insisted that courts must supplant war, federations of nations supplant selfish individualism, treaties supplant guns, democracy supplant dynasties.

Ever since the days of Erasmus each generation has had a witness for the Christian doctrine of justice and good-will as the law of international relationships. There is not time to mention them here, except those of our own land. For the strife between militarism, i.e., the doctrine of armament, and pacifism, that is the doctrine of judicial methods, conciliation and good-will, has suddenly reached an acute stage in our own land. Early in our history pacifism, the Christian method, had its noble advocates. They did not represent the church as a whole, for, until within the last twenty-five years the Church in America has stood for militarism as it has in Germany and Great Britain. But they represented the Christian teaching and the doctrine of the early church on this point. They are a noble list. To mention only the dead, and only a few of them, there were Ladd, Burritt, Sumner, Whittier, Garrison, Channing, Dodge, Worcester, Cuyler, Justice Brewer, Edward Everett Hale, Brooks, Robert Treat Paine, Josiah Strong and Smiley. The living number many more. They have made a brave fight and have gradually seen their efforts bear fruit, and have won many converts to their cause. They played a large part in bringing the nations together in Hague conferences; they have secured wide international organization; they were largely responsible for the securing of arbitration treaties, and they have successfully resisted all attempts to militarize the nation.

Then came the European war with all its horrors. The acts of some of the belligerent nations and the disposition manifested induced a semi-hysterical state in large bodies of the people which the militarists were quick to put to advantage. They entered upon a campaign for vast armament with all the energies and means at their disposal. All kinds of defense leagues were organized and the word "preparedness" chosen as a slogan. The leaders are the same men who have been behind the movement for the last ten years. They have become alert to the opportunity. As one of them remarked: "If we don't put our program through now we never can." They have carried many sincere people with them, but one who has studied the movement for years, knows that it is the same group who ten years ago were trying to force upon Congress just the same program they are urging now—four battleships a year, a standing army of 500,000 men, payment of the State militia and National Guard, military training in the public schools.* The only thing they have added is the demand they are making now for universal training.

Up to this time the pacifist movement has been able to progress with little opposition. The only opposition came from men like Mr. Roosevelt and the militarist group, who, with him, opposed the passing of the Taft arbitration treaties wherein the United States agreed to settle disputes with Great Britain and with France by arbitration. But the war had not long been in progress before the contagion of militarism, fanned and whipped up by the leaders of the militarist movement, who saw their chance, seized upon certain classes of our people. And now the fight is on between the militarists in our country and the pacifists in dead earnest.

The pacifist element is no smaller nor weaker. Indeed, it is much larger and sronger than ever. It is doubtful if there were ever one one-hundredth as many people in this country who hated war and all preparation for it as there are now. It is simply that those who believe in the old way of war as over against the new way of judicial processes have been urged into action. Vast sums have been spent, popular catchwords, such as patriotism, nationalism, and Americanism, have been played upon (note the word "humanity" is never used by the leaders of the militarist movement), and misrepresentations of the pacifist movement far and wide. Any man who today dares utter a word in favor of even a constructive peace program is immediately held up before the people by the preparedness leaders as unpatriotic, un-American and as lacking in heroism and courage.

The fight is on, and less and less is there any middle ground. Everybody can see that during the last few months the men who are leading the preparedness movement, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Maxim, Colonel Thompson, Mr. Menkin, Mr. Putnam, Mr. Gardner and the others are dropping the word anti-preparedness, and using the simple term "peace people" or pacifists" when they refer to those who do not favor the United States following their old and European ideals. It is also noticeable, on the other hand, how the press is referring to them, not as preparedness people, but as "militarists." Thus the editorial in the New York Times of Friday, May 12, begins thus, "The military parade which is scheduled for tomorrow." It is patent to the most casual reader that the other great dailies are more and more using the word military in place of the word preparedness. Thus the country is rapidly falling into two groups, those who on the one hand advocate military preparedness, the old, European, Napoleonic, Prussian ideal; and those who advocate judicial preparedness, the new, Christian, twentieth century ideal.

Which will win? We believe the new will win, because we believe that the ultimate victories are always with the forward looking men, not with the backward. It may seem, for a moment, that the old is winning. But it must be remembered that the "preparedness" movement is the most highly engineered movement of modern times. It has back of it the military forces, several salaried men, some of the best press agents, and large sums of money. Its promoters rest not night nor day. They go from one city to another organizing meetings and parades. The peace advocates have neither money nor organization. It must also be remembered that every step toward preparedness means millions of dollars for munition manufacturers, battleship builders, makers of guns wherewith to arm our new soldiers, clothing trades—many more. But in spite of all the immediate money gain—the greatest appeal to most men—we believe the idealists, the pacifists, those who wish to see America the moral leader of the world, the protagonists of the new order, will win, because they are the forward looking men, and because the ideal always triumphs in the end.

There are some encouraging signs right now. When the Union against Militarism saw President Wilson three weeks ago, Miss Wald asked him if there was not an attempt being made to stampede this nation into militarism. He seemingly took it for granted that there was, and answered: "But it is not working." In spite of everything it is not working. Congress is, evidently, going to be satisfied with an army of 200,000—a mere fraction of what the militarists want. All the "preparedness" organizations and their newspapers are frantic over it. Mr. Henry A. Wise Wood, one of the chief leaders of the militarist group, said on May 15, "the Army bill is only a makeshift and is wholly inadequate," and in May 18 came out with a long declaration for Colonel Roisevelt for President, as "the only hope of the nation," that is, the only hope for universal conscription and the Germanizing of the people. The editorials of the New York Times and the New York Tribune admit that the movement for the great army is lost and are now turning toward a big navy. Mr. Roosevelt said, under date of April 26: "Twenty-one months have passed since the great war began, and during all this time we have not prepared in even the smallest degree in order, if possible, to avert war from us."

But indications just now are that the five-year naval program is lost even before it is introduced. There may be more battleships ordered for this year than last, we do not know, at this writing, but we do know from direct information that there is no enthusiasm in the House Naval Committee over the program of the militarists, as advocated by the Navy League, and the various defense organizations.

The Ford votes are interesting. They are no joke. They have opened the eyes of both Republicans and Democrats. They will influence the planks of both parties. There is very imminent probability of a third party being launched with Mr. Ford as candidate if both Republican and Democratic Conventions come out with a platform crying for war, preparedness and militarism. The militarist movement is largely local and largely Tory. It is a local and caste movement. The workers, the farmers, the industrial classes take no interest in it. Neither is the Great West much concerned over it. C. M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," writing from Omaha, says the sentiment is strongly the other way, and calls attention to the resolutions passed at the great mass meetings in that section. The votes for Mr. Ford are protests against it.

But, by far, the most encouraging thing to those who are working for the substitution of good-will for war, judicial precesses for battleships, the new order for the medieval, is the frank confession made by Mr. Roosevelt in his last public utterance, his famous letter of April 24, in which he pledges all his family to go to war with Germany—one can get no other impression from reading the letter than that he longs for the chance—in which in an unguarded moment his indignation at those who are working for the new internationalism gets the better of his wisdom and he bursts out with this remarkable confession, "The pacifists and anti-preparedness people have had their will, and our rulers at Washington have bowed to them and left us helpless." This is high testimony coming from such source. It claims more than the peace people have even dared claim.

We must not let the even seeming victories of the militarists disturb us too much. They have wars and rumors of wars, hysteria and fears to help them. The war will close soon. Our people will then calmly review it and see that the cause of this misery was just this militarism "preparedness" groups are advocating. They will hear from Europe a call for a new order, for Europe is getting fearfully sick of just this thing the reactionary groups are advocating. Our people will see this and will turn from these reactionaries to follow the prophetic and forward looking men of both Europe and America in the endeavor for the new preparedness of World Courts, Leagues of Nations, Alliances of the Churches of the World for Good-will, Unions for Democratic Control, Councils of Conciliation, Hague Conferences—all of those things for which they are contending while the militarists are parading for the old things—the things that will pass away. "Old things are passed away: behold I make all things new."

One closing word: We received to-day a letter in which this line occurred: "Is it not discouraging to see a hundred ministers parading for guns and shrapnel as the basis of the civilization of their Prince of Peace. Can they be sincere? Do they endorse the utterances of the men and societies which got up that parade, such as an army of a million, all our boys taught to shoot, i.e., to kill their brothers of other lands, universal conscription, and the utterance of the Navy League's paper that the Government should take new territory by force as it needs it—the creed we have been condemning in Germany?" In answer let us say, we believe these men sincere, and we do not think that all of them would endorse the whole platforms of the militarist groups. It must be remembered that the ministry is no exception to other professions. There are always in it those who follow the crowd, who are easily stampeded, who are always looking backward, who lack the prophet's vision, who rest in the old and are distrustful of the new. It has been in every movement, from the anti-slavery movement down, that many ministers were on the side of the old and passing order. Some one remarked to us, the day after the one hundred ministers paraded in what the New York Times called "The military Parade": "The ministers were there, but not the ministers the young men of America are following, not the leaders in the new social gospel, not the leaders in the new internationalism that is rising on the world." We offer no comment, but it is significant that the ministers in the parade were just the ministers who did not come to Garden City to take part in the World Alliance Conference called to enlist the churches of this nation in an attempt to substitute good-will in international relationship for suspicions and jealousies, and to see what the churches would do to help the world find some better way than war for the settlement of international disputes. In this connection we would quote the following words from Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the famous Broadway Tabernacle, New York: "We are on the threshold of a new age. Some nation must lead. That nation ought to be the United States. If the United States is to lead, then Christian men must show the way. If Christian men are to show the way, then the Christian pulpit ought to sound the note of advance. It is useless to expect the whole world to advance with all the nations abreast. One nation must move ahead of the others. It is foolish to expect all branches of the Christian Church to advance shoulder to shoulder. One branch must be ahead of the other. It is unreasonble to expect all the ministers to agree. Some must go ahead of the others. There will be a difference among them now as there was in the days of slavery. The signatures of those for slavery and the signatures of those against slavery now furnish interesting reading. The ministers who to-day apologize for war, and who see no sure defense for a nation except in howitzers and dreadnoughts, and who think that America at the present crisis can do nothing better for the advancement of humanity than to increase the thickness of her armor, are as intelligent, and learned, and honest, and conscientious, and pious as the ministers who do not agree with them. Somebody must be mistaken. A high ecclesiastical position is no guarantee of spiritual insight. Every man must walk by the light he has, and it is not until generations have passed, that the world can see clearly which prophets were false and which were true, which leaders were foolish and which were wise. Every man must stand by the right as it is given him to see the right, and leave the result to God. In the fifties the Tabernacle had a pastor who always, with boldness, wrote his name down among the abolitionists, and in the year of our Lord 1916, the Tabernacle has a pastor who, with gladness, writes his name in the list of those who denounce war as stupid and cruel and wicked, and mistaken, who condemn armed peace as a policy that is mistaken, and mischievous and fatal, and who advise our government to wait until the war is ended, before committing itself more fully to the disastrous program which has overwhelmed Europe with ruin."

Neither must we fall into the habit of thinking New York City leads the nation. While the ministers of the New York churches were signing the letter endorsing the call to arms made in a speech before the New York Chamber of Commerce, the following really Christian resolutions were being passed by three great bodies of ministers on the Pacific Coast ("Westward the course of empire takes its way"), the California State Church Federation, the Los Angeles Ministerial Union, and Southern California Methodist Preachers' Meeting:

Whereas, There is in this world-war crisis a recrudescence of the spirit of militarism, whirh has attempted to drag the United States into the world war, or, failing in that, to stampede our lawmakers, under the guise of preparedness, into an elaborate plan of military enlargement, calling for not only an immediate expenditure of billions of money, but the inauguration of a plan involving us in endless further appropriations of money and necessitating compulsory military service of vast numbers of our men for such military duty; and,

Whereas, It is the duty of God-fearing men to increase in the world the stock of good-will, and to devise means by which the recurrence of the present world tragedy may be rendered impossible; and,

Whereas, The United States, because of its position and power and traditions, is under bonds to do what it can toward the shaping of the opinion of nations and the moulding of a new and nobler world policy;

Be it resolved, That we look with disfavor upon any plan to increase the army and navy at this time beyond what would be the regular accession to their strength by the application of the prevailing appropriations, which would seem entirely adequate, amounting to over $300,000,000 annually.

Be it further resolved, That we call upon all Christian citizens and upon our representatives in Congress to keep in mind that the Republic is the friend and brother of all contending nations, and that we wish to manifest to them the spirit of brotherhood in this trying hour of human history.

It is for every young minister to decide at once whether he will throw in his lot with the militarists who are looking backward and urging the old method of arming to settle international disputes or with the pacifists who are looking forward and urging the new and Christian method of conciliation, judicial processes, all mankind one's countrymen. There is no via media any longer. There is no more doubt to which side will come the victory in the future than there was to which side it would come in the year when Wilberforce, Whittier, Theodore Parker, and Garrison said slavery must end, and some ministers said "no; it is Scriptural."—Editorial in The Christian Work.

DR. ELDERDICE COMING TO SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Dr. Elderdice has graciously consented to take Dr. Feeman's place on the Summer Conference program. The subjects of his addresses will be The New Tune and the Old Book, Wayside Walks and Talks with Jesus, If Paul Were Pastor of My Parish.

Dr. Elderdice is anxious to see all young men expecting to enter the ministry this fall when he comes to our Summer Conference. We would suggest that all such young men attend the entire Conference, coming up Monday afternoon, June 26th.

R. M. Andrews, Pres.

THYMOL MADE FROM HORSEMINT.

War Cuts off Valuable Medicine. Need Can be Supplied at Home.

That thymol which is popularly known as hookworm medicine and which forms the basis of many important pharmaceutical compounds can be made from horsemint is the information given out in Bulletin 372 of the United States Department of Agriculture. Heretofore, this drug has been imported from Northern Europe where it is manufactured from ajowam weed, grown in Northern India, but since the European war has so greatly reduced its importation, there is need that this demand be supplied at home. This can be done, according to the Agricultural Department, from a weed known as horsemint. For several years this department has experimented with horsemint and it finds that under favorable conditions thymol can be produced from it for commercial purposes.

Horsemint is found wild on light, sandy soils from Southern New York to Florida, and it is probable that it will thrive under cultivation wherever it is found growing wild. It is quite frequent in North Carolina. By distilling the improved plants, an average of 20 pounds of oil an acre may be obtained from first year plantings and 30 pounds from the yield of succeeding years. The average price for thymol has been for a number of years about $2 a pound.—State Board of Health.

WHO WROTE THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS?

Dr. James W. Thirtle, an eminent British scholar, has revived the theory that Paul was the author of this epistle, and presents some new evidence in an article in the Sunday School Times of May 27. This adds to the probability of Paul's authorship for which we believe there is internal evidence. We quote from Dr. Thirtle's article:

"In very early times, the Epistle to the Hebrews followed that to the Galatians. This is obvious from an examination of the Greek manuscript known as Codex B (= Vaticanus), belonging to the fourth century. This famous manuscript exhibits "a marginal numeration which shows that the whole collection of Pauline Epistles was divided, either in its archetype or in some earlier copy, into a series of sections numbered consecutively. In this collection the Epistle to the Hebrews comes between the Epistle to the Galatians and the Ephesians." The quotation is from Bishop Westcott's standard work.

Beyond question this arrangement brings the Epistle to the Hebrews into intimate association with the writings of Paul; and it exhibits this association as obtaining in very early times. It will hardly be disputed that the "archetype or some earlier copy" represented by the numeration of sections displayed in the Vatican manuscript may take us into the Sub-Apostolic age, if not into the Apostolic age itself. Manifestly we are to gather from the fact stated that the Epistle to the Hebrews equally with that to the Galatians was attributed to Paul; and that the one followed the other, nothing between, in days anterior to discussions wherein the definitely Pauline authorship of either of the documents had been called in question.

"What, in reality, do we find? Just this—two epistles, or writings, in close succession, in a professedly Pauline section of the New Testament, are merely separated, or divided off, the one from the other, by the words Pros Hebraious—"To Hebrews." But it may be asked were these words, which come to us as a separating headline, in reality dividing? Why not sub-dividing—that is, simply designed to indicate that what followed was for Hebrew people in the churches of Galatia to which the preceding Epistle was addressed? This is a fair question to ask. Assuredly in the Epistle to the Galatians we read much of Hebrews and their tendencies under the designation of "Jews," "the circumcision," "seed of Abraham," etc. We shall proceed to find, in the same Epistle, features that will vindicate the claim now made that the Epistle to the Hebrews must rightly follow that to the Galatians as the avowed work of the Apostle Paul.

"As we glance at the two documents which for so long have been separated the one from the other, we see that, whereas the former opens in epistolary style, with the name of the writer and a formal greeting, the latter has no such features. Beyond question the words "Paul, an Apostle . . . unto the churches of Galatia," indicate the beginning of an Epistle; but is it not equally manifest that the clause "God, having of old time . . . spoken," with which the Epistle (we retain the common designation) to the Hebrews opens, is suited to continue or resume the argument of another document? Be that as it may, these two writings, as we have seen, are combined by the section-numbering which has been preserved to us in the margin of the Vatican Manuscript; and as the latter writing is without epistolary introduction, it calls for consideration in the light of associations which may reasonably be supposed to take us back to the earliest age of the Church.

"On grounds to be set forth briefly, the present contention is that the Epistle to the Hebrews is a virtual appendix to the Epistle to the Galatians. The latter is avowedly, indeed obviously, the work of St. Paul, a letter replete with instruction and warning to the Galatian believers, whether from the Jewish or Gentile sections of the community. On closer examination, however, we find a logical relation of the documents, which supports our inference drawn from the fact that they succeeded one another in the "archetype or some earlier copy" of Codex B. In other words, as we read the Epistle to the Galatians we find it to demand a pendant document, possibly written in another language. This appears from the fact that, as the Apostle nears the end of his Epistle to the Galatians, he converts it into a covering letter, and in a striking form of words directs the attention of his reader to an enclosure, which he had addressed to some of them. In the absence of the technical terms of modern usage, he could hardly have expressed himself more plainly. His words are: 'Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand' (Gal. 6:11). This 'large letter,' as we maintain, was the Epistle to the Hebrews, despatched along with the other and shorter document.

"The clause 'mine own hand,' seems to suggest something more than an autograph—in fact, to imply a writing in another language. There is reason to believe that, as a rule, the Epistles of St. Paul, which have come to us in Greek, were written by amanuenses—the custom in the East, both in ancient and modern times. In Romans 16:22, for example, we find that Tertius performed this helpful part: "I Tertius who wrote this Epistle salute you in the Lord." In the Epistle to the Hebrews, however, we have a writing which was not dictated, but written by "mine own hand." And could "a Hebrew of the Hebrews" address words of instruction to his beloved brethren according to the flesh, on themes that were peculiarly their own, in any language but Hebrew? Just here, ancient tradition comes to our help in regard to 'mine own hand.'

"On this point also the state of the case may be given in the words of Westcott. Writing with reference to the Epistle to the Hebrews, the Bishop says: 'The earliest direct notice of the Epistle, quoted by Eusebius (Ecclesiastical History vi. 14) from Clement of Alexanderia, states that it "was written (by Paul) to Hebrews in theHebrew language (i. e., the Aramaic dialect current in Palestine at the time, Acts 22:2) and translated (into Greek) by Luke." This statement was repeated from Eusebius (and Jerome, who depended on him), as it appears, and not from Clement himself, by a series of later writers, both in the East and West (Theodoret, Euthalius, John of Damascus, Oscumenius, Theophylact, Primasius, Rabanus Maurrus, Thomas Aquinas).'

"Though of no use to the prevalent criticism of the Epistle, the statements thus passed on by tradition yield strong support to the case which we now present; they seem, indeed, to represent a tradition based on historical fact. That, for generations past, expositors have not only excluded the Epistle from the Pauline group of writings, but also denied its Hebrew origin, is now easy to explain. Having long ago been separated from the Epistle which properly introduces it, and having, further, come to us in the form of a translation, the document lost its character of an enclosure. That is one important fact; but there is another. At the same time, and as the result of the separation referred to, the significant statement in the covering letter, "See how large a letter," etc., came under obscuration, and consequently has been misinterpreted and misapplied all down the centuries. In other words, the Epistle to the Hebrews, for long generations, has been discussed without the reflected light of its proper position in the New Testament collection.

"We have suggested that 'mine own hand' may mean 'my own handwriting'—that is, the Hebrew language. If the Epistle was so written by the apostle, then we have in our hands to-day a translation, and not the immediate writing. And why not? The same is held to have been the case with the Gospel according to Matthew. And, as we have noted, tradition has it that it was Luke who turned the Hebrew into Greek. With this may be recalled the judgment of many critics that the language shows a striking resemblance with that of the Third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. The point is important, because, among those who have maintained that the Epistle came from another pen, the Pauline character of the teaching has been readily admitted, from Origen downward. So be it: the teaching is Paul's; the style in Greek is not Paul's—a matter of quite secondary significance.

"If the Epistle was written in Hebrew, then, of course, the argument against a Pauline authorship, on the mere ground of Greek style, breaks down. When, further, it is contended that the original must have been Greek (and not Hebrew), because the quotations from the Old Testament are generally from the Greek Septuagint (and not from the original Hebrew), the answer is that the conclusion does not follow; the feature thus indicated is altogether consistent with a translation made by some one who saw reasons for following the general guidance of the Septuagint Version, but has not troubled to tell us why."

—Charles E. Hughes, Supreme Court Justice, was nominated for President of the United States by a large majority of the Republican National Convention in Chicago last week, on the third ballot. Mr. Hughes, while preferring to remain on the bench, at once tendered his resignation to President Wilson, and accepted the nomina tion. The Progressive Convention nominated Roosevelt, who replied that he could not accept at this time, and proposed that the matter of his candidacy be left with a committee to determine after Mr. Hughes has been heard from. We presume Mr. Hughes will be acceptable to most of the Progressives, and that there will be a virtual reunion of the dismembered parts of the Republican party. As Hughes' running mate, Charles W. Fairbanks was chosen, so it will be a race of the two Charlies against the candidates named by other parties.

—Dr. Elbert Reitzel, of Burlington, who has just completed his course in a medical college in Maryland, has accepted a position in a Wilmington hospital.

—Prof. Amick says the report that he is to teach in the Summer School of the University of Virginia this year was unauthorized and incorrect.

—Mrs. W. A. Bunch returned Wednesday afternoon from High Point, where she had been in the hospital for some time.—Asheboro Courier.

—After two years of suffering from dyspepsia and various other digestive disorders, William Richards, a Stockton, Pa., man, submitted to an x-ray examination to determine, if possible, the cause of the trouble. The examination revealed two silver forks and a teaspoon inside his stomach, the walls of which had grown thick and leathery from being much inflamed. It is thought that Richards swallowed the cutlery when in a delirious state.

—During the Civil war the only merchandise that was allowed to openly pass between the Union and Confederate lines were Bibles. The Christian Herald reports that more Bibles were printed in 1866 than in any year of the following two decades.

—While driving an auto a few days ago Leo Bales, of Terre Haute, Ind., accidentally struck and killed a 13-year-old boy. Overcome with grief, he took to his bed where he sank lower and lower until, in order to relieve the mental strain, City Judge Newton wrote him a letter exonerating him from all blame. Nothing availed, however, and shortly afterward he died, physicians say, of a broken heart. Witnesses of the accident aver that Bales was in no way to blame.

—North Carolina has fewer people infected with malaria than any other Southern state.

NOTICE.

Will all who ordered extra copies of the Conference Journal either bring the money for same to Summer Conference or send it direct to me as I want to settle with the Conference treasurer? J. E. Pritchard.

Burlington, N. C.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Pastors, are you planning to attend the Summer Conference? I hope you are. We sometimes hear some of our people talking about the future of the Methodist Protestant Church. What will the future of the M. P. Church be? It will be just what we, by God's grace, make it. And I am persuaded that those of us who never attend any of our conventions and conferences will have a very small part in making the M. P. Church what God wants it to be. Come on and let us have a good helpful time during the Summer Conference. You can't afford it? How can you afford to stay away? It will be a better conference if you are there, and you will be a better man if you are there.

How many charges are going to pay their pastor's expenses to the conference? I hope that along with this article there may appear the announcement that a great number of charges are planning to pay their pastor's expenses. It will certainly pay any charge to do this. It is a poor sort of man who will not come back to you better prepared to serve you for having attended this conference.

What about the picnic in connection with the Summer Conference and the Anniversary of the Home? I hope the trustees will see fit to have this. I think it will bring some people in touch with the Home who have not as yet manifested enough interest in the Home. There are people right near the Home who have not yet seen it, and to see it is to become interested. A picnic will bring many of these people to the Home.

Yours for the best Summer Conference yet. L. W. Gerringer.

WHY PAY EXPENSES OF PASTORS TO SUMMER CONFERENCE.

First, because some pastors cannot come unless their expenses are paid. Most all pastors pay their own way to Annual Conference and some feel that they cannot pay for both trips.

Second, the church that pays its pastor's expenses will be repaid by the new suggestions and the inspiration which pastors will take back with them. So it is a good investment for any church. Let the pastor get something new once in awhile and he will give something new.

Yours for a large attendance,

J. E. Pritchard.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Are you coming? If so when? This is important because it is two miles from the railroad station to the Children's Home. I note with pleasure that some of the charges are going to pay the expenses of their pastors. That is good, and I am sure others will do likewise. No pastor can afford to miss the Summer Conference. Just a postal card to Mr. H. A. Garrett or to the undersigned telling us when you will be here will insure you conveyance to the Home. You will write us if you expect conveyance, and if you do not write us then we will know that you are making your own plans to get there. Yours to serve,

A. G. Dixon.

High Point, June 10th, 1916.

A CARD FROM DR. TAGG.

"After twenty-five years of continuous service, Rev. F. T. Tagg voluntarily retires from the editorial management of The Methodist Protestant, July first, 1916. He sincerely appreciates the courtesies of the Religious Press that have been extended to him, and realizes a keen sense of loss in parting from the Editorial Fraternity."

And we shall miss the spirit of Dr. Tagg in the editorial fraternity. What he has stood for he has stood for strongly, and he has placed the emphasis where it belongs. May his good influence long abide among us.

—Mrs. J. E. Pritchard has gone to her father, who is very ill.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Davidson Circuit—

Lineberry Church.—June 4th, a service called Mothers' Day was very interesting; a large congregation, very attentive. Preaching by the pastor, Bro. Hulin—a very good and appropriate sermon. Music selected for the occasion was good. A collection for the Children's Home was taken. The congregation marched to the cemetery. All the graves were decorated with flowers. This closed the service. Brother Hulin is getting along well with the work. Sunday school fairly good. N. F. Morgan, Rep.

Denton—

In the report from Denton last week there was an error as to the amount contributed to our church building fund by our church in Winston. When Bro. Williams came down to preach our annual sermon he brought with him the following amounts, viz.:

Ladies Aid Society	$25.00
Church collection	10.31

making a total of $35.31. We are very sorry that such an error crept in but we hope this correction will be satisfactory. We certainly thank our Winston brethren and sisters for this kindly aid, also Bro. Williams for calling their attention to it. Later we hope to make announcements as to our building plans. At present we are getting along nicely with church and S. S. in the school auditorium. All moneys received so far have been placed at interest and will remain there until actual work begins.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

Fallston Circuit—

Friendship.—We had a memorial service at Friendship third Sunday in May; Sunday school met at the usual hour, at eleven o'clock our honorable pastor, Rev. J. H. Moton, gave us a very inspiring and uplifting sermon, as all would expect who know him. Every sermon he preaches is a good one and if any difference better than the one before. We need more such praying and working ministers. We feel there would much more good be brought about. After the sermon, all gathered to the cemetery, and while the choir sang some appropriate songs, every grave was decorated with beautiful flowers.

In the afternoon we had read the death roll for the last fifty years, then the opportunity was given for any one that wished to to speak about any loved one that was gone; a great many responded and this became a very interesting feature of the service.

Again fourth Sunday our pastor filled his appointment with a most encouraging sermon, after which the Lord's supper was observed.

Our Sunday school is very good. Our faithful superintendent, Uncle Noah Wright, is constantly busy planning and working for the best interests of the Sunday school. He is always ready for any good work and we hope all will give him their hearty co-operation. His form has lost the vigor of youth, but he is still active and alert in the service of his King. We often think of the glittering crown that awaits him, when his life's work is finished.

The protracted meeting will begin fifth Sunday in July; let us all pray that it may be a wonderful success.

Young people's prayer meeting is held at one of the churches in Fallston every Sunday night. We hope every one that can will attend and try to make these meetings as interesting as possible.

Burlington—

We had 258 in Sunday school last Sunday, an increase of 37 over the previous Sunday. Our school is regaining its former standing in the matter of attendance and interest. An effort will be made next Sunday morning to improve the punctuality of pupils by awarding "On Time" and "Late" buttons. Each member on time will be given a button showing that he was on time, while those that are late will be given a button signifying that they were late. We hope to encourage promptness and punctuality by this method.

The morning preaching service was well attended. Bro. Pritchard delivered a special sermon to the members of the Burlington Fire Dept., who attended the service in a body. The text was taken from Dan. 1:8, and his subject was, "The Man with the Purpose." It was a helpful sermon.

The C. E. Society held its regular meeting at 7 o'clock Sunday evening, with Mrs. J. E. Pritchard as leader. The usual program was dispensed with and reports were made by delegates to the C. E. Convention at Charlotte. Misses Lula Foster and Mittie Jeffries made splendid reports. A business meeting of the society was held on Monday night at the home of Miss Elsie Moser. The chief item of business transacted was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: Miss Elsie Moser, President; Arnold Wagoner, Vice President; Arthur Amick, Secretary; Miss Mary Brown, Assistant Secretary; W. A. Glenn, Treasurer; C. B. Way, Corresponding Secretary; Lonnie Braxton, Press Reporter.

The regular monthly business meeting of the church was held on Tuesday night, and the usual routine business was transacted.

We are expecting a big day next Sunday. It will be "Anniversary Day." We will celebrate the 24th anniversary of our church here. Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., of the Christian Church, will preach the anniversary sermon at 11 o'clock. There will be special exercises in the Sunday school. Capt. John Richard Stockard of near Graham, who has the distinction of being the only living member of the first Sunday school in North Carolina, will be the honor guest at the Sunday school and church service. He will probably make a talk to the Sunday school. We are hoping for a large attendance in Sunday school and preaching service. C. B. Way, Rep.

Henderson—

During the month of May our services were considerably interrupted, due to two things, viz.; the absence of the pastor and the warehouse meeting. Conditions are normal again and we are all glad to get back to our work.

Yesterday we received two members and on the first Sunday sixteen. Fourteen of these came on confession of faith as result of warehouse meeting. Four were received by letter. Others will probably follow.

Our special meeting has been postponed till Sept. We shall try to use the intervening time in getting ready for the meeting, and our hope and prayer is that God will give us a gracious revival.

The new carpet and paint on interior walls have added very greatly to the beauty of our church. We are indebted, for these improvements, to the initiative and untiring efforts of our women and the generous assistance of the men. Other improvements are in contemplation.

Friday of this week the Ladies' Aid will run an automobile excursion from Henderson to Kittrell. Round trip fare is 35c, including refreshments served at Union Chapel. The event promises a pleasant outing for those who go and a neat purse, we hope, for the Aid Society.

The parsonage and parsonage family always come in for their share of attention on the part of the church. A new Oriole four-burner gas range for the kitchen and a fence, enclosing the back lot, are some of the recent improvements that add greatly to the comfort and convenience of the parsonage family as well as to the appearance of the parsonage property. For these and many other tokens of interest and love we are profoundly thankful.

Bro. Hicks has been away for a week attending the Republican Convention in Chicago. Bro. Andrew Harris, Sr., left yesterday for St. Louis to attend the Democratic Convention. We can't help wishing that delegates to these great Conventions would not start on Sunday.

Our young people who have been away teaching and others, as students, are home for the vacation; we are glad to have them with us. S. W. Taylor, Pastor.

Canaan.—Our number at old Canaan is increasing. Several present for Sunday school this morning. I wish every one in this community could realize what this lesson, Sowing and Reaping, means. I don't pretend to say I know, but I have lived long enough to experience some things. If every church member would stop long enough to study this golden text certainly there would not be so many vacant seats at the church on Sunday. Am sorry to say that some members are so willing to attend worldly amusements, such as box parties, ice cream suppers, birthday dinners, and so on and when it comes to church going they are not in it at all.

Why is it so? Certainly there has been wrong seed sown somewhere. Let us as parents try to implant in the children's minds that the church is the place for them on Sundays. Don't send the children if you are able to go yourself, but go with them. Some people seem to think that Sunday school is just for children but the best Sunday school I ever saw was where the older people attended. We had two large classes of the older people. Fathers' and Mothers' classes. When questions and disputes arose those old gray-haired fathers could explain the Bible and we learned something. I wish that people would not get it in their minds that they ever get too old, too poor, or too good to go to Sunday school. I hope I'll never live to be either.

Well, Bro. A. Ridge opened the prayer meeting to-day; had a splendid service. Am glad to say that we have a few faithful ones at old Canaan. I sometimes wonder what would become of the church if it wasn't for the faithful few. Bro. Braswell has been faithful and has done a lot of good preaching. If we will only listen and do our duty as God would have us do we will accomplish something this year, but I fear too many of us are being fed out of the left hand of God, as the Herald gave it last week.

I fear many of us are not trusting him as we should.

Children's Day services to be held third Sunday in July. Nannie Welborn.

Pageland Circuit—

Rose Hill.—We are always busy in God's field. Our pastor, J. W. Quick, filled his regular appointment yesterday P. M. Good attendance, good singing, and a general good feeling was manifested among the brethren, a splendid sermon, enjoyed by all. I want to say that we have a good congregation of young people at our church. We are proud of this fact, for it is in our young that the church of tomorrow depends.

We are glad to report that we had Bro. Robert Turner with us yesterday. He arrived from the University Sat. A. M. Bro. Turner underwent a slight operation before returning home, glad to report he is doing well. He is going to teach school this summer.

It grieves us very much to say that one of our members, Sister Bettie Clarke, is very ill. We pray that should it be God's will she will soon be well, if not His will, that we may rejoice in the consolation that she is prepared for her inheritance in heaven.

On Monday night, May 29th, death entered the home of Mr. R. V. Evans and took his wife, Sisted Dulor. She had been in ill health for five years. Dropsy and Bright's disease caused her death. She was a member of Rose Hill Church, and was about 35 years of age. She was a kind neighbor and was always ready with a willing hand to comfort those in distress. We shall miss her from our presence, but the memory of her noble life and good advice still lingers and shall ever live with us.

Rev. J. W. Quick conducted the funeral service. May we all look forward to meeting her in the skies. Reporter.

West Forsyth Circuit—

Union Hill.—Our pastor, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, filled his regular appointment here Sunday. He preached a very interesting and helpful sermon.

Our Sunday school is still growing; we now have 100 on roll. We have good attendance every Sunday.

We are going to have a Children's Day service the fourth Sunday, June 25; everybody is cordially invited. A collection will be taken for foreign misisons.

Miss Ozelle Poindexter left Sunday for Moore's Springs and Cameron where she will spend some time with relatives and friends.

Mr. J. C. Bowman who has been very sick is much improved, we are glad to say.

Rosa Douglass.

Thomasville—

Yesterday was a good day for our church here; two splendid sermons by our minister and at the morning service thirteen people united with our church—some of them by letter, and some were converted at our recent revival: Mr. and Mrs. L. Fouts, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, by letter; Mr. and Mrs. Allred, Mr. and Mrs Class. We were happy to have these splendid people join our church. Then five of our bright Sunday school children joined: Treva Beck, Marjorie Perry, Ruth Boyles, Glenn Perry, Ernest Ritchie. We predict for them a bright and useful future. Mr. and Mrs. Fouts were not able to attend the services on account of the illness of their baby. We learned just after the service that their baby had died. It was only a few weeks old. Just "budded on earth to bloom in heaven." We extend to them our sympathy. The funeral service was conducted at the home by Bro. Pritchette this morning.

Some time ago this church granted Bro. Pritchette a two-weeks' vacation; he is taking that vacation now, as he left this evening to go to Brooklyn, N. Y., where on Wed., the 14th, he is to be married to Miss Ethel George. He secured Rev. Mr. Hutton of Greensboro to preach for us next Sunday and Mrs. A. G. Dixon on the evening of June 25th.

We will be glad to have these good people with us and to bring us a gospel message. Our second quarterly conference was held last week, June 8th. Business transacted harmoniously. All finances paid up to date. Bros. J. G. Beck and J. W. Boyles were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference. Reporter.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Circuit—

Shoals Church.—Our Children's Day service was attended by a large attentive congregation Sunday at eleven o'clock. Our collection was $3.82 for foreign missions.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with Mr. W. H. Hauser as Supt.

Our pastor, Bro. Edward Suits, did not preach for us at eleven o'clock on account of the Children's Day exercise, but he preached us an excellent sermon Sunday night, his subject being, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Mr. Ira O. Houser and sister, Miss Martha, have returned home from Denton where they have been in school. Also Mr. Gid Hauser and Miss Bertha Moser have returned from Wakelon High School; all of these are members of our S. S. Our special meeting will begin on the second Sunday in August. Let us all pray that we may have a successful meeting.

Squire E. Hauser, Reporter.

Shoals, N. C., June 12, 1916.

Spring Church Circuit—

Spring Church.—Last second Sunday Bro. Hethcox preached to us a good sermon from Psalm 137:5. There was an attentive congregation out to hear him. We are always glad to have Bro. Hethcox preach because he always has something good for us to hear.

There will not be services at Spring

Church our next apopintment, 4th Sunday, as there will be Children's Day service at Lebanon, and some of our members wish to attend.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Spring Ch. had planned a picnic to be given at Spring Church on Monday, June 12th. The rain put them out during the morning. But in the afternoon quite a good sized crowd was out. Refreshments were sold rapidly and the returns will add to our treasury right much.

Miss Rebekah J. Massey who has been unable to be with us for some time, was out yesterday. We are glad to see her improvement and hope she may continue.

With sincerest wishes for the Herald and all its readers, Reporter.

Granville Circuit—

Since our last report we have been very kindly remembered by a number of our members.

First, in behalf of our horse, we wish to thank Bro. Jno. Floyd and Bro. E. C. Kittrell for the generous amount of corn sent us a few weeks ago. Bro. Lewis Stone's very kind remembrance came last week—a big load of wood. Then ten fine peach trees were added to our parsonage orchard by Bro. Jno. Overton. Last, but by no means least, came the new library table, as a gift from the circuit. Sister Bobbitt and Sister Stone acted as "chairmen" of this gift committee.

These things were greatly appreciated and we wish to thank each one of you.

During the past month we have received four members into the church. These were Mrs. Floyd E. Bobbitt, Mrs. Bertha Freeman Bobbitt, Mrs. Alma Woodlief and Mrs. H. L. Wright.

Our third quarterly conference will be held at Antioch on Monday, July 17th. We wish to have a large attendance on this day; therefore all members are urged to be present.

Our special meetings are to be held during the month of July. The first one will be at Rehoboth church, beginning the first Sunday. The pulpit help will be Rev. J. D. Williams, of Winston-Salem, N. C. Then, on the second Sunday at Mt. Carmel; the third Sunday at Antioch, and the fourth Sunday at Union Chapel.

Rev. R. A. Swaringen, of Halifax, will assist in the meeting at Mt. Carmel and Mr. T. O. Pender will have charge of the singing. Rev. T. A. Williams, of Mocksville, N. C., will be with us at Antioch and Union Chapel.

We trust that each member is thinking earnestly of these meetings and that they will put forth every effort to make them a success. Your pastor, D. R. Williams.

Lebanon Circuit—

Lebanon Church.—S. S. attendance, 129.

Rev. Mr. Stubbins and family are in Winston where he is assisting Rev. J. D. Williams in a meeting. Last Sunday Rev. T. H. Matthews preached an excellent sermon at the 11:00 o'clock service in the absence of our pastor. His text was taken from the story of Naaman, the leper, and he emphasized many points on his theme, "Is there no other way?"

Sister Rachel Welch, the mother of our worthy S. S. Supt., has passed from time into eternity. She was stricken with paralysis last Friday, lived until Sunday morning, and her funeral was conducted Monday afternoon by Rev. A. G. Dixon and interment made in Spring Hill Cemetery by the side of her husband who had preceded her to the great beyond. Our deep-felt sympathy goes out to all her loved ones who mourn their loss.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Hammer have moved to Gibsonville to make their home. Mr. Hammer has recently accepted a rural mail route appointment there.

Miss Naomi Schell, of Asheville, has been the guest of Mrs. J. W. Thacker for ten days. She visits her brother in Charlotte a week before returning to her home.

Our Children's Day service will be held the 4th Sunday in this month. We hope to have a good program and a big collection. Everybody invited to attend.

Mrs. J. W. Thacker, Rep.

High Point, N. C., June 13, 1916.

Why Not Circuit—

Love Joy Church.—Rev. J. F. Allred filled his regular apointment Sunday and preached a good sermon.

The Sunday school is increasing. The attendance has increased from 55 to 81. We hope it will continue to grow. The camp meeting at this place will begin on Saturday night before the first Sunday in October. Everybody pray for us to have a good meeting. Corrina Waisner.

Queen, N. C., June 13, 1916.

Fairview Circuit—

The Pres., Rev. Geo. W. Holmes, visited this circuit the 10th of June, I met him in Burlington at Rev. J. E. Pritchard's; from there we went to Carolina where he preached Saturday evening and conducted the service, I am sure, to the pleasure of all. We spent the night in the pleasant home of Bro. Trollinger.

Sunday morning, 10 A. M., found us in the Sunday school at Fairview. At 11 A. M. Bro. Holmes, after making a splendid talk on the business affairs of our church, preached a short, yet a splendid sermon to a good-sized congregation. After taking dinner with Sister Hunter, I believe a relative of Bro. Holmes, in company with Bros. Holmes, Taylor and Bennett we went to Glenco cotton mill where the undersigned had the pleasure of preaching a sermon to the Jr. O. U. A. M. to a well-filled house. From here we went to Gibsonville, where we took supper and spent the night in the pleasant home of Sister Huff. At the supper table Bro. Holmes remarked that a few days' work and a travel like that made him hungry. I suspect, however, it was not the work and travel but the splendid supper that Sister Huff had prepared and set out so temptingly before us, for that was the effect the supper had on me. And I noticed the breakfast had about the same effect on Bro. Holmes.

Sunday evening at 8 P. M. Bro. Holmes preached one of his very best sermons to the largest congregation that I have seen in our church at Gibsonville, to the joy and pleasure, and I hope to the profit of all present.

Monday morning after making a few pleasant calls with the Pres., at 9:45 I started Bro. Holmes to (to him) the most pleasant spot in the world on the banks of Haw River. Soon afterward I left for my home in Guilford. My sojourn with the Pres. was a very pleasant one.

J. H. Bowman.

Buncombe Circuit—

After a long illness Mrs. Laura Carter died at her home May 26th. Sister Carter has been a faithful meber of the M.P. church for 39 years. She was 55 years, 8 months, 17 days old. She leaves her husband, four boys, four girls, to mourn their loss while she has gone to be with the two boys and one girl that were waiting for her on the other shore. Sister Carter will be missed by her church so much; she always had a good word for her pastor. Our heart of sympathy goes out for the family. May they be ready as she was when the time comes to go. She was buried at the Democrat cemetery. T. E. Martin, Pastor.

Tabernacle Circuit—

Moriah.—Bro. Johnson, filled with new information and inspiration from General Conference, preached a fine sermon this afternoon. He gave an interesting report of his trip. We were glad to hear about this great work because in it we have a little part. Bro. Johnson got a vision of greater things while away and the purpose of this sermon was to encourage us to push still farther in the realm of activity. Our church will never see the better day that awaits her until the laymen lay hold on something which cannot be accomplished except by grace of God.

Bro. Lanning preached for us the fourth Sunday of May. He directed our attention to the beauty of flowers, birds, etc., about us and described the cedars of Lebanon in such a way that we could almost see them. He compared Christ and his churches to the different parts of one of these trees. This was a favorite sermon among the little children as well as older ones.

Bro. Johnson will not be with us the 4th Sun. of this month as he will be in Charlotte at that time helping Bro. Bethea.

We are busy practicing for our Children's Day service which will be held 4th Sun. of this month.

We are also working and planning for our Circuit Rally which is to be held at Moriah, Aug. 18th.

Mr. Claud Coe, who has been sick for several weeks, is able to be with us again. We missed him so much during his illness. Grandma Witty, as we call her, is quite sick. She is the most aged memberr of Moriah. She is one who continually praises the Lord. Love to all readers.

Lillie Sharpe, Rep.

High Point—

We were delighted to see our pastor and family again after an absence of six weeks, and to hear that their trip was so pleasant and restful. Mr. Dixon returns with renewed vigor of body and mind, and greatly enthused with what he has seen and heard. He entertained the congregation on Sunday, June 4th, with a graphic account of the three great meetings which he attended while away, the Billy Sunday meeting in Baltimore, the Missionary Congress in Washington City, and the M. P. General Conference in Zanesville, Ohio.

Our congregation is very much interested just now in the question of building a new church, and steps are being taken towards that end. Committees have been appointed, and much enthusiasm is being shown on all sides. Herald readers will hear from High Point in a short time.

High Point is in the midst of a city-wide revival, conducted in the school auditorium by Rev. Mr. Black, ably assisted by his singer and coworker, Mr. Burr. This is the third week of these services. Large crowds attend each evening service, and often overflow meetings are held nearby. Many have professed conversion. At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon a service was held especially for children in the Friends' church, conducted by Mr. Dixon, when thirty-six little ones signed cards, thus pledging themselves to lives of service for Jesus. It was truly a sweet and inspiring scene.

We are so glad to see so many young faces home from school. Misses Flossie and Carrie Stout were members of the graduating class at the State Normal; Miss Altah Pickett is also at home for the holidays from the Normal. Miss Louise Reitzel is at home from Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., and her brother, Richard, from Oak Ridge.

Misses Fern Ferree and Frances Montgomery received diplomas from our local high school.

Mrs. Blair, Mrs. Auman and little son, of Nashville, Tenn., and Mrs. Noble and young daughter, of Chicago, are guests at the home of Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin.

Davidson Circuit—

Chapel Hill.—The third Sunday has come and gone and almost here again,—and we must not forget Bro. Hulin's good sermon. Some said he got better every time they heard him. The best congregation has been this year. Our Sunday school is the best it has been in years, 87 on roll. We have five classes.

Mr. Cullum taught a good singing school here in April and it did much good. We expect him back in July to sing ten days more. We are glad to see so many come, the old as well as the young. It helps for the old to come. We enjoy their presence.

Zettie Russell got the prize to-day for giving the best answer to question, Why Do We Go to Sunday School? Mr. Numie Lanier gave the prize, a Testament. We are glad to see so much interest taken.

Lizzie Cranford.

BARACA ROOM FOR ASHEBORO CHURCH.

The Asheboro M. P. Baraca Class met in Dr. Swaim's office Monday evening for regular monthly business meeting and election of officers. The following orcers were elected for six months: President, C. E. Bulla; Vice President, C. E. Davis; Sec. and Treas., C. M. Fox; Assistant Sec. and Treas., Banks Richardson; Teacher, Rev. C. L. Whitaker; assistant teacher, C. F. Smith.

At this meeting plans were discussed for building a Baraca room, and a committee was appointed to draw up plans and get an estimate as to cost for building a Baraca room adjoining the church. As soon as plans have been decided upon a campaign will be started to raise the necessary funds, and it is hoped that the building will be erected within the next few weeks.

Mr. A. A. Jones, Bethel, Flat Rock Ct., has our thanks for dry goods.

Through the kindness of the pastor of Orange Ct. and the Chestnut Ridge people I had the pleasure of attending the Home Coming at Chestnut Ridge last Sunday. It was a pleasure to meet friends of that place, Hebron and Union Chapel that I had known by the contributions they had made to our Home. H. A. Garrett.

Since sending in my report I have received this very interesting letter, which I wish you to publish. Last year Bro. Snotherly gave out $1.00 in nickels and the following letter gives the result.

"Dear Bro. Garrett:—I am sending you $14.05, which was realized from the nickels I gave out last year. Each of the following received 5c in April, 1915, and made it produce the following amounts during the year: 1. Mrs. W. D. Reed bought and sold handkerchiefs, and re-invested in corn plasters, and realized $1.45. 2. Mrs. W. A. Hatley raised sweet potatoes, and realized $.50. 3. Attie Hatley raised sweet potatoes and realized $.50. 4. Mrs. Mollie Hatley raised peanuts and realized $.50. 5. Miss Maude Hatley raised peanuts, realized $.50. 6. Miss Myrtle Lipe raised peanuts, realized $.50. 7. Oscar Hatley raised peanuts, realized $.50. 8 and 9. Mrs. J. W. and Virginia Hornbuckle bought cake materials, sold cake and realized $2.10. 10. Miss Annie Herlacker raised peanuts, $.50. 11. Grady Lipe raised peanuts, $1. 12. Mrs. J. H., Earnest and Myron Snotherly sold corn, $6. Total, $14.05.

"No.'s 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20 failed to make any return of their 5c, but think they will do so yet. I gave the $1, and I am sure I have never had a dollar to grow to such proportions invested in anything else. Our Sunday school gives first Sunday's collection in each month to the Children's Home, and the offering is nearly always three times as large as on other Sundays. Some of our Sunday school hesitated to give one Sunday in each month to Children's Home, for fear we could not raise enough to buy S. S. Literature. We are now receiving enough money and more sometimes, than we need to buy literature, and we are using more than ever before. Most folks will stand development. I like to see prosperity in church and Sunday school work, keep pace with prosperity in worldly affairs.

"Sincerely,

"J. H. Snotherly."

BOWMAN-JULIAN.

A beautiful home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Julian near Providence, Sunday, 5 o'clock P. M., June 11, when their daughter, Miss Winnie, became the bride of Mr. Clarence H. Bowman of Greensboro. Quite a large crowd of friends and relatives had gathered at the home to witness the marriage. And at the proper time the bride and groom with their attendants marched out on the lawn, the bride and groom taking their position under a floral arch while the officiating minister, Rev. J. B. O'Briant, of Randleman, pronounced them husband and wife.

The party then returned to parlor where the happy couple received many congratulations. Soon we were invited to the dining hall where a very, very nice supper was served. It was a most enjoyable occasion and every one semed to be happy. The bride and groom are both of Randolph and are very popular and have a wide circle of friends who are wishing them a happy and prosperous journey through life. They will make their home in Greensboro, N. C.

DIED.

May 25th, little Charles Whit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Whit, of Asheboro, died and was brought to Bethany for burial. And June 9th Ruby Dee, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Coltrane, of Greensboro, died and was brought to Bethany for burial, on Sunday, June 10th.

These families are both good people and also are Bethany folks and have our deepest sympathy in the loss of these precious jewels. J. B. O'Briant.

IN MEMORY.

Miss Susan Fallin was born near Danville, Va., Feb. 9, 1834. Died near Pinnacle, N. C., May 22, 1916. She was the daughter of William Fallin who moved his family, a wife and nine children, to N. C., and lived for a long while near Madison, Rockingham Co., N. C. "Aunt Sue" professed religion and joined the church at Crooked Run M. P. church, in 1854, and kept in the faith for sixty-two years. She outlived her family, and waited on several of them during their last illness. Her father lived to be very old, and she was so faithful to him, and then to each of her sisters and brothers, as they would take sick, she would go and wait on, one by one, until all were gone. For the last few years she had made her home with her nephew, Bro. Walter Hunt, of Pinnacle, who was faithful to her during her illness of eleven weeks. He and his family seemed to wait on her kindly during her illness, and she was almost helpless. Her mind became affected by her illness, but before this she expressed a desire to depart, saying she had made all preparations and was willing and anxious for the summons.

She passed away so peacefully on the morning of the 22d, and on the 23d of May, Bro. Edw. Suits preached her funeral sermon, and we placed her to rest in the Pinnacle cemetery, to await the morning of the resurrection.

Bro. Suits preached from the text, Phil. 1:21, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." His sermon was encouraging. He emphasized Aunt Sue's disposition, because "she was never more delighted than when relieving the sufferings of humanity." Others, he said, might seem greater in the eyes of the world, but that she was following out Christ's mission. Nothing could have been said more true of her.

I feel that I shall always miss her when I go back home. She always seemed so glad to have us come. May each of us strive the harder to meet her and our mother, and father, and all the other loved ones who have gone.

"She hath done what she could," and may Heaven reward the kind hands that waited on her during her last days.

Her niece,

Ella H. Wade.

East Bend, N. C., June 12, 1916.

ANDERSON.—Mrs. Rebecca Chambers Holcombe Anderson, wife of Joel Holcombe and Wm. B. Anderson, aged 88 years, 6 months and 15 days, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Woods Anderson of Paint Fork, N. C., June 2nd, at 10:30 P. M.

For sixty-four years she has been a faithful member of the Methodist Protestant church. Though she suffered a great deal during her last days, she bore it with Christian fortitude, and often spoke of her hope of heaven, and how she longed to be there. In a conversation with her she always found it convenient to speak a word for Christ. A visit with her made one feel spiritually helped.

She leaves behind a numberr of friends and neighbors, none of whom can say anything of her life except that which is good and commendable. This is saying lots, but it's true.

The home community and especially the church suffer a heavy loss, since she was the oldest member. Her death made a vacancy in the home and church that can never be filled. But we feel sure she has passed into the great beyond in peace, and is gently beckoning us to come home.

We fully realize that the poet has truly said:

"Just a few more years will pass,
A few more seasons come;
And we will be with our loved one,
That's sleeping in the tomb."

On Sunday, June the 4th, at eleven A. M., she was laid to rest beneath a mound of flowers. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. T. E. Martin, assisted by Rev. Wm. Bradley, Homer Casto and E. Woody.

Being a widow, she leaves to mourn their loss seven children: Mrs. Katherine Swan, of Wiley, Texas, Mrs. Eliza McLean, of Bryson City, N. C., Mrs. Susan Henderson, and Mr. Gregg Holcombe, of Ivy, N. C., Mrs. Julia Anderson of Paint Fork, N. C., Mrs. T. J. Murray of Marshall, N. C., and Mrs. Sulia Murray of Mars Hill, N. C.; two sisters, Mrs. Harriette Eller, of Weaverville, N. C., and Mrs. Susan Metcalf of Paint Fork, N. C.; thirty-three grand-children and a number of great grand-children.

Her two husbands and one son preceded her to the grave years ago. The latter she often said she believed would be her ministering angel.

As she died, at her request "How Firm a Foundation" was sung.

She was a sweet-spirited mother, having strong faith in God.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

A Niece.

DELK.—Mrs. John Delk was born Feb. 11, 1864, and died May 27, 1916. She had been almost helpless for 17 months from paralysis, but she bore her suffering without a murmur,—always patient and resigned to the will of her Savior. She was a good girl in youth, gave her heart to her Lord at age of 14 years, and formed habits and possessed traits of character that made her a noble woman, a good wife and a kind mother and a good neighbor.

It seemed that she had mastered self and never appeared to be fretted about anything. She first joined the M. E. Church at Oak Grove. After she and Mr. Delk were married they moved near Piney Grove church and there she joined the M. P. church and lived a worthy member till God called her home. As I was her pastor for five years I can say truly a good woman is gone, for I never saw anything to cause me to doubt her fidelity. She was always kind and made her pastor feel welcome and at home which made it pleasant to be there. She will be missed so much in the community, in the church and most of all in the home. She leaves a husband, one son, and two daughters, Mrs. Doke Lowe of Jackson Creek and Mrs. Vane Wood of Handy; and Mr. Joe Delk, of Jackson Creek. Five children preceded her to the glory world. She was a sister of Mr. Tom Ingram of near Bamby, N. C. But why should we weep, loved ones, any more? In heaven she had five, on earth only four, and while she is at rest and their glory ever shares, will you be watching and working and meet them up there? She was laid in the Piney Grove Cemetery on May 28th with the largest congregation present I ever saw there at a burying. Funeral conducted by the writer as Bro. Braswell did not get there in time. May the Lord bless the bereaved family.

EXTERMINATE THE WEEDS.

"There are two main reasons," says the State Board of Health, "why weeds should not be allowed to grow up and mature. The first is that their pollens cause hay-fever and the second is that the space on which they grow, in most cases, becomes a dumping ground for refuse and all sorts of filth."

"Hay-fever is a disease that is hard to cure, and barely less hard to prevent. It is believed to be caused by the pollens of certain plants, such as rag weed, golden rod, yellow dock, cocklebur, careless weed and various grasses. Experiments show that the pollens of these plants so irritate the membranes of the nose as to bring on symptoms of cold which persist throughout the pollen season. It is best prevented by exterminating weeds and grasses before their flowering season. This can be done by cities and towns, as Asheville is doing for her people, but the plan is hardly practical for individuals alone. However, individuals can go after their town authorities and both can so cooperate as to get rid of weeds and all the evils that are attributed to them."

CANCER ON THE INCREASE.

The State Board of Health says: "Cancer is at first a local disease, as a chronic sore, swelling, hard lump or bleeding place, and not a constitutional or blood disease. It begins in one spot as a small growth, which in the early stages can be removed. If this is done by a competent surgeon, every trace of the disease can often be removed so that it will not return. If neglected, however cancer spreads like wild fire and gets beyond control. And as with fire, anything less than complete extinguishment may stir up sparks and spread the trouble. Intelligent people must learn to recognize the danger signals and seek advice and treatment at the earliest possible stage when cancer is most curable."

—Cabarrus County is breaking this summer's record in anti-typhoid vaccination work. Thursday, at Kannapolis and Concord, 2,000 people were vaccinated and last Saturday at Concord 2,100 took the treatment.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE FORWARD MOVEMENT COMMISSION.

You will find this in another column. Dr. C. S. Johnson, the Secretary, modestly and yet confidently outlines the work before this new commission. The objective—an increase in the next four years in the number of Methodist Protestants and in the number of dollars devoted to the work of our institutions—is perfectly definite. How to reach the result aimed at is a problem whose solution is not easy. The announcement indicates that the Commission is fully aware of the difficulties, and yet is hopeful of finding a way out.

It is a great task, and the Commission evidently feels its responsibility. Its hope of success lies in the expectation that our people in general will come to share in the feeling of responsibility and enter heartily into the work with the Commission. This is a wholly reasonable expectation. Every Methodist Protestant is responsible for the growth of our church and every Methodist Protestant is morally bound to add to the efficiency of our church. Let the Commission have no ground for saying at the end of four years, We have piped, and ye have not danced. Let us all work with the Commission for the extension of our church and the greater effectiveness of our church, and then at the end of four years we may all have a great rejoicing together.

—False systems of government in church and state are destined to break down some time. "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small."

—Rev. Selah G. Appleget, of our church, died Aug. 2nd at his home on Long Island, New York.

—Rev. D. A. Braswell while at Creswell last month had a real treat in being permitted to meet again good friends of years ago.

THE LOCAL CHURCH'S DEPENDANCE ON THE GENERAL CHURCH.

Many of our local churches do not realize their debt to the denomination at large. It must be because they have not "stopped to think." Where would local churches get pastors if there were no general church? How would they get educated preachers if there were no general church to provide educational institutions? Where would they get hymn books if there were no general church? Where would they get Sunday school literature? Where would they get church papers? How would they engage in mission work in China and Japan and other remote parts of the earth? How would they provide for the training of their young people for intelligent service, if they had no outside help?

Our churches are all members one of another, linked together, mutually dependent; must rise or fall together. Let every local church realize this relationship, and resolve that it will enter fully and heartily into progressive denominational life.

SMALL PRIZE OFFERED.

We want a story showing up in his true colors the person of cynical disposition—his variety of offensiveness and how it reacts against him. We will give a prize of two dollars to the person who writes and sends us the best story in response to this offer by October 1st. It is to be understood that all stories sent will be ours for publication if needed. Th winning story must not contain more than one thousand words.

—Bro. Swaringen, of the Annual Conference Committee, has an urging word regarding the collections for expenses of delegates to General Conference. We have the confidence that the full amount will come in ultimately. Some of the pastors have explained that this collection has been taken out of their hands by the quartery conference and provided for otherwise. We would thank pastors to remind their people of the fact that the debt to our delegates is not fully paid and cannot be without their contribution.

—Capt. A. M. Rankin, we read in a daily paper, had a fall and an injury; but his report comes in as usual this week in his own hand writing. We are glad he was not seriously hurt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS, PLEASE NOTICE.

We have just received in the Herald office a large supply of programs for rally day service. These programs were prepared by our Board of Young People's Work and were sent us for free distribution among our Sunday schools (and Y. P. Societies) in North Carolina. They are well gotten up, having suitable recitations and nine songs with music.

Every Sunday school may help to hold and increase its attendance by having a rally day once in a while, and this service already prepared to your hand will enable you easily to prepare for one.

Send to the Methodist Protestant Herald, Greensboro, N. C., for as many copies of this program as you will need, stating the name of your church, and they will be sent to you without charge. The only obligation you will be under will be to take a collection in connection with the service and sent the offering to the Board of Young People's Work, Westminster, Md., to help them in their work for the young people of our church.

May we not very soon hear from every superintendent who hs not alreaady used this program, which is entitled "To the Work"?

—Bro. Dixon is assisting Bro. Ashburn at Fair Grove this week.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews is this week at Whitaker's Chapel, preaching for Bro. Edwards in a special meeting.

—We are glad to welcome "Optimist" to a place in the Herald. He is going to keep up our spirits as Methodist Protestants. We will tell you who he is after a while, but now for a time we will kkeep you guessing. We expect to hear from him frequently, giving us Methodist Protestant good news from the field at large.

—One of our ministers was recently deploring the loss our Annual Conference sustains because fields left without pastors do not pay the assessments for general interests. This is not perhaps true of all fields, but why should it be true of any? With no pastor's salary to raise, the people could double or treble on the general interests. If they would do so, they would soon find it easy to obtain and keep pastors, we believe. Pastors like to work best of all where the people are most alive to the work of the church.

FROM DR. C. S. JOHNSON, SECRETARY OF FORWARD MOVEMENT.

The secretary of the new Forward Movement Commission makes his bow to the church-paper-reading public of the Methodist Protestant Church. Occasionally until we become settled in our new home, and regularly thereafter, we desire to address you in this way.

It is a great subject that claims our attention. A great slogan has been proposed to the church and adopted unanimously and with enthusiasm by the last General Conference, namely, "A 25 per cent. increase in church membership, and a Million Dollars for our Boards and Institutions," to be realized in four years. We will need to ring the changes on this slogan in many keys, and with such vigor and persistence that the whole church will begin to vibrate with the spirit of the challenge; and ministers, superintendents, presidents, officers, teachers, missionaries and all, will come to think and dream and act in terms of the Forward Movement.

Naturally, people will ask, What is the forward movement? We first began to hear about it by that word at the last session of General Conference, although it has had a being among us for a long time before. Like other good things that come "suddenly from heaven," it was a long time in gathering. It had been a longing in the soul of many a man who loved his church and wanted her to measure up to the needs and opportunities of our times; men of red blood, who had a vision and wanted their church to have a program worthy of their steel, and were pained to have to admit that in some vital particulars we were languishing.

The Forward Movement program as adopted was the expression of a recognized sentiment abroad in the land, which was a "hot-spot" in the consciousness of many of our serious and thoughtful men, and latent in the minds of the rank and file. The Forward Movement Commission was created to promote the aims of the forward movement program. There have been slogans adopted in high convention moments that have been but a flash in the pan. It is easy to forget the resolves of sudden impulse. But here is an organized, persistent emphasis, an attempt to "fix" an inspiration by an enacting clause, to keep alive and work out an ideal in terms of actuality. This ideal lived up to will mean the revitalization of our church; the rehabilitation of some of our enterprises, educational, missionary and otherwise, that are now eking out an existence; and what will amount to, as one brother expressed it, a re-birth of the Methodist Protestant Church. Now, this Commission hasn't an unusual endowment of brains nor is it gifted with genius or wonder-working power, so that miracles are to be expected. We are just ordinary folk, picked for this work because we are deeply concerned about the matter; so too much must not be expected of us. We have no disposition to attempt to do the work which others should do, nor to take over any responsibility. The Commission does not aim to do work for anybody, but to work with them, and help them to help themselves. At the end of four years, we do not want anybody to say, See what the Forward Commission has done; but, See what we have been able to do, under the blessing of God, by working together. It is the spirit of co-operation and unity that we desire to capitalize. The Commission hopes to be able to inspire more and better work by indicating lines of co-operative effort and, forsooth, beating time for the onward march.

It will take time to launch this Forward Movement. The complete organization will reach through every conference, from every institution down to the last church in the denomination, and we must depend upon our fellow-laborers to help us touch the last individual in the churches, to impart information and inspiration as we may be able. We are at a disadvantage for want of a medium of communication by which we may be able to talk to a large constituency at one time. We have a medium, but unfortunately it is not now used as widely as it ought to be, so that when an important communication is sent forth, it is not read because so few of our homes receive the church papers. It is like talking or trying to talk when the receiver is down at the other end of the line. The Herald is chock full of good things all the time, and it should be in every Methodist Protestant home, but if you are to keep up with the history-making days that are now upon us, you will need to read closely these columns, and help to get your neighbors interested. One of the first necessities will be to increase very materially the circulation of this paper.

We shall need to keep in touch with every pastor. Your secretary has been a pastor, until two weeks ago. He thinks the work of the pastor is the greatest work in the world, and turns aside from it for awhile on deputation work only in obedience to the call of his church. Brethren, we all know how important is team work in the affairs of our churches. It is necessary here. We want every pastor to get the vision of a regiment or two of his fellow-pastors marching abreast in this campaign. Changing the figure slightly, we want every pastor to be a captain of a company, thoroughly mobilized and in marching order, obedient not to any arbitrary authority, but to the law of the general good. The pastors, churches and conferences are summoned to lose sight of their individual preferences in a vision of the general good. "Each for all and all for each," is the rule..

Certain broad lines of action have been laid down for our following. We shall have time later to develop these. Before we can know just how to proceed, we will need to know our problem. We cannot know our problem until we know our field and general conditions. A survey may contain some surprises. A survey in a county of my state disclosed the fact that the farmers there thought more of the health of their hogs than of the health of their families. A survey of our field may show something radically wrong in our methods and we may have to change our whole method of approach before we will get anywhere. Who knows how many churches we have, and how many of them are rural? How many of these churches are growing, and why? how many are dying, and why? Who knows whether the church is approaching its problem in a way that gives any promise of success? Maybe we are trying to sweep leaves against the wind. In a little while we will ask every church to fill out a "narrative" blank, setting forth conditions as a basis for study and the formulation of a definite policy. The results of this survey and other useful information will be published in the Year Book which we expect to issue Jan. 1, 1917.

The slogan of our movement sounds Utopian. A 25 per cent. increase in membership in four years is large as increases go; but if a wave of evangelism through prayer, personal work, pastoral and vocational evangelism, could be projected throughout the denomination, the possibility is not remote. A million dollars is not beyond us, when, if we figure a little, we will see that it would mean about two cents a week per member for four years.

There are two ways that seem to open for the raising of this amount of money. The first is to have every church pay its assessment in full. $120,000 have been levied upon the churches this year. Allowing for a reasonable increase year by year, in four years, if every church should pay its assessment in full, we would have one half of the million. The other half might be secured in a special campaign to be undertaken two years hence, or sooner, when we are quite ready for it.

One of the first things we are attempting to do is to establish a Forward Movement Commission in each annual conference, to work in harmony with the general Forward Movement Commission. By and with these commissions we will seek to carry forward our work to the honor of ou Lord and Master and the extension of His Kingdom. Crates S. Johnson,

Secy. Forward Move. Commission.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The regular quarterly meeting was held in Baltimore August 9. All members wer present. Mr. L. E. Stewart, of Pollock, La., was invited to an honorary seat.

A letter from Rev. I. Ianuma, President of the Japan Mission Conference, was read—the first letter from a Japanese president. Appreciation was expressed for the information imparted.

A communication from the pastor and a member of the Azabu church, Tokyo, asking for a grant for the erection of their church, in addition to what they had raised, was presented, but it was decided to adhere to the established plan of having the Mission, the board's representative in Japan, pass upon all such propositions.

Letters from Rev. E. I. Obee, temporarily our only missionary on the field, from Rev. L. Layman, about to start upon his journey back to Japan, to take up his work at Yokohama again, and from Rev. E. H. Van Dyke, home on furlough, and now at Clifton Springs with his invalid wife, were read.

Bro. Stewart was invited to make a full statement concerning the conditions of the missionary work in India supported by himself and others in Louisiana and Texas, and which he desires the Board to take over and control.

After a comprehensive review of the history and present status of the Mission together with photographs and letters, it was deemed wise to defer action until the full information needed, and now en route from India, was in hand. The Board expressed its appreciation of Bro. Stewart's interest and the personal sacrifice which he made in coming to the board meeting, and for the splendid manner in which he presented the proposition.

Rev. L. Layman was appointed principal of the Yokohama school and of the Tokyo Blind School.

Bros. R. Watts, J. Norman Wills and the corresponding secretary were appointed a committee on missionary candidates.

The president and secretary were instructed to convey to Rev. C. H. Beck, formerly a member of this board, expression of the board's deep sympathy with him in the great loss sustained in the sudden death of his oldest son, following an accident.

The next meeting of the board is to be on Thursday, December 7th, in Baltimore.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DISSIPATION

Looking out upon the world at large, the strangest and saddest sight that presents itself is what men call "dissipation." Millions are constantly rushing to a sad extreme in the gratification of the lower appetites. This is one of the most serious facts that presents itself in human life, and it is the great obstacle in the way of the reformation of the individual. The true cause of this dissipation must be understood before there can be any effective methods instituted for betterment. What is the philosophy of dissipation?

Man is a dual being; he stands suspended between the heavens and the earth, having affinities with both. Through his physical being he draws the support of his lower life from the earth. He is of the earth earthy. Through his spirit he draws the support of his higher life from God, "created a little lower than the angels and crowned with glory and honor."

The above being true, man has two hungers: an appetite for material things for the support of the physical; and an hunger after God, for the support of the spiritual. These two hungers are a characteristic fact of this dual being man. This makes clear the philosophy of dissipation.

The man who is not in vital relation with God, so that his soul is fed with spiritual things, has this hunger for God. He does not know the meaning of the spiritual unrest, and so over and doubly feeds the body on the "husks that the swine do eat," thinking to satisfy the hunger of the immortal soul. Vain hope! It cannot be done. But still on and on he goes, at ever increasing speed, until he comes to both physical and moral ruin. What he needs to do is to turn to God and in vital communion with him, through the Lord Jesus Christ, find food for his spiritual nature, and thus relieve himself of the stress of satisfying two hungers thru one organ.

This explanation will be of great help to the reformer, to the worker with the individual sinner. How vain it will be to bring reformatory influences to bear upon the sinner unless they carry with them a turning to God, to find in him the soul's food! The drunkard may for a time, by the exertion of will power, turn from his cups and give promise of reformation; but unless when his cups are taken from him, God is given to him, he will return to them when the unrest of appetite returns to him. Here is the vanity of all drug cures; nothing can cure the man that does not remove the cause of the disease. Give a man God first, and then he becomes a man again.—C. E. W. in Methodist Recorder.

GOD IS OUR REFUGE.

God is our hiding place. Many in the world are feeling to-day that there is no sure refuge except in God. A man in Europe wrote the other day: "World courts have failed; treaties have broken down; governments have collapsed; the sword has proved futile to save us. There is no safety, no certitude in the earth. God is the only refuge left us now. Perhaps the world will trust in him a little more than it has." God will instruct, teach and guide the good man. The only thing is to confess our sin, get close to God, and then he will lead us by the hand. Many sorrows shall come to the wicked—one calamity after another. But he that trusteth in God shall be saved out of them all.—Christian Work.

DO WE PROPERLY APPRECIATE WHAT OUR FATHERS IN THE MINISTRY HAVE DONE FOR US?

Only the man of niggardly appreciation could fail to grow large with hope and active in endeavor as he beholds the kindling of new fires of enthusiasm in the hearts of those who would abundantly provide for the necessary wants of our past heroes. How the Church could have remained inactive this long is beyond my ability to explain. That the movement now on in many of our Conferences to house and minister to the men of the other days, whose message made ours possible, whose service blazed the way for those who stand in their places, whose sacrifice and surrender gave to the Church her victorious career and her present prosperity, should have met with the hearty co-operation of the rank and file of the Church can be neither boast nor self-flattery. Surely we could have expected no less. To have failed as ministers and laymen to meet this crisis would be self-conviction, the confession of ingratitude akin to crime.

But we have not as yet begun to measure up to our obligation in this matter. Many of us have not realized the full meaning of the lives and ministry of the men who have gone before us. We who reap the harvests of their sowing have not dreamed of the agony and pain of those pioneer days of seed-planting. We who inherit the kingdom have not really examined the bloodstains that mark the battle fields where they fought that the kingdom might come down to us. Let us pause one moment in the very high day of what we have counted a sacrifice on our own part that the gosped may be delivered and remember that ours is a work of joy and triumph compared with the arduous toil through which these whitehaired saints of God have come. Theirs was a struggle indeed. Gethsemanes were to the right and left in their day. Golgothas loomed before them large and threatening. It was theirs "to do and die," and they hesitated not to undertake for Him whose faltering, furrowed heroes they are to-day.

A Methodist preacher who can close his church door in the face of the special efforts being made for the relief of the superannuate preacher had best examine closely lest a stone quarry exist within his heart. The layman who can complain because a collection is being taken for these old soldiers of the cross is either ignorant or criminally stingy. Brethren, let us stand by these special efforts of our Conference as the old preachers who are still with us have stood by their hard and unattractive posts in the days of test and stress. Let us set no example of narrowness and closefistedness for our people. Unfortunately some of our preachers are given to wailing over the numerous calls that are being made to the Church for financial help; and our laymen, hearing the whine of ecclesiastical pessimism, gather courage for the excuse that they are all too ready to give for not giving to the Lord's work.

God has blessed us. We live within the very fertile heart of his flowering garden. This is a country of large prosperity. What our people want for themselves and to satisfy not only their own wants but their fancies they are obtaining. The selfish longings of our hearts are being gratified. We ride in automobiles, live in comfortable houses, buy and use the most improved implements of agriculture and commercial life. We deny ourselves nothing. Surely God will not hold us guiltless if we turn the mill race of his blessings upon our own selfish souls and deny his old warriors the drops of dew that will brighten and gladden their departing days.—Rev. R. P. Shuler, in Exchange.

THE BURDEN OF KEEPING UP APPEARANCES.

Human nature has no trait more marked than the desire to "be like other folks," especially in society and in tokens of domestic prosperity. There are people who cannot bear the thought of being eclipsed in any way by a neighbor's show of material advancement.

In some respects this spirit is commendable. No one wishes to attract attention by being peculiar or by showing contempt for fairly good examples set by other folks, yet it were better to be overly independent than to be hurtfully subservient to social custom.

"There is," as one writer observes, "a dreadful ambition abroad for being 'genteel.' We keep up appearances too often at the expense of honesty; and though we may not be rich, yet we must seem so. We must be 'respectable,' though only in the meanest sense—in mere vulgar outward show. We have not the courage to go patiently onward in the condition of life in which it has pleased God to call us; but must needs live in some fashionable state to which we ridiculously please to call ourselves, and all to satisfy the vanity of that unsubstantial genteel world of which we form a part. There is a constant struggle and pressure for front seats in the social amphitheater, in the midst of which all noble, self-denying resolve is trodden down and many fine natures are inevitably crushed to death. What waste, what misery, what bankruptcy come from all this ambition to dazzle others with the glare of apparent worldly success, we need not describe. The mischievous results show themselves in a thousand ways—in the rank frauds committed by men who dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor, and in the desperate dashes at fortune in which the pity is not so much for those who fail as for the hundreds of innocent families who are so often involved in their ruin."

Illustrations of the foregoing truth can be found in almost any daily paper. The instances are not few in which men "dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor." The exposure of their frauds and dishonesties has brought to many loved ones, some of whom possibly by ungovernable social ambition may have unconsciously contributed a share toward the fatuitous impulse to do wrong.

We wish some effective means could be devised of ridding society of this unnecessary burden.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

THE MISSIONARY REVIEW UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

Beginning with the October number, 1916. The Missionary Review of the World is passing into the hands of the new Missionary Review Publishing Company of which Dr. Robert E. Speer is President, and Mr. Frank L. Brown, Vice-President. After September 1st, the offices will be at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Review was founded in 1878 by Rev. Royal G. Wilder, who had just returned from missionary service in India. Ten years later, the magazine came under the joint editorship of Dr. Arthur T. Pierson and Dr. James M. Sherwood, by whom it was greatly enlarged and improved. Since then it has continued to make progress, keeping pace with the onward march of Christian Missions.

On the death of Dr. Sherwood in 1890, Dr. Pierson became editor-inchief and so continued until his death twenty-one years later. Under his management, The Review became very widely known and influential and brought the world field into vision. It was especially helpful to pastors and other Christian workers, not only as a storehouse of missionary facts, but because of its leadership in high spiritual standards and its interpretation of the signs of the progress of Christianity. The Review has been famous for its breadth of vision and its powerful articles by Christian leaders who have told the story of the miracles of missions and have recorded the lives and work of notable missionaries and native Christians.

MISSIONARY PROGRESS IN THIRTY YEARS.

The missionary situation has greatly changed since The Review was first established. This is seen in the development of great missionary movements such as those among women, students, young people and laymen. The study of the Science of Missions has made great strides during the last twenty years and missionary study classes and text-books have been a new and remarkable growth during the same period. When The Review was founded, there were only small denominational missionary magazines, while today some of the missionary organizations publish two or three periodicals of their own, besides which there are several scientific and popular quarterlies or monthles.

During the life of The Review, the missionary situation has also changed in the bringing of closer co-operation among the various missionary organizations. The world is now viewed as a whole with the purpose of supplying the most needy fields with the Gospel. The denominations have united in annual home and foreign missionary conferences and endeavor to lessen the waste of energy due to overlapping. They study unitedly the needs of the various fields in order to accomplish the most effective work for the intellectual, social and spiritual transformation of mankind.

THE FUTURE OF The Review.

The Review will continue as an interdenominational and international magazine, serving the whole missionary cause. In view of the present prominence given to united effort, there is clearly greater need than ever for such a periodical. Dr. John R. Mott has said repeatedly that the service rendered by The Review makes it indispensable. The Home Mission Council, representnting the various denominational Boards, and the Foreign Mission Conference, which gathers annually at the Garden City, have both expressed their appreciation of the service rendered by The Review and have appointed committees to co-operate with the editor.

The editorial management will continue in the hands of Mr. Delavan L. Pierson, who has been for twenty-five years connected with the magazine and has been the editor-in-chief since the death of his father, Dr. Arthur T. Pierson, in 1911. Extensive improvements are planned, but the general purpose and editorial policy of the magazine will remain unchanged. Its aim is to give, month by mouth, and to interpret the most important missionary news gathered from all parts of the world and from all denominations. It furnishes valuable material for pastors and missionary speakers and devotes a large amount of space to Best Methods that have been discovered for use in Sunday schools, missionary societies and other organizations.

THE OCTOBER NUMBER.

Among the articles that will attract attention in the October number of The Review are:

"What Christianity is doing for China," by Hon. H. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambarrador at Washington.

"What Christianity has done for Japan," by Hon. T. Tanaka, Charge d'Affairs of the Japanese Legation at Washington.

"Daughters of the Night in Shanghai," by Miss M. C. Morris of the Door of Hope in Shanghai, China.

"Are the Turks worth Saving," by Rev. Charrles T. Riggs of Constantinople.

"A New Beginning," Editorial by Robert E. Speer, President of the Missionary Review Publishing Company.

The Review seems destined to serve its readers and the missionary cause even more efficiently than in the past. The Editor and Publishers invite correspondence to this end.

SEMINARY ALUMNI IN ZANESVILLE

The value of our theological seminary at Westminster to the denomination was demonstrated during General Conference one day when all the alumni present were asked to come forward with President Elderdice. The following responded:

Members of the General Conference—F. T. Benson, E. H. Van Dyke, G. W. Haddaway, J. A. Selby, F. H. Lewis, T. M. Johnson, R. F. Day, A. G. Dixon, C. E. Forlines, Clifford Kidd, J. H. Straughn, S. W. Rosenberger, A. F. Hess, T. H. Slater, B. M. Mitchell, S. W. Taylor, L. E. Oldaker, and C. W. Bates.

Visitors—J. L. Nichols, W. L. Morton, C. M. Elderdice, C. S. Heininger, F. L. Brown, H. W. Maier, J. R. Wright, G. G. Shurtz, A. R. Corn, J. A. Dudley, C. J. Kerlin, C. J. Morton, W. E. Grove, H. E. Orwick, F. W. Obee, D. L. Custis, and former student J. F. Bryan.

Eight Conferences, China and Japan were represented in the group.

WHERE TO GET LIGHT.

We should never move in uncertainty. It often happens that we harass ourselves about moving or acting when God would have us be still and do nothing. We go and ask God about it, but get no answer; we betake ourselves to friends for advice and counsel, but they cannot help us; for it is entirely a question between our own souls and the Lord. Thus we are plunged in doubt and anxiety. And why? Simply because the eye is not single; we are not following Jesus, "the light of the world." We may set it down as a fixed principle, a precious axiom in the divine life that if we are following Jesus we shall have the light of life. He has said it, and that is enough for faith.—Herald and Presbyter.

HABIT IN RELIGION.

Habit trains us into regular, easy, and accurate ways of doing things, releases us from debate and hesitation, effort and worry, sets us free to attend to novel situations, and lubricates life into delightful smoothness and liberty and joy. Habitual religion is ever the best, religion that has become habit and acts automatically and spontaneously. Jesus "entered as his custom was into the synagogue on the sabbath day." He went to church by habit and not by circumstance and caprice, and we shall attain strength and fruitfulness and joy in the Christian life in proportion as we develop the same spirit and practice. We do not do a thing well until we do it without thinking how. No one is a good mechanic who must think about how to hold his tool, and no one has good manners who is conscious of his manners. Not until the hand has forgotten the painstaking processes by which it was trained does it have true skill. The musician must practice long that he may play without practice. Unconsciousness of self is the final touch of perfection. So a Christian grace has not been thoroughly wrought into us until it acts unconsciously. When in vexation we must call upon our patience to come and help us out, we have not yet learned perfect patience. We ought to be patient without thinking of it or knowing that we are patient. When in a matter of conscience we must run after conscience and wake it up and drag it into the case, our ethical sense is not yet well trained. Conscience ought to act without being asked or our thinking about it. Must an honest man try to be honest? No; he will be honest without trying. Faith that must ever be worked with and prodded into action is a weak faith. When a man must keep working with his stomach and lungs and liver, he has a poor set of vital organs; the healthy man does not know that he has any insides. So when we must keep working with our virtues they have not yet been educated into the perfection in which they will act spontaneously. It is true that we can reach such perfection only through long discipline. We must try hard that we may do without trying. Moses "wist not that his face shone." He was filled with the glory of the Lord, and he forgot himself. —Banner.

THE MODERN REVOLT AGAINST CHRISTIAN MORALS.

One of the marked characteristics of modern thought is the widespread rejection of the Christian ideal of conduct. There was once a time when men everywhere, no matter what their intellectual beliefs, accepted the Christian ideal of character and conduct, so that J. S. Mill expressed the general view when he said that the modern skeptic could not do better than so frame his conduct that it should meet with the approval of Jesus Christ.

It cannot be said, however, that this is any longer the case. In constantly increasing numbers those who reject Christian beliefs are also rejecting Christian standards of life and conduct. Nor is there anything surprising about this. As L. S. Thornton says in his recent book, "Conduct and the Supernatural": "The repudiation of Christian moral standards is a direct and entirely natural result of the earlier rejection of Christian dogma. No doubt far-seeing theologians foresaw all along that this would be the case, but those who repudiated the Christian creed did not themselves see it. It is indeed safe to say that they had no suspicion of it. There are still, perhaps, a few pedants who declare that the essence of Christianity is to be found in the Sermon on the Mount and that one can be a good Christian without taking any notice of the traditional dogmas. Such people are living in a fool's paradise, for all around them at this moment are living proofs of the fallacy of their opinions. If there is one thing that can be said with absolute certainty about this whole movement with which we are dealing, it is that the revolt against Christian ethics is due to the previous repudiation of the doctrines upon which it is founded. The two things, belief and conduct, are indissolubly bound together; they are parts of one whole, as the roots and the fruit are both alike parts of one tree, organically connected.''

It would be well, it seems to us, if there was a clearer recognition of this truth on the part of Christian men and women. Too many of them fail to perceive that the Christian life is the fruit of Christian faith, and hence that, if Christian beliefs were to disappear from men's convictions, it would not be long before Christian ideals of character and conducct would also disappear. In the long run the two stand or fall together, so that those who are doing most to eradicate Christian beliefs from the minds of men are at the same time doing most to eradicate from their minds Christian ideals of character and conduct.

If this were more generally recognized, we would not find so many saying that as long as men manifest the Christian virtues in their daily lives it is a matter of no great moment what they believe. No doubt Christian beliefs are valueless if they do not issue in Christian lives, and no doubt many continue to manifest many Christian virtues after they have given up Christian beliefs, especially if they are living in Christian communities; but that does not alter the fact that Christian ideals of character and conduet are themselves the fruit of Christian beliefs and that if the Christian beliefs were to sink out of men's minds it would not be long before Christian ideals of character and conduct would be a thing of the past.

Doctrines are not life! Certainly not. No one, as far as we know, ever said they were. But does it follow that they are not indispensable to life? In fact, we might as well say that apple trees are useless as long as we have apples as to say that Christian beliefs are useless as long as we have Christian lives, seeing that the connection between the two in the one case is no more vital than it is in the other.—Presbyterian.

For the Optimist's Corner.

Sure we are encouraged: 55 professions in our Eden meeting; 31 have joined our church, representing about $150,000 in property (the new members, I mean). An old debt of over $100 on church paid off. $71.28 raised for Church Extension. I also saw the men building the foundation for a new four thousand church at Hollister—M. P., too. The church in Charlotte almost completed. Yes, the water's fine—come on in. Swaringen please correct if figures are wrong. Praise the Lord for His help. N. G. Bethea.

Charlotte, Aug. 14.

FROM PRESIDENT DAVIS.

Dr. Johnson and his commission need no introduction to the Methodist Protestant Church. Their mission is their introduction! We bespeak for them the hearty co-operation of every unit of influence in all the borders of our Zion. The Forward Movement is not commissioned to anybody. It is a denominational movement, comprehending our every conference and congregation, our every interest, our every institution, our every personal unit, to the last minister and to the last member of the whole denomination.—''Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward!''

And let no one doubt the readiness of the people to answer the summons of duty! Methodist Protestants will respond to the call with glad hearts. Indeed many of them have anticipated the Forward Movement and are already on the way! The principal function of a Forward Movement is simply to move forward; and many pastors and congregations in every quarter of our denomination have taken up the essential activities of the progressive church on their own initiative, and have reaped a great harvest for the kingdom. Go thou and do likewise!

Lyman E. Davis, President of the General Conference.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Received from N. C., May 1 to July 1.

F. R. Smith, Siler City, $6.55; S. E. Hauser, Shoals, $3.75; J. W. Stowe, Mecklenburg, $3.60; J. Norman Wills, Greensboro, $67.24; J. A. Abernethy, Creswell Ct., $3.40; S. A. Alexander, Mt. NOTICE TO PASTORS.

You will please send to Bro. C. W. Bates, Asheville, N. C., and to me at Graham, N. C., the name and address respectively of delegate and alternate to Annual Conference. Do not neglect it as it is important. G. W. Holmes.

WHY?

Why is it that so many of our strong charges have neglected thus far to collect expenses for General Conference Delegates? When I see such charges as Alamance, Anderson, Buncombe, Cleveland, Davidson, Graham and Haw River, Haw River, Lincoln, Mt. Hermon, Mt. Pleasant, Orange, Randleman, Spring Church, Vance, Why Not, Yadkin College, Yarboro and several others have paid nothing, I shudder for the future of our church. Many other charges have paid only a part of the assessment. Who is to blame? Laymen, if your pastor has not made an effort to secure this assessment, I shall appreciate it if you will inform me.

R. A. Swaringen, Chmn. of Finance Committee.

Notice to Members of Brotherhood.

This is to notify members of the Conference Brotherhood that the accounts of mortuary call 18 and sick benefit calls 2 and 3 have been closed. I kept these accounts open a long time after they should have been closed in order that negligent members might pay their assessments.

In case any should want to pay to the recipients of these benefits please send direct to Mrs. C. E. M. Raper, Reidsville, any assessment for mortuary call 18, to Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk, Concord, N. C., for sick benefit call 2, and Bro. J. E. Pritchard for sick benefit call 3.

—Dressed in men's clothes and well supplied with money, Miss Elizabeth Huber, a college graduate, of Owensmouth, Calif., started to beat her way across the country in ''hobo'' fashion. As she was riding beneath a box car on a freight train her grasp suddenly loosened and she fell, the wheels passing over both legs. She died a few hours later.

—Overcome with grief because her husband had enlisted in the national guard and was preparing to leave for Mexico, Mrs. Harriet Parrone, 20 years old, of Washington, D. C., swallowed poison.

—In order to cure herself of sleepwalking Mrs. C. R. Smith, of Alexander, Ind., now ties herself with a cord to a buttonhole of her husband's pajamas. When she attempts to leave the bed he is immediately awakened and stops her.

studied hers long and carefully and stoutly declared it wasn't so. In defense of the wigglers that bore her name she even grew wrathful and so far forgot her admiration for Tad that nobody knows what might have happened if their Uncle Jeffry had not been near. He showed them that they were both right. He told them that the fringes were a kind of gills through which the pollywogs breathed; and while Tad's "specimens" had the fringelike gills on their necks, Polly's had changed their outside gills for a set within. He told them, too, that, though pollywogs and fish live in the water, they have to have air to breathe, but that they breathe air mixed with water.

The puzzles those pollywogs were! No sooner had one thing been learned about them than it was found the case was quite different. Very fast they grew, and it was not many days before little "buds," as Polly called them, seemed to be sprouting out on their sides. In wonderment they were watched until it was discovered that the "buds" were growing into legs. Then the children's Uncle Jeffry advised putting the "specimens" into a tub out of doors where the air was cooler and the growing pollywogs might enjoy a larger water world. But with this change new complications arose, for Polly was no longer able to identify her own. Again their uncle came to the rescue. "They have two names, Polly," he said. "One of their names is pollywog, and the other is tadpole."

"O, they belong to us both," declared Polly. After that they called their "specimens" "polly-tads."

Great was their consternation soon to find that their pollywogs were losing their tails.

"The tails have been absorbed," said wise Uncle Jeffry. With the loss of their tails and the growth of legs, other changes took place even more wonderful. The outer skin was cast off; their fishlike mouths grew wide and froglike; eyes popped out from under the skin; the little puzzles came up into the air to breathe; and, instead of feeding longer on leaves, they grew flesh-loving. Finally there dawned a day when the tub was empty. Polly and Tad were in distress until their Uncle Jeffry gave them the consolation that their specimens had grown up and had gone out into the wide, wonderful world, seeking their own food and their fortunes. Many nights thereafter, when they listened to the "pied frogs' orchestra," Polly and Tad were sure they heard familiar voices.—The Presbyterian.

WHEN ROB BURNED HIS SELFISHNESS.

Rob opened the bottom drawer of the sewing-machine and took out a sagging pasteboard box that jingled merrily when he shook it. He carefully took off the broken lid and dropped a hot, sticky cent in beside a big family of its mates.

"I need only two more," he boasted, "to buy that squirming snake at Taylor's, an' then won't I have fun?"

Mrs. Dean laid down the gingham rompers she was mending for little Alvin and looked at Rob in a way that he did not just like. "But Alvin would be afraid of a snake," she suggested; "and you don't want to buy anything he can't play with, do you?"

Rob opened his eyes wide. "It isn't for Alvin," he explained. "I earned every cent of the money, an' it's for me."

His mother shook her head, and Rob pushed the drawer shut on his precious box and ran away.

Alvin was not there, and Rob thought that it would be a splendid time to play with his candy soldiers. Alvin loved to play with them, too, but they were Rob's men, and he was very careful with them. They were too wobbly to stand alone, so he stood them up in their box and was pushing it along the porch in a make-believe march when he suddenly heard the gate open. It was Alvin coming. He was carrying a big red apple in each hand. Rob scrambled up, snatched the box of soldiers, and ran to the kitchen, when he turned round and round, looking for a place to hide it. At last he spied the open oven and had barely time to push it in and slam the door shut when his little brother ran in, holding the apples as high as his short arms could reach.

"Wobby may have the biggest one," he cried, "'cause I had a ride with Uncle George."

Rob flushed guiltily, but took the biggest apple. Then both boys sat down on the steps to eat the apples. Before they were half through Gitty Gray came marching up the walk, holding her head high, and from her hand dangled a sure-enough live kitten.

It was an hour before Rob thought of his soldiers again and ran to the oven, but they were not there. There was nothing in the box but a red-and-blue waxy jumble of tinsel swords.

"Oh, oh, my soldiers!" he cried. "They're every one melted up."

When he told his mother what had happened to his soldiers, she looked sober and stroked her boy's tousled hair.

"They w-ere g-g-good soldiers, too," Rob sobbed, "and I was their captain."

"Poor fellows!" said his mother gently. "A captain who would force soldiers to such an end as that is about the worst one in the world."

Rob raised his sorrowful face and stared at his mother. Had she not understood that it was her own little boy who had put them there?

"It wasn't my boy, Rob," she went on, as if she knew what he was thinking. "It was old Captain Selfishness, and he doesn't care much about others, just so he has a good time himself. Poor little soldiers!"

Rob's mouth opened while he stared silently; then he turned and went sheepishly away. Just before supper he dashed into the house again. In one hand he carried an empty pasteboard box, which he carefully put away in the bottom drawer of the sewingmachine. In the other he held a lumpy package. His fingers trembled as he untied the string and took out two sacks of marbles. He dropped one of them into Alvin's glad hands and hugged the other one close to his breast and then glanced shyly at his mother, who came straight over and kissed him.—Boys and Girls.

HOPE, FAITH AND CHARITY.

As we sit in our study room and read of the history of old Rome, we read that there was a time when an earthquake shook its foundation, which opened a wide chasm in the very heart of the city. The Roman people tried in vain to fill this chasm. At last an oracle declared it would never be filled until the most precious thing in Rome was thrown into its depths. A brave young man, Marcius Curtius, hearing the oracle, said that courage was the most precious thing in Rome. He clad himself in full armor, mounted his steed, and calling aloud to the gods to witness that he devoted himself to his country's weal, he made his horse leap into the yawning gulf. The legend declared that the chasm instantly closed.

A greater chasm rent this old world when sin entered in than ever cracked the foundation of Rome. Jesus Christ heard the oracle, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." He clad himself in his Father's glory and in his own glory, the Father witnessed his Son's departure. It was no doubt a sad one, but a legion of noble men, like Marcius of old clad in full armor of faith, had died to fill this chasm. But it was as impossible. Christ said, "Hope, faith and charity, but the greatest of these is charity (or love." Therefore as Christ hung upon the cross methinks I hear him say, Greater love hath no man than this (John 15:13). And it was this love that caused the chasm of perdition to be filled.

May we be ever mindful of those words of Kipling which say,

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget."

BAD TEETH CAUSE OF REJECTIONS.

The fact that bad teeth was the cause of more rejection among the enlisted men of the State militia than any other defect, perhaps, is sufficient testimony, says the State Board of Health, as to the direct relation that exists between bad health or inefficiency and bad teeth. As a matter of fact, no greater lesson has been learned by the troopers and the people in general as a result of the recent mobilization of troops than the importance of a sound body and the dependence of a sound body upon sound teeth and a clean mouth.

The Germans years ago realized that the health of their soldiers depended no little upon the condition of their mouths and teeth, and during the present war dental clinics have been maintained regularly wherever the soldiers have been encamped. Other armies have not been slow to follow Germany's example and now good teeth for soldiers is considered as much a necessary part of their equipment as their guns.

The soldier boys have taught a valuable lesson as regards the importance of good teeth, as they have the value of anti-typhoid vaccination.

WHAT IT COSTS TO BE SICK.

Each Workman Loses Nine Days and Pays Six Dollars for Medicine.

A committee which has been for several years engaged in gathering information concerning the time lost by workmen through sickness has recently made a report according to which each one of the 30,000,000 wage earners of the United States loses annually nine days' time from illness. In addition there is an expenditure of six dollars per capita for medical treatment, a total loss through sickness of $500,000,000.

An examination into the causes of sickness showed that almost all were preventable; the chief causes being errors in diet, the use of alcohol, tobacco, unventilated living rooms, dusty, dark, unventilated factories and workshops.

The committee was of the opinion that proper living that would bring about a reform in habits and living conditions would easily reduce the cost of illness to one tenth the present sum, as wage earners for the most part are able-bodied men and women. The committee believes further that compulsory health insurance similar to that adopted in Great Britain last year would also be an effective remedy in reducing the cost of illness.—State Board of Health.

DAD AND I.

We walked along the border, dad and I,
As the sun was welding gold into the sky;
He was old, and I was young,
Standing on the bottom rung,
Thinking tearful thoughts of parting by and by.

We talked along together, dad and I,
Of others he had known in years gone by,
Of loved ones who had gone
Across the border one by one—
And I felt their hallowed presence very nigh.

We sang together, dad and I;
A deeper soul within me made reply:
Be to him a worthy son,
For his race will soon be run.
And I heard a plaintive echo from on high.

We prayed together, dad and I,
For we felt the time of separation nigh,
When his soul would fly away
Far above a bed of clay.
And I closed my frail petition with a sigh.

How deep were my emotions in that hour!
For I knew that Death was suing for his dower;
But I strangled in my throat
An uprising tearful note
And hurled a youth's defiance at his power..

But we rode along the border, dad and I,
For in the lightless morn I said "Good-by."
He's riding just before,
And I'll see him nevermore
Till the summons comes to meet him in the sky.

We'll glide along the border, dad and I,
When the age-old sun has failed far Eden's sky.
The grave can't hold its prey,
For I heard its Master say:
"He that lives, believes in me, shall never die."

—W. L. Hutchins in Christian Adv.

The real reason of religious indifference to-day is the pressure of the world. When professing Christians forsake the courts of the Lord and neglect the means of grace, their desertion has its deep-seated cause in worldliness. The fault is in themselves. . . . The disciples who went back and walked no more with Jesus were the ones of whom Jesus said, "But there are some of you that believe not." Those who desert the Christian cause do so because of unbelief. Their profession does not have back of it the new birth from above. They follow their natural bent when they forsake Christ. The pressure of the world, finding no resistance from any inner grasp of Christ, bears them along into the ranks of the deserters.—The Christian Intelligencer.

Would Have Known Better.

Lord Cockburn, after a long stroll, sat down on a hillside beside a shepherd, and observed that the sheep selected the coldest situation for lying down. "Mac," said he, "I think, if I were a sheep, I should certainly have preferred the other side of the hill." The shepherd answered, "Ah, my lord; but, if you had been a sheep, ye would have had mair sense." And Lord Cockburn was never tired of relating the story and turning the laugh on himself.—Tit-Bits.

Here Are the Opinions of Some Eminent Authorities

Dr. J. H. KELLOGG, Supt. Battle Creek Sanitarium, Battle Creek, Mich., says: "Unquestionably not only the most authoritative but the most readable and most comprehensive book on personal hygiene which has ever been published."

NATHAN STRAUS, New York City, writes: "The volume is full from cover to cover of practical, sensible ideas for the conservation of human life."

Dr. EUGENE C. HOWE, Department of Hygiene, Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., says: "It is the biggest thing that has happened in hygiene. We have had thirty copies put into the general library for reference use for my class in Personal Hygiene."

THE NEW YORK TIMES says: "A unique importance attaches to this publication by virtue of the preeminence of the men whose conclusions it embodies. A volume, the scientific accuracy of which is vouched for by William J. Mayo, M.D., ex-President of the American Medical Association; Alexander Graham Bell, M.D., Board of Scientific Directors, Eugenics Record Office; Major-Gen. William C. Gorgas, and about ninety other men renowned in the fields of medicine, surgery, bacteriology, industrial hygiene, etc., may well be accepted as the most authoritative epitome thus far available in the great but hitherto neglected realm of individual hygiene."

Dr. RUPERT BLUE, Surgeon-General U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.: "It is the true story of personal hygiene, told in a plain and straightforward manner."

Dr. LUTHER H. GULICK, Pres. of Campfire Girls of America: "If its teachings could be put into effect, humankind would reach a new level in a single year."

Dr. S. S. GOLDWATER, formerly Commissioner of Health of New York City: "Cannot every practitioner in the country be requested to promote the circulation of the book?"

Surgeon-General W. C. GORGAS, War Department, Washington, D. C.: "It is the most practical and useful book on the subject that I know of."

Dr. HARVEY W. WILEY, Pure Food Expert: "I give the book my unqualified approval."

DIED.

In Memory of Pearle Octavia Barbee.

June 21, 1916, at the dawn of a bright and beautiful day the angel of God took back the soul of Pearle Octavia Barbee into a far more glorious day—her eternal home not made with hands. She is asleep with those that sleep in Jesus. "Blessed sleep from which none ever wakes to weep." She was nine years, six months and 21 days old. God sent his gardener who is the reaper death to transplant one of his choicest flowers to a beautiful flower garden in the paradise of heaven, where shedding forth her delightful fragrance she will again bloom forth in more beauty, in the garden of God. Her work on earth finished, she will begin anew in that celestial city where nothing ever fades or dies, but where we, when we have tried to do God's will and lived as best we could, will not lay down our work, but will in some grander immortal way complete in heaven what we have been unable to finish here. We will live anew in God's holy paradise. So we want to say to the bereaved, Look not at the grave, think not about the body sleeping so peacefully, but of the never dying soul that is not dead but has put on new life in a land where there is no sorrow. Sometime with God's help you can go to her when your work on earth is done, you too can live anew in that land whose beauties and glories no tongue can declare. Prepare to meet her in the great beyond, for she is asleep in Jesus, and just before she entered the mansion which Jesus said "I go to prepare for you," she reached out her hands and called "Jesus!" So when we think of our loved ones being with Jesus, the Saviour of the world, sheltered from life's temptations, from the cares and dread alarms, why should we murmur? Jesus calls them unto him. Will we meet them when life closes? By the grace of God, we will meet you on Canaan's shore. The funeral was at Mitchell's Grove, conducted by Rev. A. G. Dixon, after which the body was laid to rest in the cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

A sweet and precious flower we thought was ours to love,
Was gathered by the angels into the home
above.

Martha Parsons.

—Bro. J. K. Osborne had an accident last week while at work which resulted in a severe sprain in the muscles of one arm, almost paralyzing in its effects. We hope that a few days' rest will restore him.

One of Kernersville's Best Church Members Gone.

On July 22nd Bro. S. B. Nelson, one of our best members, passed on to receive his reward. Bro. Nelson was, without doubt, one of the most loyal and faithful members of the church I have ever seen. If he were not at church I got ready to visit him, for I knew that he was sick or that something had happened that made it impossible for him to be there. Not only was he faithful and loyal but he was a good man. Perhaps not all men would speak well of him, (for where will you find a man of whom all do speak well?) and yet I have never heard any one say aught against Bro. Nelson.

Bro. Nelson was sick for nearly two months. From the beginning of his illness he did not have much hope of getting well, and began to think about and arrange his business affairs. Among other things he sent to the treasurer of the board of stewards the full amount of his assessment for the church. I mention this last to show his faithfulness in meeting his obligations to his church and his God.

The relatives and friends of Bro. Nelson have my sympathy and prayers. My prayer is that they all may live as he lived and prepare to meet him in the land of the blessed. L. W. Gerringer, Pas.

Bro. C. H. Beck's Son Fatally Hurt.

It is with deepest sympathy we are compelled to announce that the eldest son of Dr. Charles H. Beck, secretary of the Board of Home Missions, was injured while at work on Saturday, July 29, and died early the Sunday morning following. He was buried the following Tuesday. The sun that goes down at midday is always a sad and heart breaking sight. May the tender mercies of God sustain our dear brother and his family under this great bereavement.—Methodist Protestant.

Sruprise Birthday Dinner.

A surprise birthday dinner and reunion of the family of Mr. B. W. Johnson was celebrated at his beautiful country home near Stokesdale Aug. 6th, in honor of his 77th birthday. At 12:30 o'clock dinner was served under the beautiful elm and hickory trees on the lawn. Those present were his wife and daughter Nina Holly and Willis who reside at home; Mrs. I. B. Hudson, the only sister of Mr. Johnson; Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Coe and son, Charles, Jr.; Cornelius and children, Hassie, Elba, Nellie, Mary, Cary, Carrie and Herbert; Ira, Cary and Nick, of Greensboro; Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Thomas and Frances of Summerfield.

—According to a report that came by way of Holland, peace demonstrators, principally women, marched from Vienna recently to the residence of the emperor and demanded that Austria-Hungary make a separate peace with Russia. A number of women eluded the guards about the castle grounds, got in to the castle, and shouted their demands beneath the windows of the emperor's private apartments. The women were placed under arrest and machine guns were later added to the equipment of the castle guards.

—An inventive Dane has brought out a substitute for the ordinary type of refrigerator which uses ice. His idea is to so arrange the piping in dwellings that all the cold water used is conducted through the rear of the iceless refrigerator. Since a considerable quantity of water is drawn in the course of a day, the refrigerator is kept cool. The invention has proved so popular in Denmark that refrigerators of this kind are being installed in many new houses.—Pathfinder.

WHO SHOULD BE VACCINATED AGAINST TYPHOID?

The question, Who should be vaccinated against typhoid fever? has recently been answered by a noted physician of this country. He says all who come under the following heads should be vaccinated against typhoid as their positions largely increase their chances for contracting it: Drummers and railroad men; all vacationists, especially campers, people who travel much; practicing physicians and nurses; all people who live in towns and small cities; people who live in the country; people who live in a town or community where typhoid is epidemic; people who eat at various hotels and restaurants; people who have no means of knowing whether their food has been free from flies and filth; and finally all people who have not big bank accounts or who have loved ones dependent on them.

The doctor does not say as much but he evidently means to include the whole world for fear somebody will wilfully be left out. He does not want the responsibility laid at his door if some one should excuse himself from the above list and should contract typhoid fever and die.

Another doctor who does not want to be responsible for any person's remaining unvaccinated and contracting typhoid fever and perhaps dying says that there are only two classes of people whom he does not advise to take the treatment—the dead and those who have already been vaccinated.

ASHEVILLE WINS DISTINCTION.

Asheville has again won distinction. Her sanatoria and boarding houses for tuberculosis sufferers are the safest in the country. The 1916 Tubersulosis Directory compiled by the National Tuberculosis Association says that Asheville, North Carolina, is the only community in the entire United States whose boarding houses and sanatoria approximate the minimum standard as to rules and regulations for governing the same. Asheville is listed as having two sanatoria and ten boarding houses for tuberculous people which follow the rules set down as the minimum standard.

The minimum standard for such houses requires that there be provision for outdoor sleeping; that sputum cups be used by patients and that proper disposal be made of sputum and container; that buildings must be clean, sanitary and in good repair, with running water and suitable means of sewage disposal, also with adequate fire protections; that rooms and bedding be kept thoroughly clean and disinfected, especially before being used by another patient; that food must be of good quality and that the diet include fresh milk and eggs; that all patients be under care of physician and that buildings be inspected monthly by a physician, and that there be nursing supervision of all patients and nursing care of patients in bed.

The State Board of Health says that Asheville was the first city in the United States to control the fly nuisance, that her milk supply is probably the purest, that she has gone further than any other town toward exterminating weeds and becoming a mecca for hay fever sufferers, and that now she has the distinction of having the safest sanatoria and boarding houses in the United States for tuberculosis sufferers. Her splendid achievements, particularly in health matters, are an inspiration to other cities and towns, especially other North Carolina towns.

WE EAT TOO MUCH.

Medical science declares that practically seven-eighths of our ills are due to overfeeding. Colds in the head are often due to eating too much.

It may be claimed that our own well-spread boards are meager compared to those of our ancestors. Probably, but our ancestors were hardy and able to throw off the effects of a hearty meal. We do not take into consideration the great difference between their life and ours. As it is, we eat altogether too much food for our health and comfort, and the fashionable remedy for most ailments is semi-starvation for a period of varying length.

Edison says that he has not only become convinced that mortals sleep too much, but that they eat many times more than they should. He is proving his beliefs by personal experiments, and says that his power to work and endure fatigue has increased to an amazing degree.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

HENS ON THE FARM.

The farmer should be a good poultryman.

The average general farmer is best equipped for keeping a good, large flock of laying hens profitably, because he has a wealth of natural resources at hand which may be supplemented at different times of the year. It is an easy matter for him to have green food for them to graze on at all times at a minimum cost, and there is no good excuse for not having them. These green crops for grazing should be planted close up to the hen-house or farm buildings and should be put in for the express purpose of being a grazing crop for the hens. If they soon eat the crops up, more should be quickly planted.

Any grain is good for them. Wheat, oats, rye, or clovers furnish good grazing crops, and best of all is a small plot of alfalfa.

The hens should also have the best of care and attention in the fall and winter. A good, warm house is one of the first requisites. This does not mean one of the open affairs so often found on some farms, but it does mean a cheap, practical, well constructed and properly ventilated one which faces the south and is open in front. Plans for a house of this kind will be furnished by the Office of Poultry Clubs free of charge. The house may be put up at a cost of not over $20 for the housing of fifty to seventy-five hens.

Good feed is another requisite. The hens need wheat or oats for the grain feed, anl wheat bran, middlings, ground corn and oats for the mash food. If this kind of food is given and the use of so much corn done away with, the yield of eggs will be doubled and the quantity, quality, size, color of yolk and flavor of the egg will be greatly influenced. Also, to produce what a discriminating market demands, the scrub bird must be done away with and the farm stocked with some one variety of pure-bred poultry. This may be done easily and with a small outlay of money. So there is again no real excuse for not having pure-bred poultry; for, without them, a high-class product can never be produced. A high-class, uniform product demands the best prices and pure-bred birds produce this uniformity.—Extension Farm-News.

FOR BURNS.

Lime water, olive oil and glycerine mixed in equal parts and applied to a burn will relieve the pain. An application of tar is also excellent, as it excludes the air. Common baking soda is an old and reliable remedy, though it has the disadvantage of causing intense smarting when first applied. A paste made by slightly moistening powdered borax is very cooling and effective. Great relief may likewise be obtained by bathing the burn in borax water.—Selected.

—Following a suit begun by the U. S. government more than three years ago under the Sherman anti-trust law, the Corn Products Refining Co., with its several allied concerns, was recently dissolved. The decision declares that the purpose of the company was to fix prices and control production by suppressing other companies. The Corn Products Refining Company was an $80,000,000 corporation.

—More than 500 men and women workers in a shoe factory in Lynn, Mass., recently struck, refusing to work with one of the employees, a young girl, who would not salute the American flag. A meeting was called and the heads of the concern ordered the girl dismissed. It is said that officials of the union to which she belongs will demand her expulsion.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St.,

—The editor was doubly privileged last Sunday: his visit to Mebane, looked forward to with pleasure, was supplemented by a visit to Chestnut Ridge in the afternoon to attend children's day service. (Bro. Sykes and his wife took Bro. and Mrs. Kennett and myself over in their new Ford.) The principal feature of the afternoon service was an earnest and moving address by Bro. Kennett. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, was also present, making a few remarks. Bro. Kennett officiated in a marriage at ten A. M., made this address at three P. M., conducted the funeral service of Mrs. Wesley Jobe in Mebane at five P. M., and expected to preach at 8 P. M. We were glad to find Mrs. Kennett in improved health, and to hear good report of Bro. Kennett's work in Mebane. We dare not tell just what we did hear—it might make him vain.

DAILY CHOICE OF OCCUPATION.

Choice of occupation cannot be made once for all. It is more or less a daily matter as long as we live. Our main work may be mapped out for us a year ahead or ten years ahead, but each day brings to us occasion to put forth some of our energies in unexpected ways.

The Good Samaritan was intent on other business when he came upon the wounded man by the wayside. So were the priest and the Levite. The unexpected discovery of the wounded man brought a new occasion for a new output of energy. The priest and the Levite did not respond to the call of the occasion: they passed by, leaving the wounded man to his fate. Not so with the Good Samaritan. Because he was good, he responded to the call for brotherly kindness. He chose a new occupation for the time being—that of caring for the injured man.

Life is not as simple as we sometimes try to make it. We would fit ourselves to a little groove and remain in it. God would not have it so. We are more than cogs in the wheels of the world's mechanism. We are first of all spirit-beings—we are living souls placed in a grand plexus of living souls. We have also a material setting—we are connected with and dependent on the material world. But this lower connection should not be allowed to interfere with free action in the higher realm of spirit. We will sometime be released from our material setting. The spiritual relationship with other souls will still exist.

Out of this spiritual relationship come daily calls for new enterprise and new occupation. To respond to them all fittingly is a great achievement. We must be on the alert to recognize the opportunities life brings to us to help other souls, and we must study to know how to care for those that Providence places within our way. We must not make mere accidents of the providences of God and refuse to hear the call of need that is directed especially to us. The world is marvelously ruled and overruled to bring to men the opportunity to be Good Samaritans. Love to our neighbors is developed by helping our neighbor. Our neighbors are made to suffer, it may be, that our pity may be awakened and our love be called forth.

If we pass through life and fail to learn to love our fellowmen as we love ourselves, will not life have been a failure to us?

Our occupation, regular and occasional, should be an assertion of benevolence. In choosing what we will do, we should not simply consider what we like to do, or what we can do most proficiently, or what will yield us the largest return, but we should consider first of all and most of all in what way we can contribute most to the world's weal and to God's glory.

Let this principle rule in all choice of occupation, whether for the moment, the day, or the life-time, and life's total achievement will be best and greatest, and the final reward and satisfaction will be highest.

—A missionary paper for ten cents a year! Truly it is astonishing in these times of high-priced print paper. But the Missionary News is published monthly and will be sent to you a whole year for ten cents. Address Missionary News, 150 Fifth Ave., New York. This paper is issued by the Department of Foreign Evangelism of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The object of the publication is to inform people regarding mission fields and opportunities,—a great and interesting subject to all live Christians. We trust that our readers will avail themselves of this very reliable source of missionary information and inspiration. If we only knew more of missions, we would do more and wonder that we did not know more and do more before.

ONCE-A-MONTH PREACHING.

Once-a-month preaching is the next thing to no preaching at all. The fact that under the present plan of twelve Sunday services a year, and no pastoral work at all, our country churches have survived, proves that they were divinely established. No worldly enterprise could live for six months in the slipshod and stupid way we manage our churches.

It is by the foolishness of preaching that men are to be saved, and multiplied millions have seen the light through the once-a-month service; but how much we have lost in opportunity and in the joy of service, and how many other millions we have allowed to perish because we slept when we should have been at work, the Lord alone knows.

Our churches in the country are our plant beds and from them we have drawn our leaders in all lines of service. With the meager and pitiful means of growth and power these churches have enjoyed, they have managed somehow to produce the men who have moved the world! What a mighty contribution they could have made to mankind if they had been half managed!—Dr. Archibald Johnson.

THE HEART OF GOD'S SERVANT.

Not mine to mount to courts where seraphs sing
Or glad archangels soar on outstretched wing;
Not mine in unison with celestial choirs
To sound heaven's trump or strike the gentler wires;
Not mine to stand enrolled at crystal gates,
Where Michael thunders or where Uriel waits.
But lesser worlds a Father's kindness know;
Be mine some simple service here below—
To weep with those who weep, their joys to share,
Their pain to solace, or their burdens bear;
Some widow in her agony to meet;
Some exile in his new-found home to greet;
To serve some child of thine and so serve thee—
Lo, here am I! To such a work send me.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN.

A short time ago, after having listened to a great sermon by one of our distinguished preachers, I remarked in the presence of some brethren that the preacher missed a fine opportunity at a certain place in his sermon to put in some telling words in behalf of a better provision for our superannuated preachers. One of my very best ministerial friends chided me with the remark: "I am afraid that you have come to the place where you can see nothing but the old preachers." Well, I pleaded guilty, in part at least, to the charge—that is, to the extent that I am ready at all times to advocate the cause of these deserving men. And why not? So long has the superannuate been the forgotten man, so long has he sat under the shadows of neglect and suffered the injustice of an inadequate support after he has given his life unselfishly to the itinerant ministry that he deserves to have representatives among his brethren who will plead his cause whenever and wherever an opportunity is offered.

Answering the charge of my friend, let me use the language of another: "Every day a new mound covers the wearied, worn body of an aged Methodist minister. Yesterday you might have helped him; to-day you cannot. I do not appeal for him. His reward is ample. But I do appeal for his comrade who survives, for the aged companion of his trials and triumphs, and for the dependent orphans whose tears fill the eye of God. Their needs furnish your highest opportunity for holy service." Do not say, as Festus did to Paul, "Thou art beside thyself. Much learning [of the needs of the veterans] doth make thee mad." This cause has been on my mind and heart for years. If you realize the need and will contribute to relieve the "necessities of the saints"—the aged ministers and widows—I am sure that you will agree that "I speak the words of truth and soberness."—Rev. D. L. Collie, in Exchange.

AN OPEN LETTER AND APPEAL.

Realizing the paramount influence the press of our country has had, and will have in forming public opinion on the relations of the United States and Mexico, we appeal to all editors to use their power in the interest of truth sincerity and constructive statesmanship.

The popular conception of the Mexican situation is based on misinformation and ignorance. Very recently agitation and false ideas of the personality and aims of the Mexican leaders might have forced a war with a people oppressed, impoverished and exploited, who should have only patient sympathy, and wise and disinterested help from the government and citizens of our country.

There is great need for the press to place the facts before our people and to interpret them in a broad and enlightened spirit. The people can learn the truth through the press.

The occasion requires reporters trained by experience and study to observe and record the events and movements of real significance. There is equally great need for constructive editorial service to interpret the facts in the generous spirit of the true statesman and patriot.

The fundamental facts of the situation are, we believe, as follows:—

Mexico suffers from the misgovernment of centuries. The land has been, and is, held in vast tracts by private owners, of whom many are foreigners. While there are exceptions, nearly all these landholders have for generations reduced their tenants to peonage, or practical serfdom, and have forced them into ignorance and depraved conditions of life.

The vast natural resources of Mexico, in oil and minerals, have been made over by concessions to English, German, French, Dutch and American owners on such terms that the national wealth flows to other lands, and the native Mexican labor is exploited so that the workers continue impoverished and unenlightened.

The dictatorial and autocratic power of earlier presidents crushed out the democratic spirit and imposed throughout Mexico the rule of unscrupulous and all-powerful local political agents, who manipulated elections, administered the laws to suit the interests in power, and ruled with ruthless military authority.

Education, marriage and other social institutions have been church monopolies, and there have resulted ignorance and general neglect of what we consider duties of decent living. Insurrection, revolution and local anarchy have prevailed for a period of years.

From the chaos some order is gradually appearing. In the judgment of men competent to form an intelligent and fair opinion, the so-called First Chief and his assistants are endeavoring honestly and with a fair measure of success to restore government and redress the age-old wrongs of the Mexican people.

A large number of the states are at peace. As rapidly and justly as possible land is allotted to small holders on terms that guarantee continued cultivation of the soil and the independence of the workers. The local political autocrats of the earlier regime are being gradually supplanted by duly constituted civil officers, who represent the best element in their communities. The church monopolies are abridged and education and other important matters are placed under civil authority. In a number of states traffic in alcoholic drinks has been abolished with immediate good results.

There has developed an intense rivalry among the different states to see which can organize the greatest number of schools. Already there are said to be twenty times as many schools as in the last epoch of President Diaz, and under the influence of Carranza five hundred teachers have been sent to the United States to study modern pedagogy and school administration.

Several of the states, chiefly in the north, near the United States border, are unsettled and in insurrection. Roving bands of outlaws are abroad and lawless leaders are making trouble.

For a time such men will make raids and commit depradations not only in Mexico, but occasionally over the border in the United States.

The boundary between the United States and Mexico is 1,756 miles long, as far as from New York to Denver. Most of this distance is wild mountain and desert country, without roads and with very little water. For hundreds of miles there is no railroad and with very little water. For hundreds of miles there is no railroad on the Mexican side, and troops of either country must be transported on the United States railroad. Such a border cannot be patrolled so as to prevent occasional incursions by outlaw bands, and it is more criminal than foolish for the press to urge such chance acts of outlawry as a cause of war.

These in briefest form are some of the facts the people of the United States are entitled to know. If properly presented and supplemented, they will revolutionize public opinion.

Although there is need of co-operation with Mexico for police and patrol duty, our country does not need a large force of young and inexperienced troops on the border.

The army needed is a force of educators, teachers, doctors, sanitary engineers, farmers and agricultural experts, who will volunteer for terms of two or three years in the spirit of service, such as we rendered Cuba at her time of crisis. It would be legislation worthy of our country for the government to make a liberal appropriation for such co-operation. It could be done by a slight curtailment of the proposed naval program.

In conclusion we again appeal to the press of our country not only to exert its power in supplying (in larger measure) trustworthy information about Mexico, but also to take its true place in guiding the thought of America and the world along constructive lines of international service and good will. Such an editorial policy, widespread and consistent, will raise a discussion that has presented many unworthy and ignoble elements, to a place of enlightened, fraternal service worthy the press of a great democracy.

EATING HUMBLE PIE.

Long ago, in the British Isles, when men lived largely on the products of the chase, humble pie was a familiar dish. It was originally a meat or game pie, made for the servants of noblemen, and furnished a means of utilizing the less desirable parts of animals brought in from the chase. After a prolonged and successful hunt an enormous humble pie, sufficient for all the retainers on the estate, was made and eaten in the great kitchen after the nobleman and his guests had enjoyed the choicer portions. That sort of pie is still met in the rural districts of England, Scotland and Ireland.

Have you ever eaten any? Those who have tell us that it is a wholesome and savory dish. And if we never have even seen the kind of humble pie baked in an oven, another form of humble pie is often set before us. We are invited to eat a piece of humble pie every time we have made a blunder, every time our confident and loudly expressed opinions have proven mistaken opinions, every time we have been sure we were right and then have been shown that we are wrong. When any of these things happen to us, it is time to pass our plate and ask for a generous helping of humble pie.

It is a mark, not of weakness, but of strength of character, to be willing to confess one's mistakes and to shoulder the blame for them. The Bible tells us to be not "wise in your own conceits." It is splendid counsel for young people who are tempted to believe that they know it all.

Never turn up your nose at humble pie. It is wholesome, strengthening, and, though a little hard to swallow, leaves a good taste in the mouth.—King's Treasuries.

BRO. S. V. PICKENS HONORED.

The French Broad Hustler thus honors Bro. S. V. Pickens, of Hendersonville:

"While it is not generally known to the younger generation in the State, although it is a matter of record, the North Carolina Bar Association, strong and powerful association that it is, had its inception in the mind of Col. S. V. Pickens, retired lawyer of this place, who was instrumental in organizing theWestern North Carolina Bar Association here July 28, 1888. The state association grew out of the Western North Carolina Bar Association and today enjoys a large and enthusiastic membership. The prime movers in its organization, besides Colonel Pickens, were J. J. Osborne, W. M. Davies, W. A. Smith, T. J. Rickman and D. Stradley. Colonel Pickens introduced the resolution at a meeting of the above named lawyers which led to the organization of the Western North Carolina Bar Association."

—A great railroad strike now seems imminent. President Wilson has appealed to Congress for legislation to avert it. But as the strike has been called for Sep. 4 it does not seem probable that Congress will act in time to prevent the strike, even if the desired laws are passed. It is difficult to frame laws to prevent men's stopping work, though a man ought to work out the period of his contract if the other party does not violate his part of the contract.

"Though the ways of Zion mourn,
When her strong ones are called away,
Who like these have calmly borne
The heat and burden of the day.
Yet He who slumbereth not nor sleepeth,
His ancient watch around us keepeth;
Still sent from His creating hand
New witnesses for truth shall stand—
New instruments to sound abroad
The Gospel of a Risen Lord."

AND YET HE DIED.

Metchnikoff, the celebrated scientist, is dead. So great was his fear of the cancer germ that the effort to dodge its approach must have spoiled life of much of its pleasure. Here are some of his directions about eating:

"Never eat uncooked fruit. Take bananas, for instance. People think that because they have a thick skin they are protected from microbes. Nothing of the sort. I plunge them into boiling water before eating. I always pass my knives and forks and spoons through a Bunsen burner before using. All dishes are cooked. Water is filtered and then boiled. I never eat uncooked fruit. Strawberries ought to be plunged into boiling water a few minutes before consuming. It sounds troublesome, doesn't it? But it helps to avoid cancer germs."

He lived to be seventy-one. Millions of others have lived longer who never heard of the deadly germs of which many today are in such mortal terror. To become obsessed with the idea that "the bugs will get you if you don't watch out," is to fall into a sort of monomania.

And yet it is well to take all reasonable precaution.

LABOR SUNDAY.

In accordance with action on the part of the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and similar action on the part of the American Federation of Labor, the pastors of churches are urged to give appropriate attention to Labor Sunday, September 3.

The usual leaflet of printed suggestions and a suggested order of service for the day may be obtained of the Federal Council Commission on the Church and Social Service, 105 East 22nd Street, New York.

In no former war have the animals played so large a part as they have in this now raging. Besides the horses, mules and oxen, there are the dogs serving in many ways, the cats ridding the trenches of rats and mice, the carrier pigeons, and even the white mice of the submarines, which are taken aboard to give warning of any escape of gas. Well did Edward Everett Hale once say, "We are all in the same boat, animals and men."—Our Dumb Animals.

"Never lose your temper. Nobody wants it: all have enough of their own."

"MUCH OF A MAN."

You must read the first verse at well as the second in Isaiah's thirty-second chapter to get a whole picture. Reading the second verse alone makes confusion and unsatisfactory interpretation. We would read the verses so:

1. "Behold, a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

2. And a man shall be as a hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

The prophet sees the vision of a better day. His first look is at the throne, "Behold a King shall reign in righteousness." His second look it at the nobility: "And princes shall rule in judgment." Then he eyes the common people and tells what an ordinary man will be in that day: "And a man shall be"—who? Just a man. How much? The King's reign is set forth in a single phrase, the rule of the princes is alike briefly mentioned, but this common man towers up in the vision and rivets the attention of the prophet who cannot cease until his description is full of telling phrases, every one a golden text. So Christ's day has exalted the common man whom he can make a blessing full of calm comfort, and plenteous waters, and cool refreshment. There is opportunity then for every man to become "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

STORMS.

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew."

He who "digs deep" and "builds his house upon the rock" does not worry when he sees a storm approaching. He enters and spends the hour quietly reading while the rain pelts the window panes and the winds drive furiously against his walls and the thunders peal their bass staccatos in his ears.

Storm-proof is his house and the music is merrier when the winds are loud. Cedar-shingled is his roof and he boasts himself against the deluge of rain. This is his day of triumph. Oak beam and hewn stone would have been an expensive folly had there never been wind and rain to wrestle. Storms are joy showers to those who have built strong. He who has stood the test, against whose house the floods have burst in vain, has made a record and stands up vindicated by the work of his hands. Carlyle is said to have built his books as his father built stone houses. When the storms of human thought have swept whole libraries into the vast waste basket of forgotten things, books like his and other master builders will be bound in new vellum.

Christ predicted the storm. He knew that storms are inevitable in man's career, that man's spiritual atmosphere breeds storms and that he needs them to purify his air. He Himself is the Master Carpenter. They build well who hear his words and do them.

"CAN HE PREACH?"

Preachers who are good speakers have no difficulty in getting their salary. The people will pay for good speaking. The question of the salary is three-fourths of the time in the hands of the minister.

This does not mean that every preacher can be a great preacher—a star; nor does it mean that any preacher need resort to oratorical, or sensational, or undignified methods in speech. The people do not demand, yea, will not want such preaching, and the men who succeed and rise in the pulpit do not, nine-tenths of them, use such methods; but the churches do demand, and have a right to demand, good speaking, and no minister has a right to be a dull speaker.

His art, his business, his duty is not only to preach the truth but so to preach it that the people will be interested. Dullness in the pulpit, with all the issues at stake, is wicked. Better say one truth so that the people will listen and remember than to say twenty things so that they will forget them.

In our boyhood we had for a pastor a most excellent old minister, a graduate of Harvard, who had studied under Dr. Emmons. The good old man was learned and wrote excellent sermons, but he was as tame as tame could be.

In the little village there was a Baptist church, and our church and the Baptist had no sympathy. One Sunday the Baptist minister immersed half a dozen converts by cutting a hole in the ice. Our good old Father Davis could not stand that, and the next Sunday he preached upon the impropriety of such an act. He woke up; he quite shook the pulpit. No eye failed to watch him or to hear him. When we returned home mother said to father, "If Parson Davis loved sinners as much as he hates the Baptists, we should have some preaching;" and it was just criticism.

Not long ago a cultured deacon in one of our larger churches wrote asking about a young man who had been recommended to them. We wrote to him the man was a graduate of Yale and Harvard and had spent two years across the water. The deacon wrote back: "I don't care a fig for his A. M. or his Ph. D. Can he preach?"—Rev. Smith Baker, D. D., in Zion's Herald.

"Abiding in Christ means the perpetual presence of a force that regulates everything in my life according to the will of Jesus Christ."—Campbell Morgan.

"Let not the blessings we receive daily from God make us not to value or to praise Him because they be common."—Izaak Walton.

POWER OF BAD BOOKS.

"Some boys were arrested," says the Pennsylvania Herald, "for waylaying a traveler and robbing him. As they belonged to fairly good families the neighborhood was astonished. Why had they done it? An investigation brought out the fact that they had been reading stories of robberies, and had been especially attracted by one called 'Red Hand, the Robber.' What made them rob the man? The book did it.

"A passenger train was wrecked at Rome, N. Y., by some boys loosening the rails of the track. Fifteen deaths and sixty wounded. The youthful criminals, who had expected to rush in and rob passengers, were so frightened by the groans and screams of the wounded that they ran away in terror. One of them lost his hat as he ran. This led to their detection. Why had they done it? It was traced directly to the books they had read.

"Three young men at Danville, Illinois, so young that they were scarcely more than boys, read the lives of some of the notorious outlaws and criminals. A wise man has said, 'Show me the books you read, and I'll tell you what you are.' These boys became what they read. They undertook to rob a wealthy farmer; he resisted them, and they killed him to get his money."

Be careful what you read and what you think. A bad book is as poisonous as a rattlesnake. Keep out of bad company; and there is no worse company than a bad book, which makes you acquainted with bad men and leads you to commit bad deeds. Hear what the Apostle Paul says: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace be with you."—Herald and Presbyter.

SAFE TO OPEN SCHOOLS.

In answer to an inquiry as to whether or not it will be safe for the schools to open in September on account of the prevalence of infantile paralysis throughout the country, the State Board of Health says that there will likely be no danger of an outbreak of this disease at the opening of the schools, and certainly not if the schools open under the supervision of a medical inspector. The Board emphasizes the importance of providing this means of safety and prevention not only against infantile paralysis, but against all contagious diseases, particularly measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and diptheria. In this connection the Board says that there's far more danger of an outbreak or epidemic of measles, scarlet fever or diphtheria than of infantile paralysis and that the fatality as well as the serious after-effects of these diseases are very near as great as those resulting from infantile paralysis.

Another point stressed by the Board in connection with schools and epidemics is that to keep the school open in case of an epidemic and to employ a medical inspector is the best means of controlling an outbreak of any communicable disease. The school acts as a clearing house wherein the spread of the disease is checked.—State Board of Health.

WHEN ACCIDENTS HAPPEN—WHAT TO DO.

As accidents will happen, everybody should know what to do in the case of an emergency, particularly a serious accident to the body. Oftentimes, a few minutes' delay or ill directed aid may mean serious consequences, probably death, whereas a few simple first aid remedies will soon bring relief and lead to recovery.

Fainting spells or light states of unconsciousness are frequently encountered, and are brought about by lack of a sufficient blood supply for the brain. When a person begins to faint, he should sit in a chair, and hold his head by clasping the hands behind it and forcing it downward. If he is not able to do this he should be laid flat on his back with his feet elevated. Never give whiskey or any form of alcohol for fainting spells. It has long since been found to be a nerve, brain and heart depressant instead of a stimulant. Its use is quite harmful in depressed conditions. A few whiffs of aromatic ammonia, or a half-teaspoonful in a wineglassful of cold water is a good remedy, but to have the head low, the feet high, the clothing loosened and plenty of fresh air are the most important measures.

Slight cuts may be bathed with peroxide of hydrogen, but lacerated wounds, especially if dirt has gotten into the wounds, should be cleansed as soon as possible with gasolene or turpentine and then painted with iodine. If earth has been forced into the wounds they should be made to bleed freely and the services of a physician secured for advice against tetanus or lock jaw. As to burns in a mild degree a simple dusting powder of borated talcum or ordinary baking soda is sufficient. Oily or sticky dressings should not be encouraged.—State Board of Health.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

LITTLETON CIRCUIT.

The membership of Littleton please take notice: George W. Holmes, President of the N. C. Annual Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, will preach at the following churches on the dates named below:

Hawkins Chapel, Sunday, Sep. 17 at 11 A. M.; Corinth, Sunday, Sep. 17, at 3 P. M.; Littleton, Sep. 17, at 7:45 P. M.; Weavers Chapel, Monday, Sep. 18, at 11 A. M.; and Vaughan, Monday, Sep. 18 at 8 P. M.

The officials of the quarterly conference of Littleton Ct. will please remember the time and place for holding the third quarterly conference, Littleton, time 11 A. M., Saturday before the third Sunday in September. A full delegation is urged.

W. E. Swain.

Henderson—

Our Young People's Service, held last night, was a splendid success in every way. The processional by the choir and young people was an interesting feature. "Onward Christian Soldiers" was used as a processional hymn and the fifty voices in the march made it very effective. The sermon was preached by Mr. W. H. Longsworth, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Patterson, N. J. Mr. Longsworth and his family are spending their vacation here with Mrs. Longsworth's parents, brother and sister R. R. Satterwhite. His sermon was appropriate, forceful and effective. The choir also added much to the success of the service.

Our third quarterly conference was held on the 23rd, Wednesday night. Bro. R. R. Satterwhite was found to be elected delegate to Annual Conference and Bro. O. O. Young was elected alternate.

We begin our special meeting next Sunday. The pastor will do the preaching. Let those who read pray that these services may be greatly blessed.

During the week following the second Sunday it was my good fortune to be with Bros. Swaringen and Gerringer at Hollister. Being with these brethren, the association with the people at Hollister and surrounding community, meeting old friends, and the blessings that come from the meeting made this a week of genuine pleasure. Hollister was started in the pines about nine years ago as a lumber camp. Today it is a thriving little town with fine homes, good stores, two hotels, a large lumber manufacturing plant, a bank organized and the building to be erected at once, a good school building already up, and a church to cost forty-five hundred dollars in process of erection—an M. P. church. This town is made up of splendid people and is beginning to attract attention. Hollister has a future, and I shall not be surprised at all if we hold our Annual Conference there before many years. Bro. Swaringen, with his band of faithful helpers, is doing a fine work there. May the Lord continue to greatly prosper them.

Mt. Pleasant Circuit—

Mt. Pleasant.—Bro. S. M. Kellum reported twins for the cradle roll a few weeks back. The treasurer of the building committee reported all claims met with $6.18 in treasury. Cement steps have been built to all doors. The annex has two coats of paint on the outside, the Baraca and Philathea rooms have been hard oiled.

Our protracted meeting embraced the third Sunday and week following including Friday. Bro. Millaway did some of his old time revival preaching. Twenty joined the church by profession, two by certificate. Most of them were children from the S. S., which ought to encourage S. S. workers. S. A. Alexander.

Flat Rock.—I haven't forgotten that I was elected reporter, but in order to get my report in this week's paper I have to write my report on Sunday P. M. or evening in order to get it into Monday morning's mail. This gets into the hands of the editor Tuesday morning, and very often I do not have an opoprtunity to write then.

Mr. Cecil preached an interesting sermon on Noah today, and told us how he preached one hundred and twenty years and had only eight converts. Would it not be a curiosity to see a man preach half of that time now with no more visible results than that?

Miss Martha Dosier of the Guilford Co. S. S. Itinerary visited us today and announced a S. S. Rally at Summerfield M. E. church, Saturday, Sep. 9, at 10 A. M. We hope there will be a good attendance from Flat Rock, for we need more inspiration and "get-up" in the S S. here. It seems sometimes that nothing short of a miracle can arouse us to a sense of our duties and responsibilities.

Mrs. Minerva Highfill, one of the oldest members here, is critically ill.

Mrs. Robt. Wray worshipped with us today, after an illness of several weeks.

Mr. John Simpson and family have about recovered from a siege of measles.

Measles delayed our Children's Day services and now the whooping cough is among the children, till it seems that it will be delayed indefinitely.

Mr. W. J. Williams and family are soon to move into or near Blackstone, Va. We are sorry to give them up.

We are giving our fourth Sunday collections to the Children's Home. Amount today, $3.19.

We were glad to have worship with us today Mrs. Watlington of Greensboro, and two Misses Hanner and their brother from Ore Hill, N. C.

Our special meeting will be held the second Sunday in October with Rev. J. D. Williams as help. Reporter.

Burlington—

Last Sunday was "Children's Home Day" in our Sunday school. A class of the children from the Children's Home gave a concert on Saturday night and remained for the Sunday school on Sunday morning. They sang a few selections for the Sunday school and delighted all who heard them. Bro. Garrett introduced each one of them to the school, telling what county they represented and how long they had been in the Home. He also related a few facts regarding the workings of the Home.

The concert given by the class of children from the Children's Home was well attended, the church auditorium being about three-thirds full of our people and a good many people from other churches. The concert lasted for one hour, and was enjoyed immensely by those present. There would have been a much larger congregation had the concert been given on some other night of the week, as a good many of our people are busy with their work on Saturday night. The proceeds amounted to $37.00. We enjoyed this concert so well that we hope Bro. Garrett can arrange to give us another in the future.

Our pastor, Bro. Pritchard, delivered two very helpful sermons Sunday. The writer attended preaching services at Bellmont M. P. Church, and heard President Holmes preach. Bros. J. G. Rogers, T. T. Stafford and C. R. Way also attended, Bro. Rogers carried the children from the Home to Bellmont in his auto delivery truck Sunday morning where they gave a concert Sunday night.

Our revival meeting will begin on the third Sunday in September. The cottage prayer meetings are being continued, and our people are manifesting much interest in the approaching revival services. Rev. L. W. Gerringer, pastor of the Oak Ridge Circuit, will be the pulpit help.

The Christian Endeavor Society of our church will have their annual picnic next Saturday, Sept. 2nd. The two other C. E. societies of our town will join our society in a union picnic, which we believe will be a splendid occasion for our young people to associate with members of other churches.

Next Sunday being the First Sunday, we will have our regular monthly communion service, and opportunity will be given to persons desiring to unite with our church. We are expecting a good Sunday school and preaching services.

Saxapahaw Circuit—

Concord Church.—We commenced our special meeting here the first Sunday in August. Bro. Pike was our pulpit help and did all the preaching after Monday morning, and did it well. He at one time had been pastor here and we were glad to have him. There were about 25 conversions, ten joined the church, and I think six or seven more will join. I will tell about this later.

Concord has just put in a new bell. Has a good S. S. and we think on the road to better days.

Salem Church.—Our meeting commenced here the second Sunday. Bro. Millaway did all the preaching till close of meeting. We all enjoyed his preaching. There were 13 conversions, eight joined the church—M. P. church. One gave name to join M. E. South and one or more will join the Friends. This is a good strong church, with strong leadership.

Orange Chapel.—Our meeting commenced here the third Sunday. Bro. Bowman came Monday and did all the preaching till close of meeting. He was former pastor on this work and the people were glad to see him and hear his preaching. We enjoyed his work. There were about 20 conversions; 9 have joined the church. We think this church in the best condition for some years. There are many indications of improvement, we think, at this church. They have paid more, perhaps, to pastor to date than any year in past.

I am truly thankful to those brethren who have helped me in my meetings and to the Lord who has so wonderfully blessed us.

H. S. B. Thompson, Pastor.

Randleman Circuit—

Bethany.—We held our Children's Day service at eleven o'clock the second Sunday in August. The children all acted their parts well. We are proud of our children at Bethany. We only trust that when the time comes they will carry on the church work and have greater success and do more for the Master than the older people have done.

We had the good fortune to have Prof. Hamilton of Greensboro to conduct the music during the day. Prof. Hamilton is a great singer. We have enjoyed having him with us while he has been teaching a singing school here. He has helped the class very much.

We were glad to have with us Rev. D. A. Braswell during our protracted meeting which began in the afternoon of the second Sunday. While there were only two conversions during the meeting the church was greatly revived. Bro. Braswell certainly gave up some soul-stirring and arousing gospel messages. We enjoyed hearing him in the pulpit and in having him with us in our homes. We gladly welcome him back any time it may be convenient for him to come.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment here yesterday afternoon. Our Sunday school and preaching was not attended like we want to see it because of the absence of so many to attend the meeting at Bethlehem. We are getting along very well, but we want to see more interest in the Sunday school.

Orange Circuit—

Union Grove.—Our special meeting began Aug. 13. Rev. Geo. Hunt, an ex-pastor 45 years ago, was with us. Very few of congregation of then, were here now, But those who were, were glad to see and hear him. We all enjoyed having him; it is a blessing to meet and be with God's servants who have borne the heat and toil of years and aare now nearing their journey's end.

On Monday just after the noon hour our third quarterly conference convened, and we were glad to notice only one member from our church absent. Chestnut Ridge's was represented by a few. Efland refuses to attend conference at Union Grove, or has for last times it has met with us. Mr. J. S. Pender, delegate to Conference, Mr. G. T. Crutchfield alternate. Pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, made some helpful suggestions if carried out. We need not expect God's cause to flourish if we, his laborers, do not put any effort in the work.

The meeting was rained out on Tuesday. Wednesday Rev. C. C. Alexander, M. E. pastor of Orange church, was with us, and preached in the P. M. Services continued until Friday and the church was helped. We did not have the revival we wanted and needed, but we had a good meeting. Susie Lashley and May Snipes joined the church. We were sorry to see Bro. Hunt leave but trust he may be spared to be with us again.

Our regular service on the third Sunday was in the P. M. on account of the burial of a former S. S. scholar, Dee Neville, at Bethel Baptist church. Dee was about 21, only sick a few days. He had obeyed the command Ecc. 12:1 and we trust all is well with him.

We are preparing for the Children's Day exercises third Sabbath in Sep. We have had a very interesting S. S.

Orange Circuit—

Union Grove.—We had a good meeting at this point. The rain prevented services one day, but had good congregations all the other days of the week. Rev. G. E. Hunt, who was pastor when the present building was erected, was my engaged help, and preached to the edification and pleasure of the people, some of whom remember when he was pastor.

Nine professed conversion, two joined the church. Meeting closed with communion which seemed to be much enjoyed.

Am indebted to Bro. Alexander of M. E., South, for one sermon.

Efland.—The meeting at Efland was not what we prayed and hoped for, but am sure much good was done.

I agree with Bro. Swaringen that we do not plan to give time enough, though the plan was not the fault this time but the carrying out. The pastor had planned to give two weeks, but Bro. Braswell, who labored faithfully and acceptably for eight days, felt compelled to leave and we thought best to close.

Received two members by certificate yesterday.

We are looking forward with great hope to the meeting at Chestnut Ridge in September. Rev. Paul S. Kennett is to preach the third Sunday. Am planning to follow this with a series of cottage prayer meetings and other services until Bro. Bethea arrives, when he will be given the leadership.

We are hoping for at least three main results, the strengtheneing of believers, reclaiming backsliders, and saving the unsaved.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

DENTON.

I have been shut in almost all the summer with rheumatism, yet the work of the church has been going on very well. Nearly all appointments have been filled and the S. S. and prayer meeting have been doing good work. We expect to begin our special meeting on Thursday night after third Sunday in September, with Rev. W. D. Reed as pulpit help.

School opens Sept. 4. The outlook is good and we are expecting school to be as large as usual although I have been unable to look after it this summer as I intended. I do not think rheumatism will interfere with my work in the school room.

For about two weeks I have been taking an Osteopath treatment under Dr. Baxter of High Point and have improved from the beginning. I hope to be entirely well soon.

We will not begin to rebuild our church before next summer. All money received on the building fund has been deposited in the bank on interest. We have a good place to worship in the auditorium of school building and wish to have most of the money in the bank before we begin to build. We certainly appreciate the responses to our appeal. Any others wishing to help will send money or pledges to the undersigned and they will be properly cared for. G. L. Reynolds.

Denton, N. C., Aug. 25. 1916.

Pinnacle Church.—We had our special meeting the fourth week in July. Our pastor, Rev. Edw. Suits, did all the preaching himself and he certainly preached well. Preaching seemed not a task, as all he had to do was to deliver the gospel messages that God gave him. We had a glorious meeting; the church was greatly revived, several were converted, and several that had grown cold were brought back to Christ. We feel that Bro. Suits did his whole duty and we feel that our meeting truly was a success.

Our Sunday school is growing in interest. We have a good Sunday school; average seventy. We are glad to see so many bright faces on Sunday morning entering the church. We had our Sunday school convention the fifth Saturday in July at Chestnut Grove. Our Supt., Mr. Clarence Jones, delivered a most interesting address on Sunday schools.

Bro. Suits is holding the special meeting at Mt. Zion this week. We hope to have a glorious meeting. With best wishes for the Herald, A Friend.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

Since the last Postal Card appeared many things of interest to us have occurred. Chief among these is our—

Hebron Meeting.

This began on the third Sunday in this month with two sermons by the pastor. On Monday morning Rev. J. D. Williams came to our assistance and did all the preaching until the close of the meeting. At the morning service on Monday 13 young people were converted. This forcibly reminded us of a scene, at Hebron, more than 20 years ago when 10 young people were converted at the Monday morning service of a meeting being held at that time. A number of those who were converted at our meeting this year are the children of those who were converted at the meeting more than 20 years ago. The meeting closed on Thursday afternoon. Seventeen persons were received into the church. The congregation was good throughout the meeting and the church was graciously revived. Bro. Williams has our thanks for his good sermons and faithful work among us as has Bro. T. O. Pender and Bro. Holt who helped in the song services.

Since the last Postal Card appeared the Baraca class entertained the Senior Philathea and the Girls Philathea classes on the church lawn. Some 100 persons were present. Delicious ice cream and cake were served and inspiring songs sung. The evening was a pleasaant one and the Baracas were pronounced splendid entertainers.

Mrs. Cates of the Senior Philathea class entertained the class at her home, one afternoon and the ladies report a pleasant time with praise of the refreshments served.

Dr. McCulloch was with us the second Sunday and gave us his address on The Founders of the M. P. Church. We wish to see this address in print, preferably in pamphlet form.

Our Sunday school is to picnic at Robert Scott's farm next Saturday. We haven't the largest S. S. in the conference; but we doubt whether any other S. S. in the conference has had a better average attendance through the summer months, in proportion to the enrollment, than we have had.

We are now looking forward to our Mebane meeting with earnest prayers and great expectations. The Lord will not disappoint us—not if we, all of us, or anything like all of us, do our part.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference.

This is to be held at Mebane on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in October at 3:00 o'clock P. M. This conference is yet some time off and we are giving this timely notice in order that we may work up to it and have good reports. Coming as nearly closing up the year's work as we can. It is not seemly to have to make a heroic effort right at the last of the year. The following we clipped from the September Ladies' Home Journal. We believe it worthy of space in our Church paper:

"Paying Up to the Church.

"The eternal pathos of raising money to keep churches going goes on apace. The poor pastor, himself generally underpaid, and his faithful vestry go on beating up the highways and byways to get people to do something which they ought to do anyway. Scarcely any member of a church who belongs to a private club would dare to omit paying his dues without the certainty of being expelled. Yet the same man goes on shirking his church obligation with blissful serenity, year in and year out. And yet if there is any obligation for a man as a matter of common honor and decency to pay his club dues, his responsibility with regard to his church is certainly greater. A large number of sincere people look upon the church as being a purely spiritual affair, a house not built by hands. So it is. But a spiritual affair, in this world at least, has to be maintained. One might as well say that because the body is the temple of the Holy Ghost it should not wear clothes!

"It takes money to run a church. The pastor has to work hard. He is entitled to three good meals a day, a good bed to sleep in and the privilege of raising a family. He is entitled to more than this: to the sources of intellectual stimulus and inspiration. There is, besides, the necessary machinery to every church. It should have beauty, for beauty is a gift of God. It should conform in its physical aspects to modern requirements. The church should not be constantly harrassed for the want of necessaries common to any well-conducted business. It ought to be recognized that the running of a church is a matter of business—the most important business we have, indeed, since it is the only one that extends beyond this world into the next. This being so, why should not our churches be put on a business basis? Why cannot every church member accustom himself to think that he must pay his church dues just as regularly as he pays the dues of his club? Our gas bills come once a month: why not our church dues? The churches are entitled to a little business consideration at the hands of business men."

Lebanon Circuit—

Lebanon Church.—Third quarterly conference was held last Saturday at Lebanon church at 2 o'clock. A fairly good attendance. All business was transacted. Mr. Walter Burton, of Pleasant Grove church, was elected delegate to Annual Conference and Mr Crum Montgomery, of Lebanon church, alternate.

We are glad to be able to report that Mrs. R. C. Stubbins is much improved since last week's report.

Mr and Mrs. Jap Montgomery recently made a trip in their car to Raeford, in Hoke County, and visited relatives.

Miss Rose Vestal has returned from Pinnacle where she spent her vacation.

Mrs. Victor P. Hammer, and little daughter, Charlotte Amanda, of Washington, D. C., are visiting in the community.

We listened to a powerful sermon by our pastor, Rev. Mr. Stubbins, last Sunday night. The scripture reading and text was taken from the thirty-third chapter of Ezekiel. Oh that the hand of the Lord may be upon is, and that many who are now dead in trespasses and sins may be resurrected into a new life—the Christian life.

Mrs. J. W. Thacker. Rep.

High Point, N. C., Aug. 29. 1916.

Anderson Circuit—

Easley.—Our special meeting at this place came to a close last night. Bro. Lamar began his meeting on August the twentieth; from the very beginning the congregations were good, and they continued to increase until at times the church would not hold them.

It would be very difficult for one to describe Bro. Lamar's preaching. I suppose the word extremely enthusiastic might meet the case; over and over again he drove the great gospel facts home to the heart of his hearers; he seemed not to leave one stone unturned and in a determined effort to fix these facts in the hearts of his people; we hope the results will be lasting ones. Five additions were made to the church, Mr. and Mrs. James League, Mrs. C. M. Ellison, and Misses Ethel and Maude LaBoon. The song services during the meeting were conducted by Prof. R. L. Milam, of Atlanta, Georgia. A beautiful musical program was rendered at each service by Mr. Milam. Miss Bessie Mauldin of Williamstown was present and added much to the excellent song service.

The Teachers' Bible Training class met at its usual time last week. Rev. Mr. Mullikin was in charge of the meeting which was carried out in such smoothness and attractive power.

Mrs. Frank Samnons and Miss Eva Samnons of Greenville, S. C., spent last week with squire H. A. Foster and family.

Mr. R. M. Smith of Anderson, S. C., spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. Sallie A. Smith, and attended the meeting. Reporter.

August 29, 1916.

Midland Circuit—

Our special meeting began at Love's Grove Friday night before the second Sunday in August. Our congregations were good all through the meeting and there was great interest in the meeting from beginning to the end of the meeting. There were many conversions and fifty-four were received into church, fifty joining Love's Grove and four going to other churches. Bro. Hethcox was our pulpit help, and he preached some grand gospel sermons that seemed to grasp hold of the unsaved and brought many into the fold of the Master. It is said this was the greatest revival in the history of the church. Our singing was good. Bro. Osborne had just finished a singing school before the meeting began. Bro. Osborne is a fine musician and knows how to teach people to sing.

Our special meeting began at Mill Grove Saturday night before the third Sunday in August. We had a good meeting at Mill Grove. Bro. Lowdermilk was our pulpit help. Our people enjoyed his preaching very much; he surely did give some strong sermons which seemed to have great power. There were many conversions. Many who had grown cold and had wandered away from the fold were brought back, and there was great rejoicing, not only in heaven, but among friends who loved them. Our church was greatly revived and six persons united with the church.

We held our third quarterly conference at Mill Grove Saturday evening before the third Sunday. Our churches were well represented; had a good conference; everything seems to be moving along fine in our churches. Bro. M. C. Garmon was elected delegate to conference.

Concord Church—

Our pastor preached an excellent sermon on "The Bible" Sunday morning.

Sorry to say that on account of throat trouble he was not able to preach at night. Pray for his recovery that he will be able to fill the pulpit next Sunday.

The Bible training class is doing well, although we have only a few enrolled. We are looking for great success from this class.

The third quarterly conference will be held next Saturday night at this place; hope to have a large crowd out.

Our S. S. attendance still small, only 54 present.

Christians, pray for us, that the Lord may stay the hand of affliction of our children, so they can soon be with us again.

Reporter.

Reidsville—

The third quarterly conference of this charge will convene at Bethany next Monday at 1:30 P. M. A good attendance is much desired by the pastor ,

E. G. Lowdermilk.

Alamance Circuit—

Bethel.—Our special meeting began the third Sunday in August and closed the following Thursday. Bro. Ledbetter preached every day except on Wednesday, when we were especially favored by having Pres. Holmes with us to preach two of his able sermons. The pastor was fortunate in securing Prof. A. M. Fentriess to take charge of the music during the meeting. We appreciate his work among us and hope that he may come our way again. The meeting resulted in seven conversions, all of which were Sunday school pupils. Although the meeting was not what we hoped for, we trust much good was accomplished.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society had a call meeting at noon Tuesday. It was a very encouraging meeting. Mrs. W. R. Foust and Miss Jessie Stockard were received as members. We are glad to welcome them in our society. Upon the resignation of the corresponding secretary and treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Foust was elected treasurer and Mrs. W. R. Foust corresponding secretary. As Mrs. W. A. Foust was at this time Record agent, this office was given to Mrs. Robt. Thompson.

The next meeting will be held the fourth Sunday in Sept. at the home of Mrs. W. A. Foust. Let every member that can do so attend and help make the meeting a success. Tacy J. Woody, Reporter.

A COUNTRY PASTOR'S CREED.

I believe in a Church which serves the community.

I believe in a Church which enjoys—not just endures—religion.

I believe in a Church with a job for every member and every member always on the job.

I believe in a Church which is the brightest, most attractive spot in the entire community.

I believe in a Church which carefully conserves the spiritual welfare of its boys and girls.

I believe in a Church which makes adequate provision for the social and recreational life of its young folks.

I believe in a church which uses its pastor, not as a pack horse to carry the loads, but as a general to direct a well-planned campaign.

I believe in a Church which does not expect the support of a community unless it is doing something really worth while for the uplift of the community.

I believe in a Church which is not a hothouse for dyspeptic Chrihtians, but a well-organized army (with ambulance corps if necessary) to conquer the community for Christ.

I believe in a Church which is not afraid to advertise its wares. Energetic business men always advertise. The Church is conducting the biggest business on the globe. Therefore advertise.

I believe in a Church which is so busy about its great task of cheering the faint and raising the fallen that it has no time for backbiting, gossip, neighborhood quarreling, and jealousy.—E. C. Hickman, in Meth. Adv. Journal.

WHY PARENTS SHOULD ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

BY EZDA DEVINEY.

(Read at Tabernacle Circuit Young People's Rally.)

To be the best citizen a man must be a Christian, and to be the best Christian, this part of his training must not have been neglected in childhood.

This brings us to appreciate two things in their relation to each other, for they make or break a life: first, the home; second, the church with its Sunday school. The biggest thing about a home is the people who live there and especially the parents. For it is the parents who determine whether it shall be a real home or only a place in which to stay. It is in the home that the parents begin training their children in their own footsteps; for whether they choose or not, their children will imitate them. The Sunday school has long ago proven the best place in which to train boys and girls for useful Christian lives. But who is to train these same boys and girls, encourage and lead them in the Sunday school if not the parents? It is much easier for the child if the parents say on Sunday morning, "Come, let us go to Sunday school," instead of sending the child off alone.

There are many other reasons why parents should attend Sunday school, chief among which, because the parents themselves need the wholesome, broadening influence that comes from mingling with the best of their neighbors in this informal way, and the close study of the Bible that the Sunday school lessons afford. They need some such influence to sweeten their daily lives. Then too, by attending Sunday school the parents will be setting a good example, not only for their own children, but for all the children and young people of the community as well. It is so hard to keep the boys in Sunday school, especially after they leave the primary departments, and do you know why? It is because boys want to do what men do, and men, a large majority of them, do not go to S. S. If a father says on Sunday morning, "Son, you must go to Sunday school; that's the best place to spend Sunday mornings." And then if that father stays at home to read the daily paper, what do you suppose "son" thinks? Why, he either thinks that his father, his hero, has told a falsehood or he longs for the time to come when he too can do just as he pleases on Sunday mornings.

"Then if the parents are to do their best for their children, they must also do their best for the children of the community. This they cannot do without a channel or channels through which to come into vital contact with other children and parents and all others who make up the community population. Just here is where the community Sunday school comes in. The parents need it and it needs them. Neither can be what they should be without the other, both need to be put on their full capacity of living and serving and they must be together to do so."

"Everybody should be in co-operation with the Father of all living, matching him in his constant effort to produce the very finest types of life possible, so that all will get what is coming at all the stations on life and will live to be old and well ripened." When the parents of every community are found leading in the Sunday schools, this will be a big step toward that perfect co-operation.

PAIR-HAWKINS.—At Hawkins Chapel Church, Littleton circuit, on August 27th at 5 P. M. Brother Ezra B. Pair and Miss Hilda M. Hawkins were united in marriage. The great popularity of these excellent young people brought together a crowd that the church could scarcely accommodate. These are both loyal members of Hawkins Chapel and are held in high esteen for their many virtues.

BIRTHDAY DINNER SURPRISE. . .

When Robt. S. Thompson's children, relatives and friends met at his home Aug. 18, 1916, to celebrate his and his twin sister, Lizzie J. Thompson Cooper's 57th birthday, we had a real good time and the day was spent pleasantly. The long table was simply loaded with good things to eat, and all seemed to enjoy themselves to the fullest extent. There were present 66; five of his children and all of his grandchildren, seven in number, were there, and many other friends and relatives. We regretted very much that two of his sons, Foust and Colon, could not be there. Colon is in North Dakota and of course could not come, and Foust was kept away by home duties. It was a surprise to papa and Aunt Lizzie both, which did us so much good as they had said when surprising other people, that they knew they could not be fooled that way. We trust that our loving Savior may spare them many more birthdays and that every year as they grow older they may grow closer to Him, so that their last years here may be their happiest and brightest.

We were pained to learn that Miss Massey who has been one of the faithful Sunday egg contributors passed quietly to her reward a few days ago. She was a woman filled with good deeds.

Good news to all who have been anxious about our boys and girls who wish to continue their studies after leaving the Children's Home.

Dr. W. A. Harper, president Elon College, who is the friend of young people, has very kindly offered to give free tuition in the literary department of that college to any of our boys and girls who come recommended by the superintendent. This offer is the same as is made to the children of his own orphanage.

We feel very grateful to him and his institution for this offer and we hope to have boys and girls to send.

There is not a college in the state with a better Christian influence than Elon College. H. A. Garrett.

CRABB.

James Lafayette Crabb was born in Halifax Co. August 1, 1859; he departed this life June 21, 1916. His age is 59 years, 10 months and 20 days. He is survived by his wife and loved companion of more than a quarter of a century, also by two sisters, Mrs. John D. Shaw, whose home is in Halifax Co., and Mrs. Virginia Wood of Norfolk. His parents and one sister have preceded him to the spirit world.

The early life of Bro. Crabb was spent in the county of his birth. In 1888 he came to Vance Co. to live and with the exception of one brief period his adopted county was his home till his death. In 1889 Bro. Crabb was married to Miss Lula Jane Overton with whom he lived in great happiness the remainder of his earthly life. There are no children to bless the union.

Bro. Crabb was a man with many friends and few enemies. His absolute uprightness in business; his sincere and evident purpose to do right by his fellow man in every particular; his unselfishness; the purity of his personal life; his industry; the genuineness of his religion—these are some of the traits that won for him the respect and esteem of those among whom he lived.

The religious life of Bro. Crabb dates back to his early days. Those who knew him best bear testimony to the genuineness of his Christian character and the beauty of his Christian life. He first united with the Baptist church, and we have no doubt he was true there to his church vows. For ten or more years he was a faithful member of the Henderson Methodist Protestant Church. When he was in reach of the church and able to attend the services he was found regularly in his pew and was always a devout worshiper. His presence here will be sadly missed.

Bro. Crabb was ill for several months but bore his sickness with Christian fortitude. He never complained of his fate; if he must go, he would be entirely submissive. This, I am sure, was his attitude. He told his faithful wife and his pastor that the way was clear and that he had no fears. Like the Psalmist he could say, Thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. His death was a triumph of Christian faith and Christian living. Our hearts go out in deep sympathy to the bereaved widow and sisters.

The funeral service was held in the Henderson church by the writer, after which the body was laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery. S. W. Taylor.

WHAT ABOUT IT?

We have seen several articles in the Herald this summer. We would like to ask some questions.

We notice in the S. S. lesson, Aug. 27, Paul's experience. He was testifying from house to house. How many of our ministers are doing that as they are visiting in our homes? We would enjoy it.

It is such a pleasure to have as a guest a person who is filled with the Holy Spirit, and when He is there it will show.

My people have been lost sheep; their shepherds have caused them to go astray. Jer. 50: 6. Study to shew theyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. 2 Tim. 2: 15.

It seems sometimes as if some are more anxious to please the world, or the majority, than to please God. That may bring numbers in the church but it is not causing their souls to be saved. May God open our eyes to see the truth as it is, is the prayer of an M. P. Mother.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT LIQUOR.

Mr. F. L. Blair, of Pittsburg, Pa., has recently issued for general distribution a leaflet containing excerpts from a speech delivered by Clinton N. Howard at the Columbus convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America. The quotations include the following:

"A cancer in human society, eating out its vitals and threatening its destruction," said Abraham Lincoln, and he was right.

"A public, permanent and ubiquitous agency of degradation," said Cardinal Manning, and he was right.

"More destructive than war, pestilence and famine," said Wm. E. Gladstone, and he was right.

"Poisoner's general, driving men to hell like sheep," said John Wesley, and he was right.

"The devil in solution," said Sir Wilfred Lawson, and he was right.

"The most ruinous and degrading of all human pursuits," said William McKinley, and he was right.

"Distilled damnation," said Robert Hall, and he was right.

"The most criminal and artistic method of assassination ever invented by the bravos of any age or nation," said John Ruskin, and he was right.

"A business that tends to lawlessness on the part of the one who conducts it, and to criminality on the part of those who patronize it," said Theodore Roosevelt, and he was right.

"That damned stuff called alcohol," said Robert G. Ingersoll, and he was right.

"A hell-perpetuator, hell-propagator and hell-populator," said Henry Ostrom, and he was right.

"The most prolific hot-beds of anarchy, vile politics, profane ribaldry and unspeakable sensuality," said Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst, and he was right.

A HARVEST RESCUE.

'Twas harvest-time at Rosedale Farm;
The wheat was ripe, the sun was warm.

While o'er the fields the reaper wound,
The waving wheat was mowed and bound.

And then a pair of whirring wings
Flew up before the great steel things

That cut the graceful, waving wheat
And tied it up in bundles neat.

Billy and Ned ran in between
The standing wheat and the big machine;

Ah, yes, 'twas true—just as they guessed!
"Stop! stop! We've found a partridge nest!"

So that is why the little square
Of wheat stands 'mid the stubble there.

And that is why the whirring wings
Flew back to warm the precious things—

The dozen tiny chicks that rest
All safely 'neath the mother-breast,

While Bob-White calls, in proud refrain,
His name from fields of garnered grain.

BENT NAILS.

Bob Mason and his uncle came down from the city on the same car one evening. "I saved my nickel," said Bob with a chuckle as they walked home together.

"So I noticed," was the grave reply.

"Well, I had it in my hand; if the conductor had asked me for it I should have given it to him," said Bob, rather sulkily. "I don't see why I was to blame."

"Because you cheated," answered his uncle. "Just before the conductor got to you he turned to help someone off. You moved up where he had collected fares, and appeared to be deeply engaged in your paper. I know that you did not say in so many words, 'I've paid my fare,' but you looked it as hard as you could, and he apparently understood it so. It was cheating as I look at it."

"Oh, well," said Bob, carelessly, "it was only a nickel, anyway; the B. R. T. will never know the difference."

"But you will, my boy. Someone wisely bids us to call nothing small in a world when a mud creek swells into an Amazon, and the stealing of a penny may end on the scaffold.

"I remember when I was about your age," his uncle continued, "I was helping a carpenter about a piece of work he was doing for my father. I had made a little mistake and was trying to pull out a nail.

"'Draw it straight; don't bend it,' he cautioned.

"'Why, what harm would it do? I could straighten it, couldn't I?' I asked.

"'Possibly, but it would never be as strong. You will find it very apt to bend again, and you would also find it hard to drive it true.'

"It is pretty much so with us; if we yield to temptation in any way today, we shall find we have weakened ourselves, and it will be harder to hold true tomorrow.

"Don't deceive yourself by thinking it is only a little thing, too small to make any difference. I once saw a large and seemingly strong stalwart telegraph pole come suddenly crashing down without any warning or visible cause. But investigation showed that wood-peckers had cut a nest there where the pole broke.

"So, little sins, as we mistakingly call them, eat into our lives and weaken us. Like the bent nail, we are liable to break at that place any time. The only sure way to keep in the right path is never to take the first step out. Remember that, my boy."

"I will," replied Bob gravely.—Christian Intelligencer.

MADELINE'S MOOD.

She was not an attractive girl in any way and she knew it. She was restless and cross and unhappy, and growing more unattractive in looks and manner as she became older. Then an aunt, visiting at her home after a long residence in a distant city, sized up the situation, and out of pity for both the girl and everybody with whom she came in contact, undertook to prescribe the sure cure.

"Madeline, do you want to be a torment to yourself and everybody about you all of your life?" was the blunt and astonishing question she put to her niece one day.

"No, of course not," was the prompt and half-frightened reply from the astonished girl.

"You'd rather be sweet and lovely and happy?" came the next question. And it brought a sincere affirmative this time. The aunt handed her a folded paper, and smiled as she said very kindly now, "Follow this magic prescription and you will be what you want to be."

And she was gone.

Madeline read: "Every time you want to frown, smile. Every time a cross thought comes, think a pleasant one. Every time something nice is done for you, do something nicer for some one else."

For a few moments she was crosser than ever. Then common sense saved the day. She tried the cure—honestly, sincerely, prayerfully; and to her own lifelong joy, to say nothing of everybody else's, there was soon no happier, more attractive, more lovable girl in the place than she.—Herald and Presbyter.

THE BEST GIFT FOR MOTHER.

"What'll it be?" shouted all the children at once, and then came a volley of suggestions for mother's birthday present.

"Let's get her a new dress!"

"No, make it a nice purse!"

"But she wants a new set of dishes!"

"Now all of you keep quiet for a while," said Brother Bob, coming to the rescue, "or I'll have to get up and read the riot act. It's no use deciding what we'll get until we know how much money we'll have to spend. But it's got to be something nice, so we might as well get busy now to make some money."

"I've got nine cents in my bank," chimed in little Toodles, who meant to have a share in mother's birthday present.

"And I can make a good deal if I take a paper route," suggested Dick, the energetic lad of fourteen, who was beginning to know the value of money.

"How much would we need to get a real nice present?" asked Lucy, the oldest girl.

Bob knitted his brow and looked thoughtful for a while.

"Well, I think we ought to be able to raise five dollars amongst the lot of us if we all turn in and work extra hard. I'm sure mother deserves it."

"She sure does!" echoed Dick, who was not much of a fellow to talk about his devotion to his mother, but who showed it in a good many other ways.

"Well, if we could count on that amount," went on Bob, "we'd be all right. What would you say to a nice silk dress?"

A chorus of remarks followed, but finally Lucy managed to get a hearing.

"I think that's the best, for it would be for her very own self, and, dear knows, she needs it real badly. We can get enough silk for five dollars, and I'll help her make it up."

"All in favor of a silk dress?" asked Bob, and the motion passed unanimously.

Then began a mad scurry to raise the necessary funds, for the birthday was only a week distant, and five dollars was a big sum for the Ormsby children to amass among themselves. Toodles contributed her nine cents without any sense of sacrifice; Dick worked early and late at his paper route with very good results, Lucy spent most of her time doing fancy work which she hoped to sell, as well as the eggs which she was allowed to dispose of every week; while Bob saved all he could from his week's pay, for he worked in a lawyer's office. Every one did his or her best, but the end of the week came in sight before the five dollars was raised.

"We'l have to work harder or we won't make it," said Dick with a sigh when he came in tired out from his paper route. "I see where I'll have to get a job for all day Saturday if I'm going to come up to scratch."

"And I'll have to peg away a good deal harder at my sewing if I'm going to finish that center-piece to sell this week," said Lucy.

"Don't be discouraged, youngsters," encouraged Bob, "we'll make the grade if we all pull together."

Everything would have been well if Uncle John and his family had not chosen that particular week to pay them a visit. Not that the children did not welcome their coming, but it meant more work for mother, who had about all she could manage as it was. And, worst of all, they could not spare any time to help her.

"I'm very sorry I can't help you today," stammered Lucy, "but there's something that has to be done before I can do another thing," and away she flew upstairs to her fancy work.

"It's hard luck I can't stick around and lend a hand, mother," said Dick, reluctantly, "but I've got a job for the whole day."

Mother said nothing, but Father Ormsby sized up the situatioon and had something to say about it. He gathered the children around him that night.

"Seems to me you've all left mother in the lurch today," he began. "It's something unusual for you to do that; what's the trouble?"

"Well, you see," explained Lucy, "we all had to work to earn enough money to buy her birthday present. We want to get her something nice that she'll value."

"Yes, I understand," said father kindly, "but, after all, what do you think mother would value most? Have you forgotten what Mr. Mills said in his sermon last week when he spoke to the boys and girls about getting ready for Mothers' Day next Sunday?"

"He said quite a lot about 'loving service,' " said Dick, who always listened attentively to what the minister had to say.

"Yes, but what about it?"

"I think he said that loving service is the best gift a fellow can give to his mother."

"That's it, Dick," said father. "But have you and Lucy given the best gift, do you think?"

"I'm afraid not, father. We've been too busy thinking about our other gift."

"But it's not too late now to give her the best gift, is it, father?" questioned Lucy eagerly, for she was beginning to feel ashamed of having left her mother to do all the work and tire herself out.

"No, it is never too late while you have her here; but you know you won't always have her," said father, and left them alone to talk it over.

It was too late then to repair the damage, but they knew what they meant to do in future. When the beautiful silk dress was bought and presented to Mother Ormsby it did indeed please her, but not one quarter as much as the little note which was tucked into its soft folds. It read:

"Dearest Mother: This is only a part of our birthday gift to you. The best is yet to come, for it is loving service from us all."—Mabel E. Crews, in The Christian Guardian.

MISJUDGED.

Solomon Jessel kept "the shop" at Little Ashby—at least, the name above the many-paned windows was "Solomon Jessel," but gossips would tell you S'lina Jessel kept the shop and Solomon did the talking.

Selina did not complain; why should she? Solomon was long and limp and not much inclined to work when she married him twenty years since, and every one knows limpness and laziness is not cured by time.

Selina was a little woman, brisk and capable, with energy enough for both. Her temper might be raspy now and then, when business was dull and bad debts plentiful; then Solomon's long form and shiftless ways seemed more conspicuous, and he, realizing his uselessness, would further complicate matters by "tidying" the shop—a form of service in which he meant well, but failed to gain the appreciation his efforts deserved.

But there was one hour in the week when Selina Jessel abdicated in favor of her husband, and Solomon reigned supreme. This was before closing time on Saturday nights. Selina did not relinquish the reins of government until after the last village matron had made her weekly purchases. and had departed homeward; then were husbands and fathers who had been "minding house" free to wend their way to "Jessel's" in search of tobacco and any news their wives might have missed.

This was Solomon's chance; he could serve tobacco even better than his wife, and he was as good as a weekly paper for news Many a titbit of village gossip he carefully hoarded up for the entertainment of his customers on Saturday nights.

Solomon did not dispense his news recklessly—if only Bob Horton and Phil Stacey dropped in he had not much to say, but if the circle was completed by old Billy Tresise, Joe Fairweather, Thomas Peters and Mr. Gosworthy, the schoolmaster, Solomon's tongue was loosed, and for one short hour he felt he had found his vocation.

On a certain Saturday night just before Christmas, there was a bigger audience than usual at "Jessel's, for was not Joe Fairweather's brother Dick home from the war? And even Solomon's choicest items of intelligence fell flat when Dick was present to recount some of his experiences with the "Devons" in South Africa.

" 'Tis uncommon cold," grumbled a newcomer, a gaunt old man with a sour, wrinkled face.

"Come in and shut the door, 'tis warm enough inside," said Solomon, hospitably.

"I reckon Humphrey Deacon," said old Billy Tresise, "if you'd bin where Dick's bin, you wouldn't grumble about this 'ere bootiful sasyonable weather or anythin' else."

"He's had it warm enough, anyway," grunted Humphrey, doggedly buttoning his coat closer round him.

"Ay, we had it warm enough, as yoo say, too warm for some of the poor chaps," answered Dick, soberly, "what with the sun like a furnace, an' shot falling thick as hail—red-hot hail, too."

"I think I'll go an' have a chat with the missus, if she ain't too busy," said Humphrey, a suggestion to which Solomon cordially assented.

"Seems as if he'd never get over it," said Thomas Peter, the shoemaker, with a jerk of his thumb towards the door through which Humphrey had dissappeared.

"Over what? Oh, 'cut-and-run Deacon,' do'ee mean?" said Bob Hortop, with a grin.

"Hush, Bob, he'll hear you," said the schoolmaster reprovingly, and Bob took the correction meekly, for he hadn't left school long.

"What is the story," asked Joe, "I never rightly 'eard it."

Solomon Jessel, Billy Tresise and Thomas Peters opened their mouths to answer Joe's inquiry, and shut them again to give place to the schoolmaster, who told it in a few words. "Humphrey wasn't the crossgrained man he is now when he had a son to be proud of," he said. "Perhaps he set his heart too much on him; he was a fine young fellow when he joined the army, and looked fit to face anything; but 'tis no use to judge by appearance, for in his first fight the boy showed the white feather—ran, they say—and was driven back again by the sergeant. They christened him 'cut-and-run Deacon' after that, and made it so hot for him his life was a burden. He served his time, I believe, but there was no more fighting, and he had no other chance. As you know, Humphrey Deacon was a soldier once, a brave one too, I've heard, and when the miserable tale came to the village, Humphrey swore he'd never look at his son again—that is all, but I remember him a genial, happy-hearted man, and now—"

"What a jolly coward the fellow must 'a been," Bob broke out, "no wonder—"

"Don't be hard on him, Bob," said Dick, "you must face the bullets for the first time to find out what you're made of. I didn't run, an' I did my best, but as far as I could see it 'twasn't the loudest-talkin' men in camp that were bravest when the shells were burstin'—the bravest man I ever met we used to call 'quiet Jim.' He'd been a soldier, and joined again as a volunteer, when the war broke out—name o' Smith; there's lots o' Smiths in the army—'twas in one of our hottest fights; we had orders to storm a hill. Well, we got nearly to the top, and then we were met by a storm of bullets that told us it was time to stop—nothin' livin' could a' stood against it. We were willin' enough. One young fellow sprang ahead, and fell riddled with shot. We looked out for every bit of cover we could find, and lay as still as possible—an' that's harder work an' more tryin' than fighting. If we showed as much as a hand it was shot through, and to rise meant death.

"As we lay hour after hour the sun baked us, an' the ants swarmed over us till we were nearly mazed. The word went round, 'The guns were comin' up.' Could we hold out? Yes, if we had water. The thirst was awful, and our waterbottles were empty. There was plenty o' water at the foot o' the hill, but who would fetch it? Quiet Jim. He crawled out o' the ranks and down the kopje—sometimes hidin' sometimes runnin' like the wind. We thought 'twas all up with 'im, for when the Boers saw one of our lot was movin' they shot for all they were worth, till the hill seemed on fire. I gave him up then, and I think I must 'a dozed off, for I woke from a sort o' dream o' bein' a kid again, and paddlin' in the stream for minnie—to find 'Quiet Jim' flat on his stomach by my side, holding a waterbottle to my mouth. Yes, Jim had brought back as many waterbottles as he could manage, but he was a sight to see; 'only scratches' he said they were, when we crouched behind the biggest stone and bound him up a bit.

"Well, after that we were lying side by side, Jim an' me, listenin' for the guns that were so long in comin, when Jim whispered to me to look at the poor boy that I told you rushed ahead of us in the mornin'. We all thought he was dead, but Jim had been watchin' him, an' noticed him move his hand an' then his head a little—so had the Boers, an' a shot or two nearly struck him as he lay.

"Jim's face flushed, an' his eyes got steady-like. 'He was such a bright young chap,' he said, an' he pushes a packet into my hand. 'Take care of it,' he says, an' away he slipped right across the line o' fire. How he did it I do not know—he got to the wounded lad, an' pulled, an' dragged, an' carried him back to our lines. But just as he reached us he fell in a heap with a bullet clean through his lungs, an' never heard the cheer we gave when our big guns opened fire, an' our waitin' time was over; you may fancy we thought o' 'quiet Jim' when the bugle sounded for the charge."

All were interested in the story, and they crowded round to look at the photographs Dick took from his pocket. One was a boyish soldier with a gentle but irresolute face; the other, the same grown manlier, and with a look of quiet power in his steady eyes and firm mouth.

" 'Tis written on 'em 'For father,' whoever he may be, but I don't s'pose he'd mind your seeing 'em," said Dick who handed them in turn to Bob Horton and Phil Stacey, while the older men carefully adjusted their spectacles.

"He was a plucky one, anyhow," said Phil.

"Why, 'tis like this 'ere, in my opinion," cried Bob the reckless, "once a coward always a coward!"

"A fool's lie, I tell 'ee!" screamed a voice shrill with passion, as a long, thin hand snatched the portraits from Phil's hand; " 'tis my son—my Jim—the bravest of them all—dead!" And old Humphrey Deacon sank into a chair, motionless and half-unconscious.

"Humphrey, my dear old friend," said the schoolmaster soothingly.

"You know, Humphrey, it's what we must all come to," philosophically murmured Billy Tresisa, who did a little in the undertaking way.

"He died a hero instead of living a—" began Thomas Peters, but thought better of it.

"Jim was an uncommon good-hearted boy," said Solomon, with inspiration; but Bob and Phil and Joe said nothing, for they had lumps in their throats, and couldn't.

"Oh, Mrs. Jessel, will 'ee please make 'em understand? I can't—they're all talkin' to once an' won't listen," said Dick, desperately; whereupon, after hearing his hurried explanation, Selina swooped down on the mournful assembly. With a wave of her hand she commanded attention, a glance disposed of Solomon. Thomas Peters retreated to the doorway, Billy Tresise to his usual perch on the grain barrel; as for the youngsters, no one noticed them.

"Why, Master Deacon, cheer up! There, let me lift yer head, you're so hasty, like all the men—'cept Solomon—you didn't hear half the news, an' the best half, too. 'Tis grand to hear Jim was so brave and good, but that would be ter'ble sorrowful if you were never to see him again—in this world. 'Shot through the lungs,' was in the cas'alty list, an' five other wounds as well, Dick says, but doctors are clever nowadays. Bless yer heart, they can patch a man up when he's all to pieces like, an' turn him out as well as ever, most—there, now you're better, an' you can understan' what I'm sayin'. Jim isn't dead—he was able to walk aboard the transport—he'll be home for the New Year, an' he's got the V. C.! Now, Solomon, stir round and put up the shutters, an' p'r'aps our friends'll come in an' have a bit o' supper with us—an' Dick'll tell us somethin' more about 'quiet Jim.' "—London Sunday-School Times.

DR. MARY STONE.

Shi Ma Lei does not sound like a familiar name to our American ears. But when we use the translation, Dr. Mary Stone, there are few who would not recognize a well-known name. This remarkable woman was recently elected president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of China and superintendent of the anti-opium department of the World Temperance Union. The first woman doctor in her native land, she has not only done medical and surgical work commanding the admiration of the most experienced professional men, but has led the consistent life of an earnest, active, progressive Christian woman.—Exchange.

—Sam Hill, millionaire son of the late Jim Hill, the Pacific railroad magnate, has gone to Vladivostok, to take charge of the traffic department of the Trans-Siberian railroad, for the Russian government.

God is counting on you.
What is the will of God about it?

Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St.,

—Grace Church pulpit, Greensboro, was filled last Sunday, morning and night, by our young Brother Paul S. Kennett, son of Rev. W. F. Kennett. He pleased and helped both congregations and showed that he has in him the making of a preacher. We are glad that he has heard the call and consecrated himself to the ministry. May he win many to righteousness to become stars in his crown of eternal rejoicing.

—Bro. T. A. Hunter expects his family home soon. They have spent the summer in Asheville.
